CHAP. II.

Heresies and Errors Published and Condemned in the Fourteenth Century.

The Sect of Fretels, or Fraticelli.

In this Century out in the Order of Saint Francis, a great Number of Libertines, who under a Pretence of leading a more retired and a more ſtrict Life, ſhook off the Yoke of Obedience, rebelled againſt the Church, and fell into extravagant Opinions. Some were called Fratres Bizochi, Spiritual Friars, or from their Poor Life Begards, Beguines; others were called Fratres Beſuchi, Spiritual Friars, or from their Poor Life Begards, Beguines; for though there were ſome difference between them, they had all very near the ſame Principles, and the ſame way of Living; inſomuch, that they are often confounded, or joined one with the other by the Authors of thoſe times. The Ringleaders of this Sect, were two Votaries of the Order of the Grey-Friars, Petrus Johannis, and Petrus de Foro-Compronio, who departed from Saint Francis's cloſer of Retirement, Leave to Live as Hermits, and to Practice the Diſcipline of the Primitive Church. They had many Followers, and there was scarce any Province of France, but the Literal Senſe of the Rule of Saint Francis, without any Gloſs, without Superiors, made a Sect of Volunteer Monks, Vagabonds, Libertines, without any Rule, without Subordination, who lived as they liſted, and made all their Perfection to conſiſt in a Voluntary Poverty. Pope Boniface VIII. having Condemned them, ordered the Inquiſitors to proceed againſt them as Heretics.

The Errors of Peter John Olivius.

About the ſame time, Petrus Johannes Olivi, or Olivæ, or Olivanus, a Grey-Friar of the Province of Narbon, made his Commentaries upon the Revelations, which ſtirred up Monſtrous Fancies in his Diſciples. He there Promiſes a new Church more perfect than that of Jeſus Chriſt, and even to that time: He brags of the Inſtitutions of Saint Francis, as an Evangelical Rule obſerved by JESUS CHRIST and the Apoſtles: He there foretells the Deſtruction of the Carnal Church, or Babylon, under the happy Influence of Saint Francis. This Book having been brought into Italy by a Grey-Friar, named de Bodicis was received as a Fifth Goſpel by the Fratres and the Begards. Some undertook upon the Grounds of this Book even to depoſe a Pope of this ſtrict Church. They made themſelves a peculiar General, and Superiors, built new Monaſteries, took up a ſtrait and cloſe Habit, continued to rail againſt the Church of Rome, and to maintain with obſtinacy the Errors, which they had drawn out of Peter Olivi; they added thereto, That the Sacraments of the Church were uſeleſs, becauſe thoſe which adminiſtred them, had no Power of Juriſdiction or Authority. John XXII. Condemned them, as we have obſerved, in the beginning of his Papacy, cried down the Commentary of Peter Olivi, and was at open War with them.

The Practices of the Spiritual Brethren.

The Begards and Beguines.

Many retired into Germany, where they were at quiet under the Protection of Lewis of Bavaria. They united themſelves there to the Begards and the Beguines. This was an Inſtitution, or a Sect of Men, and Women, who wore a Grey Habit, profeſſed to lead a Religious Life, without being tied up in Monaſteries, or Subject to Superiors, who believed themſelves arrived at the State of Perfection in this Life, who raiſed againſt Popes, againſt the Church, and made no account of the Sacraments, and the Practice of good Works. Their Errors were Condemned, and their Inſtitution abeliſhed in the Council of Vienna. It is pretended, that they were ſtiled by GERHARD SEGARELLI of Parma, who after having given all his Eſtate to thoſe Libertines, betook himſelf to Begging, and had naufter'd up a company of poor People, whom he had taught, that the Kingdom of the Son, who had governed with Wiſdom, being at an end, that of the Holy Ghoſt, which was a Kingdom of Love and Charity, had ſucceeded it, and that in this Kingdom all things ought to be in common, even the very Women. Dulcinus of Novaria, the Diſciple of Segarelli increaſed this Sect, and to render it more conſiderable, he taught, that the Church of Rome, her Prelates, and her Miniſters had loſt all their Authority, and that the Spiritual Congregation of his Sect, which was the true and Spiritual Congregation. The Doctrine ſpread by Dulcinus ſeeming dreadful to a great Number after him, was ſo upon by the Troops, which the Biſhop of Vercelli having drawn together, had ſeized, taken on Holy Thurſday in the Year 1308. with a Woman, whom he abuſed, naked, and conducted to Vercelli, where he was burned. Some of his Diſciples were alſo taken, and the reſt diſperſed.

Gerard Segarelli.

Dulcinus of Novaria.

Herman de Ponge-loup

There was moreover in the beginning of this Century, or rather at the cloſe of the preceding, one of Ferrara, named HERMAN de PONGE-LOUP, who was accuſed to have revived the ſhameful Doctrine of the Ancient Gnoſticks, and to have maintained, that it was not permitted to Chriſtians to exerciſe Magiſtracy. He died in Peace, but his Hereſie having been diſcover'd after his Death, Boniface VIII. ordered him to be dug up, and his Bones to be Burnt. It is ſaid, That the Diſciples of both theſe, made up the Sect of the Begards, and the Beguines; but there is more likelihood that it was formed by ſeveral Perſons, Men and Women, ſome of which by an ill governed Devotion, others out of a Spirit of Libertiniſm, were deſirous to live after a ſingular manner, and ſeparate in ſhew the Poverty of the Friars Mendicants, without being tied to Obedience, or to the obſervance of any particular Rule. It was impoſſible, that theſe ignorant People, and conſequently abandon'd to their own Will and Genius, ſhould continue long in that Purity of Doctrine, and Manners. The natural Pride of Men inclined them to eſteem themſelves better than others, and to blame the Prelates; and the Inclination which Men naturally have to Pleaſure, drew them on into Diſorders. They ſhook off at length intirely the Yoke of of Obedience, fell into ſtrange Extravagancies, and received into their Society all the Male-Contents and Revolters from the Church. Inſomuch, That this Sect was made up of People of all Nations, and all Opinions, which had nothing common, but the hatred they bore to the Pope, the Prelates and the Church of JESUS CHRIST, and the affectation of a voluntary Poverty, under which they cover'd an infinite number of Diſorders.

Arnold of Villa Nova.

In the beginning of this very Century ARNOLDUS de VILLA NOVA, a Catalonian, Phyſician to James King of Arragon, an Eloquent Man, broached ſome Errors at Paris, which were condemned in the Year 1317. by John Longerus of the Order of Friars-Preachers, Inquiſitor, and by the Grand Vicar of the Church of Tarragon, during the Vacancy of that See. Eymericus relates 5 Articles of the Errors of this Man. The Firſt was, That the Humane Nature in JESUS CHRIST is in every thing equal to the Divinity. The Second, That the Soul of JESUS CHRIST preſently after its Union knew all that the Deity knew. The Third, That the Devil hath perverted all Mankind, and deſtroyed the Faith. The Fourth, That the Monks corrupt the Doctrine of JESUS CHRIST; that they are without Charity, and ſhall be damn'd. The Fifth, That the Study of Philoſophy ought to be baniſht the Schools, and that Divines do very ill in making uſe of it. The Sixth, That the Revelation made to Cyril is of more value, than the Holy Scriptures. The Seventh, That works of Mercy are more pleaſing to God, than the Sacrifice of the Altar. The Eighth, That the Eſtabliſhment of Benefices, or Maſſes is uſeleſs. The Ninth, That he, who rakes together a great number of Beggars, and that founds Chapels, or Perpetual Maſſes incurrs Eternal Damnation. The Tenth, That the Prieſt, which offers up the Sacrifice of the Altar, and he, which cauſes it to be offered, offer nothing of theirs to God. The Eleventh, That the Paſſion of JESUS CHRIST is better repreſented by Alms, than by the Sacrifice of the Altar. The Twelfth, That in the Sacrifice of the Maſs, God is not praiſed in deed, but only in word. The Thirteenth, That in the Decrees of Popes, there is nothing but the Knowledge of the Works of a Man. The Fourteenth, That God has not threatned eternal Damnation to them that Sin, but only to ſuch as give a bad Example. The Fifteenth, That the World ſhall end in the Year 1335.

The Lollards.

The Sect of the Lollards ſpread throughout Germany, had for their Leader WALTER LOLLARD, who began to diſperſe his Errors about the Year 1315. They deſpiſed the Sacraments of the Church, and derided her Ceremonies, and her Conſtitutions, obſerved not the Faſts of the Church, nor its Abſtinences, acknowledged not the Interceſſion of the Saints, and believed, that the damned in Hell, and the evil Angels ſhould one day be ſaved. Trithemius, who recites the Errors of theſe Sectaries, ſays, that Bohemia and Auſtria were infected with them; that there were above Twenty four Thouſand perſons in Germany, which held theſe Errors, and that the greater part defended them with obſtinacy even unto death.

Ceccus.

JOHN VILLANI relates, That one CECCUS of Aſculum, Aſtrologer to Charles Duke of Calabria, was Condemned to be Burnt in the Year 1327. at Bononia, for maintaining, That there were certain evil Spirits in the Heavens, who might be obliged by vertue of the Conſtellations to do wonders, and he affirm'd, That the influence of the Stars impoſed an abſolute Neceſſity upon things, and on the Will; inſomuch that JESUS CHRIST had not been Poor, nor ſuffer'd a ſhameful Death, if he had not been Born under a Conſtellation, which neceſſarily produced this Effect; and on the contrary, that Antichriſt ſhould be rich and powerful, becauſe he ſhould be Born under an oppoſite Conſtellation.

The Errors of Eckard.

ECKARD, a German Divine of the Order of Friars-Preachers, though a Learned Man, nevertheleſs delivered Opinions erroneous or dangerous, which were Condemned by John XXII. in the Year 1329. Rainaldus recites a Letter of this Pope, in which he damns Four and twenty Propoſitions drawn out of the Writings of Eckard, wherein he aſſerts, That the World was made from all Eternity, that the Glory of God ſhines equally in all his Works, even in the Evil of Sin and in Blaſphemy; that in Prayer we ought to ask of God nothing in particular, not ſo much as internal Holineſs, or the Kingdom of Heaven; that righteous Men are changed into God, as the Bread is changed into the Body of JESUS CHRIST in the Euchariſt; that God communicates to them, whatever he communicated to his Son; That a good Man ought ſo to conform his Will to that of God, that he ought not to wiſh, he had not committed the Sins, which he hath committed; that God hath commanded no outward Work; that a righteous Man is one with God; that there is no diſtinction in God; that the Creatures are a mere Nothing; that there is in the Soul ſomething uncreated, and to ſpeak properly, one cannot ſay, that God is good. John XXII. declares, That ſome of theſe Articles are Heretical, and others to be ſuſpected, though one may by Explications and Additions put upon them a Catholick Senſe. He ſpares the Perſon of Eckard, becauſe he had ſubmitted his Works to the Judgment of the Holy See. It is plain, that this Author fell into the Exceſſes, to which counterfeit Piety over-ſtrained, ordinarily betrays.

Marſilius of Padua.

MARSILIUS of Padua, and JOHN de JANDUNO, or of Gaunt, or according to others, de Lavn, in oppoſing the falſe Pretenſions of the Pope, over the Temporalties of Kings, fell into the contrary Errors, attributing to Princes too much, and debaſing the Authority of the Prelates: what is to be blamed in their Writings is reducible to four Propoſitions. The Firſt, That JESUS CHRIST paid Tribute by bounden Duty. The Second, That JESUS CHRIST, aſcending into Heaven left no viſible Head upon Earth, and that St. Peter had no greater Authority, than the other Apoſtles. The Third, That it belongs to the Emperor to correct, and diſplace the Popes, and to govern the Church during the Vacancy; that all Biſhops, and even Prieſts are equal, and have the ſame Authority, according to the Inſtitution of JESUS CHRIST, and that the difference had been made only by Princes. The Fourth, That neither the Pope, nor the whole Church, nor any Prelate had any Coercive Juriſdiction; and has no Power to pronounce Sentence of Interdict, or Excommunication, without the leave of Princes. Theſe Errors were Condemned by Pope John XXII. and the Book of Marſilius, intituled, A Defender of the Peace; being after tranſlated into French, without the name of the Author, Gregory XI. complained of it to the Deputies of the Divinity-Faculty of Paris, who declared by an Authentick Act, that none of their Members had any hand in that Tranſlation; and that Marſilius of Padua, and John of Gaunt, who 'tis believed had travelled that way, were not of the Body of the Faculty.

The Propoſitions of John Mercourt condemned by the Faculty.

In the Year 1347. The Biſhop of Paris, and the Faculty of Divinity condemned ſeveral Propoſitions aſſerted by JOHN MERCOURT, Profeſſor of Divinity in the Convent of the Bernardines, and among others theſe, That JESUS CHRIST could avouch a thing that is not true, and deſire according to his Humane Will, that which may not come to paſs; that God wills effectually what ever he wills; that God makes Man to Sin, and that he wills with a Will of good Pleaſure, that Man be a Sinner; that a Man, who falls into an act of Sin, yielding to violent Temptation, which he cannot withſtand, does not Sin; that the habit of Sin renders us, as guilty as the act; that God hath Predeſtinated Men for the ſake of their future good Works, and the good uſe he foreſaw they would make of Free Will, and not gratuitouſly, and by his mere Mercy.

The Recantation of Nicolas d' Utricourt.

The Year following, the ſame Faculty obliged NICOLAS d' UTRICOURT to revoke a great many Philoſophical Opinions, of which ſome appear'd contrary to the Principles of Religion; and others to the common Tenents of School Philoſophy.

The Recantation of Dr. Simon.

In the Year 1351. It compell'd a Doctor, called SIMON, to recant the Propoſitions he affirmed in his Act of Veſpers, which derogated from the Dignity of JESUS CHRIST, ſuch as theſe: This Propoſition is poſſible, JESUS CHRIST is not God, the Son of God began to be, &c.

The Recantation of Friar Guy.

In the Year 1354. Friar GUY of the Order of the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, a Batchellor of Divinity, was moreover forced to recant divers Propoſitions, which he had taught, chiefly about the impoſſibility of loſing Charity and concerning Merit, ſuch as theſe; Charity, which one loſes, never was true Charity; a righteous Man performs no Action, that merits eternal Life; a Man may merit eternal Life ex condigno, yet ſo as God may refuſe to give it him without Injuſtice; that tho' there were no Free Will, there would not fail to be Sin; Merit comes ſo from God, that Free Will has no ſhare in it; God ſometimes neceſſitates the Will of Men, ſo that there remains in them no Power to the contrary.

The Recantation of Lewis.

Another Divine, named LEWIS, in the Year 1362. by order of the Faculty, recanted divers Propoſitions, concerning the Attributes, and this among others, There is ſomething, which is God according to his Real Eſſence, which is not ſo according to his Formal Eſſence, which the Faculty rejected as contrary to the Faith; and this, The Will of God loves one Predeſtinated more than another; The Wills in God are diſtinguiſhed, as God is from the firſt Matter. And this, The Will of God cannot chooſe but will Sin, &c.

The Retractation of John de Chaleur.

In the Year 1365. JOHN de CHALEUR explain'd and revoked ſome extraordinary Propoſitions, which he delivered in his Act of Veſpers.

The Condemnation of Dionyſius Soulechat's Errors.

In fine, DIONYSIUS SOULECHAT, of the Order of Grey-Friars, Batchellor of Divinity, having taught ſome Propoſitions condemned by John XXII. touching Poverty, ſuch as theſe: The Law of Love takes away all Property, and right of Inheritance; the renouncing of temporal Riches, which is not abſolute and actual, but only in the intention of the Mind, is imperfect; JESUS CHRIST taught this total Renunciation by his Example, having kept nothing for himſelf, &c. they were condemned by the Chancellor of the Church of Paris, and by the Faculty of Divinity in the Year 1364. as Heretical, contrary to the Judgment of the Church, and Scandalous. Soulechat was forbid to teach them any more. Soulechat thereupon appealed to Pope Urban V. and going to him, he promiſed to ſubmit to his Determination, and to Recant his Opinions, if his Holineſs judged it meet. But when the time of deciding this Matter came, he withdrew.

STEPHEN, Biſhop of Paris, cauſed him to be cited, as an Heretick: He returned to Avignon, where he made a large Explanation of the Propoſitions, he had laid down, and ſome of them he recanted, in the preſence of two Cardinals, the Maſter of the Holy Palace, Nine Doctors of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and recalled his Appeal: but this Recantation not having been Satisfactory, and ſome obſerving, that there were beſide Propoſitions as liable to be Condemned as the former, Urban V. ſent him back to Paris, and by his Bull dated the 20th. of December, in the Year 1368. turned over the Judgment of this Affair to John Cardinal Biſhop of Beauvais, unto whom he gave order to decide it, calling to him the Chancellor, and the Doctors in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and to oblige Soulechat to recant his Errors; the which he did the following Year, in the Church of the Jacobines, on Low-Sunday, renouncing moreover the Propoſitions contained in his firſt Recantation. Peter d'Ailly, in the Treatiſe he wrote in the Name of the Univerſity of Paris againſt Mounteſon, draws from this Matter of Soulechat, the following Concluſions. 1. That the Doctors of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris are obliged in Point of Duty, to take cogniſance doctrinally, of what concerns the Faith, as it is proved by theſe words of Urban V. Doing herein, that which is their Duty, Suum in hac parte debitum exequentes. 2. That they have Power, not only to give their Opinion in Doctrinal Points, but further to puniſh the Members of their Body, who lay down Concluſions contrary to the Faith, in depriving them of the Privilege of Profeſſing, and forcing them by their Sentence to recant. 3. That they have this Power, not only in regard of Propoſitions apparently Heretical, or clearly contrary to the Determination of the Church, but alſo in reſpect of thoſe, that are ſcandalous. 4. That an Appeal to the Holy See, by ſuch a one as will not recant his Errors and obey the order of the Doctors in Divinity, excuſes not his obſtinacy. 5. That in the Caſe of Mounteſon, which was altogether Parallel, the Faculty ought not to be hindered from proceeding to a Debate, and to further a Judgment; and in fine, that John Mounteſon ought to be ſent back to be Puniſhed at Paris, as Soulechat was by Urban V. We refer the ſpeaking of the buſineſs of Mounteſon to another Century. One may read in the Bibliotheca Patrum the Cenſures and Recantations, of which we have been treating.

Errors of Bertolus de Rorbarch.

In Germany one BERTOLUS de RORBARCH at Wortsburgh delivered Errors, which he was compell'd to renounce; but proceeding to teach them at Spire, he was condemned, as a Perſon relapſed, and delivered up to the Secular Power, which Sentenced him to be burnt in the Year 1359. He had taught, 1. That JESUS Chriſt was forſaken upon the Croſs; that he had doubted of the Salvation of his Soul, curſed the Virgin, that bare him, and the Earth, that received his Blood. 2. That a Man in this life might attain to ſo great a degree of Perfection, that he had no need of Faſting, nor Prayers. 3. That a Layman might be ſo enlightned, and have ſuch perfect Illuminations, that he ought to be believed, before the Goſpel, or the holy Doctors. 4. That a righteous Man might get as much Grace, by eating common Bread, as by receiving the Euchariſt. Theſe laſt Errors make it plain, that he was of the Sect of the Begards.

The Mad Opinion of Martin Gonſalvus.

We ought rather to place in the rank of Fanaticks, than Hereticks, one MARTIN GONSALVUS, a Native of Cuenza, in Spain, condemned by the Archbiſhop of Toledo, who would have us believe, that he was the Angel St. Michael, for whom God had reſerved the place of Lucifer, and was one day to encounter Antichriſt. The Fire which conſumed him made it appear to him, that he was no Angel, but a Man, like others.

Other Follies of Nicolas the Calabrian.

Nevertheleſs there was found one of Calabria named NICOLAS, yet a greater Fool than he, who had a Mind to make himſelf paſs after his death, for the Son of God, preached, that the Holy Ghoſt muſt one day be Incarnate, and that at the Day of Judgment Gonſalvus ſhould deliver all the Damned by his Prayers. This poor Wretch having preached up theſe Whimſies at Barcelona, was condemned by Eymericus, and by the Grand Vicar of the Biſhop, and delivered up to the Secular Power, which ordered him to be Burnt.

The Viſions of Janovez.

Behold another kind of Folly: JANOVEZ of Majorca made a Book, in which he undertook to foretell that Antichriſt ſhould come at Whitſuntide, in the Year 1360. That the Sacraments of the Church, and the unbloody Sacrifice ſhould then ceaſe; that the Chriſtians, who ſhould have on them the Mark of Antichriſt, ſhould never be converted; but that Children, Jews, Saracens, and Infidels, ſhould be converted after the Death of Antichriſt.

The Opinion of John de Latona about the Sacrament.

The Opinion of JOHN de LATONA, and d' Bonageta, of the Order of Grey-Friars, is not ſo extravagant; they erred by paying too much reſpect to the Sacrament, in preaching, that if a conſecrated Hoſt fell into a dirty place, the Body of JESUS CHRIST would re-aſcend to Heaven, though the Elements remained, and the Subſtance of Bread return'd; that the ſame would happen, if the Hoſt were eaten by Rats or other Beaſts, and that the Body of JESUS CHRIST returned to Heaven, while we were eating the Hoſt, and deſcended not into the Stomach. We have Divines of the Ninth and Eleventh Centuries, who were of the like Sentiments. This Doctrine was alſo current in this Century in the Provinces of Saragoza, and Tarragona; but Pope Gregory XI. having cauſed it to be enquired into by two Cardinals, they ordered the Archbiſhops of theſe two Cities to forbid the Preaching of theſe Propoſitions, on Pain of Excommunication.

The Errors of Arnold de Montanier.

The ſame Year ARNOLDUS de MONTANIER, of the Order of Grey-Friars, a Native of Puicerda in Catalonia, who had already been informed againſt to Nicolas Roſelli, Inquiſitor of the Faith, continuing to publiſh his Errors, was condemned by Eymericus, and by Berengarius, Biſhop of Urgel, and Arreſted by order of Gregory XI. He taught, according to the report of Eymericus, that JESUS CHRIST and the Apoſtles had nothing in peculiar, nor yet in common; that none of thoſe, that wear the Habit of St. Francis ſhall be Damn'd; that St. Francis every Year went down to Purgatory, and took thence them of his Order, to conduct them to Paradiſe; and in fine, that the Order of St. Francis muſt laſt to Eternity: This is a Chain of the Errors of the Spiritual Brethren condemned by John XXII.

The Turlupines.

The TURLUPINES who ſwarm'd about the cloſe of this Century in Provence and Dauphine, were ſo called for their infamous Practices; for beſides the Errors of the Begards, they held, That we ought not to be aſhamed of the Parts, which Nature has given us; they went all naked, and did, in the preſence of all People, actions, which Modeſty teaches us to conceal: Divers of them were Burnt at Paris, and other places; and Gregory XI. exhorted Amadeus, Duke of Savoy, to lend a helping hand to the Inquiſitors to extirpate them.

Errors condemned by Simon Langham.

In England SIMON LANGHAM, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, gave Judgment at Lambeth in the Year 1368. by the Advice of many Divines, againſt Thirty erroneous Propoſitions, taught in his Province, which for the moſt part are reſolved into this Principle, That all Men, even Infidels, and Children dying without Baptiſm, have a Viſion of God before their Death, and if they are willing then to be converted to God, they ſhall be ſaved; that thus Baptiſm is not neceſſary to Salvation; that none are damn'd for Original Sin alone, and that no Perſon ſhall be damned, even for any Actual Sin, if he refuſes not to be converted, having had the Viſion of God; the which is a Sin not to be forgiven, for the atonement whereof, even the Suffering of JESUS CHRIST is inſufficient. There are alſo ſome erroneous Propoſitions concerning other Matters, ſuch as theſe, That the Father, and the Son are finite, and that only the Holy Ghoſt is Infinite; that JESUS CHRIST, CHRIST, the Virgin, and all the Saints are yet Mortal; that the Virgin, and the Saints may yet Sin, and be damn'd; and that all the Devils may be ſaved.

Although Wickliffe appeared, and taught theſe Errors in this Century, we put off the treating of them to the following Age; to the end we may at once give an Hiſtory of them, and their Condemnation.

CHAP. IX.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations on the Fourteenth Century.

The Queſtion of the Eccleſiaſtical Power over Matters Temporal.

WE will not dwell upon Scholaſtical Queſtions diſcuſſed by the Divines of this Age. It would be an intolerable Task only to repeat all their Diſputes. We will only make ſome Obſervations upon the Queſtions of Conſequence, which have made a noiſe in the Church. One of the Chief is that of the Power of the Pope, and the Church over the Temporalties of Kings. The Popes pretended to make a new Doctrine of it; but in coveting too much, they loſt, what they had Uſurped. Till then, no Man had any Thoughts to examine their Right, and they ſeemed thereupon to be put in poſſeſſion. The haughtineſs, wherewith they had a Mind to practiſe it over Philip the Fair, and over Lewis of Bavaria, made it plain, of what conſequence it was, and induced Princes to ſearch into the Matter. Thence they diſcover'd the weakneſs of their Pretence, and oppoſed it; they recover'd out of their Error, the Soveraignty of Princes was confirmed, as to Temporals, and the bounds of both Powers fixed. They began to diſpute with the Clergy the Right, of which they were poſſeſs'd, to exerciſe Temporal Juriſdiction, and to take cogniſance of many Civil Cauſes under colour of Excommunication, an Oath, and Sin. They had a Mind likewiſe to invade the Privileges of the Clergy, and the Revenues of the Church. But they defended themſelves ſtoutly, and maintain'd their Juriſdiction and Immunities, by a great number of Canons and Regulations, wherein they uſed all the ways imaginable to maintain themſelves in their Privileges; nevertheleſs they own'd ſome Abuſes of their Juriſdiction, and applied Remedies thereto; but notwithſtanding all this, they loſt by degrees part of their Temporal Juriſdiction.

The Effects of the reſidence of Popes at Avignon.

The Reſidence of the Popes, and the Court of Rome at Avignon, whatever may be ſuggeſted, did not leſſen the Power of the Holy See. The French Kings made no ſiniſter uſe thereof to obtain favours of the Popes, which might prove prejudicial to their Authority. But as Monſieur Baluzius obſerves, after Nicolas Clemangis, the Italians brought into France the Debaucheries and Luxury of their Country Vices, from which till then it had been wholly free. The Court of Rome likewiſe introduced a way of litigious wrangling at Law. The Popes levied the Tenths on the Clergy, or elſe permitted the Kings to do it, on divers Pretences. The Schiſm, which followed, involved the Church in Troubles, overthrew the Method obſerved in Elections, and Collations of Benefices, filled the Churches with mercenary Paſtors, obliged the Competitors to do many mean things with the Princes to be upheld, to ſell Benefices, or beſtow them on their Creatures, and exorbitantly to levy the Tenths on the Clergy. It is hard to determine, which of the two Adverſaries had the right on his Side; nay, it was never judged meet, in order to the removing of the Schiſm, to ſearch into the right, it was found ſo very obſcure; and when the Councils of Piſa and Conſtance engaged in the Controverſie, they entred not upon this Queſtion, and offered no Prejudicate Opinion againſt the right of either; but they condemn'd and depos'd them, becauſe they would not renounce the Papacy, as they had engaged, and, as the caſe of the Peace required. The Schiſm has no way diminiſhed the certain Authority which the Supream Biſhops have received from JESUS CHRIST; but it has ſhewed, that they have a Superior Judge on Earth; which is a General Council.

Settlement of Annates, or Firſt fruits.

BONIFACE IX. was the firſt, that ſettled Firſt-fruits to be Paid by Biſhopricks and Abbies (that is to ſay, the reſerve of One Year's Revenue) whereof John XXII. had already given an Example, in putting a like Impoſition on Benefices for an Expedition into the Holy Land, and by ſettling firſt of all the Taxes for the Secretaries, that diſpatched Grants of Benefices, in Proportion to the Revenue.

The Inſtitution of the Jubilee.

BONIFACE VIII. appointed a Jubilee for all ſuch, as ſhould viſit the Churches of St. Peter and St. Paul, in the Year 1300. and ſo for every Hundredth Year. Clement V. ordered the ſame every Fiftieth Year, upon the Petition of the Romans.

The Queſtion of Poverty.

JOHN XXII. had a great Diſpute, as we have ſaid, with the Grey-Friars, about the Propriety of thoſe things, which they conſumed in the uſing. This Queſtion drew on that concerning the Poverty of JESUS CHRIST. There are great Volumes made on both ſides upon this Subject.

The Queſtion about the State of the Souls of the Juſt after Death.

The Opinion of this Pope touching the ſtate of Souls after Death, made a great noiſe; but this Queſtion was ſoon decided by Benedict XII. his Succeſſor, who determined clearly, that the Souls of the Juſt, who die Purged from their Sins, enjoy the intuitive Viſion of God, wherein he makes the chief Happineſs immediately after their Death, or after they have been purified in Purgatory, before the Day of Judgment, to conſiſt.

Provincial Councils, and particular Synods of Biſhops were frequent in this Century. All the Biſhops were bound to Appear there, at the Command of the Metropolitan, or to ſend Proxies, and a lawful Excuſe. The Abbots, and the Deputies of the Chapters of Cathedrals were likewiſe ſent for thither. The Rules and Decrees which were made in the Provincial Councils were publiſhed, and put in execution by the Biſhops in their reſpective Dioceſſes: The Elections were yet Legal, and according to Cuſtom for the Biſhopricks and Abbies. The Ordinaries for the moſt part provided for other Benefices. There was of theſe a great number in Patronage; but ſuch as were preſented by Patrons, were forbidden to take Poſſeſſion, till they were inſtituted by the Biſhop, or his Archdeacon; but as for thoſe, who were provided with Benefices with charge of Souls, by the Donors, who had right both to confer and inſtitute, they were injoyned to preſent themſelves to the Biſhop of the place in due time. The Commendams of Abbies became very frequent; Clement V. who gave ſeveral of them, ſaw good cauſe to repent it, his Succeſſors continued them; and notwithſtanding the Revocation of Benedict XII. the moſt part of the Abbies began to be given in Commendam. Clement IV. reſerved to himſelf the beſtowing of all Benefices vacant in Curiâ. Gregory X. reſtrain'd it to a Month. John XII. in prohibiting the Plurality of Benefices, decreed, That thoſe, who had Money, ſhould be obliged to reſign, and herein appropriated to himſelf the Donation. Benedict XII. reſerved to himſelf for his life only, all the Benefices vacant in Curiâ, and all ſuch as were void by the tranſlation of Incumbents, to other Benefices. Clement VI. made the like Reſervations; but Edward III. King of England, prevented the Execution of it in his Kingdom. Innocent VI. revoked the Reſerves by his Bull Paſtoralis; but they preſently return'd to the old wont. Gregory XI. recall'd them afreſh; but during the Schiſm, which came on, the two Antagoniſts made uſe of all Methods to render themſelves Maſters of the Benefices, and the Miſchief became ſo great, that the Princes were obliged to ſeek a Remedy. After the Death of the Incumbents there were nominated Adminiſtrators to manage the Profits of the Benefices; but the right of the Crown took place in moſt part of the Biſhopricks, and conſequently the King, or ſuch as of Cuſtom, or Right, had the Adminiſtration of the vacant Biſhopricks, preſented to the Benefices thereon depending. In ſome places a Prebendary, when he came to die, might diſpoſe of a Year's Revenue of his Benefice, after his Death.

The Diſcipline of the Church, about Benefices and Incumbents.

The Plurality of Benefices was very common, in ſpite of the re-iterated Prohibitions; they were herein ſo remiſs, that Licenſe was given even to the ſame Perſon to enjoy two Benefices, provided they were not inconſiſtent, and that only one of them be with cure of Souls. Reſidence likewiſe was recommended, and ſuch as were provided of Benefices, were obliged to take the Orders thereunto requiſite. Command was given to pay the Tythe of all kind of Fruits: from this the Immunity of the Clergy, and the Revenues of the Church were exempted, and many Decrees were made againſt them, that ſhould attempt them; this Immunity was extended to the Leprous, who were ſhut up in the Hoſpitals. Never were Excommunications and Interdicts more frequently made uſe of, and all other Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, than in this Age. The denial of Chriſtian Burial was an ordinary Puniſhment, and the Councils condemned Men to Pecuniary Mulcts for faults purely Eccleſiaſtical. The Excommunicate were not only deprived of Church Communion, but alſo of civil converſe, and ſuch as kept them Company, were excommunicated. Nevertheleſs, it was Prohibited to make uſe of Excommunications for Matters merely Pecuniary, and to uſe violence againſt the Excommunicate.

The greateſt care of the Prelates in the Councils was to regulate the Converſation and Morals of the Clergy; they made many Rules in reference to their Habits, and their Shaving. As to their Knowledge, they required not that it ſhould be of any large Extent; they contented themſelves, if the Unbeneficed Clergy were letter'd, that is to ſay, if they could Read and Write, and underſtood the Rudiments of Grammar; and as to the Prieſts, and ſuch as had Benefices with cure of Souls, they deſired they ſhould be inſtructed in the Articles of our Faith, and the Ceremonies of the Church. They forbid the receiving any Prieſts or Clerks, who were Strangers and Unknown, or to permit them to exerciſe the Functions of their Order. They enjoined the Prieſts to ſay Maſs at leaſt once a Month. They made divers Conſtitutions touching the Service of the Church, Reparations, and the Maintenance of the Churches, and the Ornaments. The diſtributions made to the Canons, that aſſiſted at Divine Service, of which the abſent had no ſhare, were ſettled almoſt in all places. The Churchwardens and the Clerks, or Maſters of Schools in Pariſhes ſaw themſelves confirmed in this Century. Many Laws were made for the Preſervation of the Goods of the Church, to prevent Alienation, and to oblige the Clergy to uſe them carefully. They were forbid to bequeath, or diſpoſe of the Churches Goods, which they had got together. It was ordained, that the Fonts for Baptiſm ſhould be incloſed; that the Hoſt and the Holy Chriſm, and the conſecrated Oils, ſhall be kept under Lock and Key. They revived all the Conſtitutions, which enjoined all the Faithful to aſſiſt at the Maſs of the Pariſh every Sunday. They granted Indulgences to them, that would accompany the Holy Sacrament, when it was carried to the Sick, to ſuch as ſhould pray for the Pope, the King and the welfare of the State, to thoſe, who ſhould bow their Heads at the Name of JESUS, who ſhould aſſiſt at the Maſs de Beatâ, &c. John XXII. granted them, to ſuch as ſhould repeat the Salutation of the Angel in the Evening, and this practice was approved in ſeveral Councils. They made many Decrees againſt them that eat Fleſh in Lent, or on Faſting Days. As to the Abſtinence on Saturdays, they made a Law for the Clergy; but it was not yet binding to the Laity.

Divers Regulations made of Manners of the Clergy, and of the Practices of the Church.

The Number of Mendicant-Friars continued very much to increaſe in this Century; but they degenerated from their ancient Simplicity, and their former ſtrictneſs. Many forſook their Order, and turn'd Seculars, or went over to other Orders, that they might be capable of Benefices, Penſions, Obſervations on a Monaſtick Life.

Penſions and Offices. The number of thoſe that did it, became ſo great, that they were forced to debar them, who deſerted the Order of the Mendicants from the holding of Benefices, or receiving Penſions, and having Offices in other Orders. They were alſo made uncapable to give, or receive any Vote. The Monks were forbid to admit any Perſons to Profeſs before the Age of Fifteen, to ſuffer them to make Profeſſion, or detain them, before they had paſſed a Year of Probation, nor to delay their Admiſſion after the Year is expired. It was forbid to exact any thing for entrance into a Monaſtick Life. The keeping of the Nuns within their Cloiſter was order'd under the moſt ſevere Penalties. In fine, divers Canons were made for reforming the ancient Monks, who began to live looſely: and to oblige them more ſtrictly to obſerve the Diſcipline of their reſpective Orders, they were enjoined to hold frequent Chapters.

Regulation between the Curates and the Religious Mendicants about Preaching and Adminiſtring the Sacraments.

Clement the Vth. in the Council of Vienne, renewed the Decretal of Boniface touching the Preaching, and Confeſſions of the Friars Mendicants, whereby they are permitted to Preach in their Churches, and in the Schools, or Publick places, and not in the Pariſhes, if they are not deſired by the Curates, at leaſt if the Biſhops give them not expreſs order. As to Confeſſions it is ſaid, That their Provincials or Superiors ſhall preſent ſome of their Monks to the Biſhop for his Approbation; that leave is given to the Biſhop to reject ſome, but he may not abſolutely refuſe to grant the Monks licence to Confeſs; and if he does, they may hear Confeſſion, by virtue of the Power given them by the Holy See; but they are wholly forbidden to Adminiſter the Sacraments of the Euchariſt, or Extream Unction, or to marry any without the leave of the Curate.

Notwithſtanding this Deciſion, there were Divines, who aſſerted, That ſuch, as confeſt their Sins to the Monks, which had a general leave to take Confeſſions, were obliged to Confeſs a new to the Curate; that the Pope could not diſpenſe with the Pariſhioners confeſſing once a Year to their Curates, nor give a general Power unto the Monks to confeſs. John de Apulia, a Divine of Paris, was cited by the Pope, John XXII. for maintaining theſe Propoſitions, and conſtrain'd to recant them; and conſequently this Pope condemned them by his Unlimited Power, in the Year 1321.

After this, Richard Archbiſhop of Armagh, undertook, as we have already noted, to defend the Rights of the Curates, againſt the Friars Mendicants, and the matter was brought before the Tribunal of Innocent VI. where it was argued in the Year 1357. and there it hung; but he appointed, till further order, that the Mendicants ſhould be let alone in the Poſſeſſion they were in, of Confeſſing, Preaching and Burying, yet without Prejudice to the main Queſtion.

Nevertheleſs, there were divers Councils held in this Century, which revived the Canon, Omnis utriuſq; Sexus, and explain'd it, as meant of the Curate; and likewiſe ſome, which forbid the Curates to ſuffer their Pariſhioners to go to Confeſſion out of their own Pariſh. Yet, excepting the Prieſts, to whom they gave leave, to confeſs themſelves to ſuch other Prieſts, as they ſhould make choice of. As to Burials, they permitted the Monks to bury thoſe, that deſired to be interr'd in their Covents; but on condition that the Corps ſhould be carried to the Pariſh according to the Cuſtom, and the Duties Paid to the Pariſh Churches. It was forbid likewiſe to build Chapels without leave of the Biſhop, and that they ſubmit them to the Odinaries, as to what concerned the outward Service. Notwithſtanding the Prohibition of the Lateran Council, they ſettled in this Age ſome new Congregations, but they pitched on, to ſatisfie the Orders of the Council, one of the approved Rules, and ordinarily choſe that of St. Auguſtin, which was the moſt General; whereto they joined particular Conſtitutions.

Congregations ſettled in this Century.

GERHARD the Great, of Deventer, inſtituted in that City a Congregation of Canons Regular, which he ſtyled Brethren of the Common Life, becauſe they brought all they poſſeſt to the Community, without Power to draw it back, in caſe they had a Mind to quit it; they imployed themſelves in writing Works, and inſtructing the Youth in the Principles of Religion. The Jeſuites were ſettled at Sienna by John Columbanus, and were ſo called, for that they often had the Name of JESUS in their Mouths, and lived according to the Rule of St. Auguſtin. Urban V. approved of their Congregation in the Year 1367. St. Bridget inſtituted about the Year 1360. the Order of St. SAVIOUR under the ſame Diſcipline of St. Auguſtin, which was confirmed by the ſame Pope. The Order of Hieronymites was founded in Caſtile, by Peter Guadaſtinaria; Gregory XI. ratified their Conſtitutions, and ordered them to follow the Rule of St. Auguſtin. He gave the ſame Rule to the Order of St. Ambroſe, which he approved. There were alſo divers Military Orders inſtituted in this Age, as the Order of CHRIST eſtabliſhed in Portugal under the Papacy of John XXII. That of Alcantara in Caſtile, which depends on the preceding Age, not to mention the Knights of the Fleece ſet up by the King of France; and the Knights of the Garter, by Edward III. King of England, which were very different from the Military Orders.

PREFACE.

THE Fifteenth Century of the Church is full of great Tranſactions, which deſerve a very particular Conſideration: The Schiſm of the Popes, which appear'd at the beginning of it, was for many Years the great Care and Buſineſs of the Prelats, and Chriſtian Princes of the Weſt: After this, the Difference between the Council of Baſil and Pope Eugenius IV. and the Project of the Reunion of the Greeks to the Latin Church, were the great Concerns of the whole World; but the former had not thoſe miſchievous Conſequences which were fear'd, nor the latter that Succeſs which was hop'd for. Some time before this Century, there aroſe a * Hereſie in England, which hath ſince produc'd great Revolutions in Europe; for it travell'd from England into Germany, and there kindled great Commotions both in Church and State. Among many bad Effects, it produc'd theſe two good ones; it put Men upon the ſtudy of uſeful Learning, and chiefly upon ſearching into the Holy Scripture and Tradition; and it oblig'd the Prelats to labour after the Reformation of the Manners of Chriſtians, and of the Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. The Faculty of Theology at Paris was conſiderable in this Century, not only for the great Men which came out of its Boſom, but for the Care it took to proſcribe the Errors which appear'd, and to maintain the Purity of Faith and Manners by its excellent Cenſures, which are as full of Wiſdom and Prudence, as of Knowledge and Learning. This is one of the moſt delicate and curious Morſels of the Hiſtory of the Fifteenth Century, which therefore we have handled with great Care, by relating exactly what we find of it in our Regiſters. I add no more, but that I deſire of the publick the ſame Favour for this Work, as for the former.

AN HI-

AN HISTORY OF THE CONTROVERSIES AND OTHER Eccleſiaſtical Affairs

Tranſacted in the Fifteenth Century.

CHAP. I.

The Hiſtory of the Councils of Piſa, Perpignan and Udine; and of the Popes, until the Council of Conſtance.

Councils appointed about the Schiſm in the year, 1408.

IN the Year 1408. three Councils were appointed concerning the Schiſm which then diſturb'd the Church of Rome: The firſt at Perpignan, by the Bull of Benedict XIII, dated June 15th. The ſecond in the Province of Aquileia, by the Bull of Gregory XII. dated July 2d, which was to meet on Whitſunday the next Year: And the third at Piſa, by the Letters of the Cardinals of the two Obediences, aſſembled at Leghorn, dated July 14th, in the Year 1408. which was to meet on the 25th of March in the next Year.

The Council of Perpignan under Benedict XIII.

Benedict being more diligent than the reſt, open'd his Council November 1ſt, of the ſame Year, with a Diſcourſe of Alphonſus the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Adminiſtrator of the Church of Sevil, to the Prelats there preſent; after which the Council was prorogued until the 15th of the ſame Month. On the 14th Benedict gave the Title of Archbiſhop of Antioch to the Treaſurer of Maguelone, Adminiſtrator of the Church of Aske, and the Title of Patriarch of Jeruſalem to Francis Ximenes of the Order of Friars Minors, who were Conſecrated the 20th of the ſame Month. The ſecond Seſſion of the Council was not held till the 17th, and then nothing elſe was done, ſave that Benedict read a Profeſſion of Faith, and declar'd to the Council that he believ'd it. In the third Seſſion, which was held the 21ſt, a Report was made to the Aſſembly of all that Benedict had done ſince his advancement to the Papal Dignity, and the Progreſs he had made towards obtaining the Peace of the Church. The Council was then made up of the Biſhops of Caſtile, Arragon and Navar, and ſome Prelats of France, Gaſcony and Savoy, being in all about 120, beſides the 4 Archbiſhops, honour'd with the Titles of Patriarchs, and the Archbiſhops of Toledo, Sarragoſa, and Tarragona. They ſpent 5 Seſſions in examining the Account of what had been done by Benedict for reſtoring Peace, and the extirpation of the Schiſm. In fine, in the Seſſion held the 5th of December, Benedict deſir'd their Advice, as to the Means which were moſt proper to obtain Union, and to remove the Scandal, Errors and Schiſms. It was not eaſy for them to decide this Queſtion in their preſent Circumſtances, and the Biſhops of the Council were perplex'd and divided into several Opinions about it. Some were of Opinion, That Benedict should immediately grant Power to his Legats to renounce the Papal Dignity; others thought that it were better to delay it for some time longer; a third sort proposed other Expedients. After this Difference arose, which lasted a long while, the greatest part of the Bishops withdrew from Perpignan, and the Council was reduc'd to the number of 18; but at last the Patriarch of Constantinople and the Prelats that remained, gave him their Opinion on February the first of the following Year, viz. That the Council did hold and acknowledge him for the true Pope, the Catholick and lawful Vicar of Jesus Christ; That they did believe him to be very far from being a Heretick or Schismatick, or a Favourer of Hereticks or Schismaticks; That they thank'd him for the Offers his Holiness had made towards an Union, and pray'd God to direct him, and make the Design successful for his own Glory. But withal they humbly beseech'd his Holiness and advis'd him, 1. To pursue effectually, in spite of all manner of Hindrances or Persecutions, the Design of uniting the Church by the way of Renunciation, which they preferr'd to all other ways, yet without excluding any. 2. To enlarge the Offer he had made of Renouncing, if the Intruder should renounce or happen to die, to this Case further; If the Intruder should be really and actually depos'd with the consent of those of his own Obedience. 3. To send Nuncio's in his Name to the Intruder, to the Anti-Cardinals, and the Cardinals at Pisa, with full Power to treat and agree upon the Place where his Holiness himself may be present in Person to execute what shall be agreed upon, or to send some Persons thither authoriz'd by Deputation from him to do it, and even to resign the Papal Dignity if there shall be occasion. 4. To draw up this Instrument of Deputation in the largest and best Form that can be contriv'd. 5. To make Provision, in case he should happen to die, that no stop be put to the Design of Union, nor any new Schism be suffered to arise. 6. To make Constitutions forbidding all Persons, under certain Penalties, to raise a new Schism. This Writing, sign'd by the Prelats who were still at Perpignan, was presented by the Patriarch of Constantinople to Pope Benedict, who agreed to it, and accepted the Conditions contain'd in it; and promis'd to make choice of fit Persons for executing this Agreement, in a solemn Session held February 12th: And accordingly he nam'd seven Legats on the 9th of March, whom he sent to Pisa, to see on what Conditions a Peace might be concluded.

Preparatives of the Council of Pisa.

While these Things were transacted in Arragon, the Cardinals of the two Colleges being assembled at Pisa, were labouring earnestly to persuade all Christian Princes to acknowledge their Council, and approve what they should do. The King of France of his own accord was very well affected towards them, and had already congratulated them by Letters in the Design they had in hand (a), and exhorted them to choose a Pope for all Christendom, assuring them that he should be acknowledg'd by all Christian Princes, and that for his own part he would not only acknowledge him, and cause him to be acknowledg'd in his Kingdom, but that he would employ his whole Power and Authority to support him. England also was very much inclin'd to own the Pope that should be chosen by the Council of Pisa, and the Cardinal of Bourdeaux who was sent thither by the Cardinals found no Enemies there (b). There remain'd only Germany where Gregory was supported by Robert Duke of Bavaria, King of the Romans; and thither the Cardinals sent in the beginning of the Year 1409, Landolph Cardinal of Bar, who came to Frankfort to hold there an Assembly of the Prelats and Princes of Germany, that he might persuade them to come or send Deputies to the Council of Pisa, and his Cardinal was kindly received by the Princes. Gregory also sent the Cardinal Anthony his Nephew, who being present with the Cardinal of Bar at the Assembly of Frankfort, endeavour'd to justify his Uncle, and made bitter Invectives against the Cardinal of Bar; which displeas'd the greater part of the Princes: But the King of the Romans, who favour'd Gregory, would suffer no other Resolve to be taken hereupon, but the Ambassador should be sent into Italy to labour after an Union. Robert chose for this Embassy the Archbishop of Riga, and the Bishop of Worms, then newly elected to the Bishoprick of Ferden. Gregory perswaded this latter to go to Pisa in the Name of his Master, for there were already a great number of Prelats assembled, and to present unto them some Articles which contain'd among other Things, That if the Cardinals would make choice of another place, that was secure for Gregory and themselves, Gregory himself would come thither; and whether Peter de Lima should come or no, he would resign up his Papal Dignity at such time as the Council should prescribe unto him. But when the Cardinal refus'd to accept of this Proposal, the Bishop of Ferden appeal'd in the Name of King Robert, and signify'd in his Act of Appeal, That it belong'd to the King of the Romans to call the Council; and declar'd, That since the Council of Pisa was assembled against his Will and without his Order, it could Decree nothing against Gregory. This Appeal he caus'd to be fix'd upon the Gates of the Church, and then rerir'd suddenly and secretly.

The 25th of March, which was the Day appointed for the meeting of the Council, being come, it was open'd in the Cathedral of Pisa, by the Cardinals of Palestrina, Albano, Ostia, Puy, Tuzi, Saluces Saluces and St. Angelo, of the Obedience of Benedict; and by the Cardinals of Naples, Aquileia, Colonna, Urſini, of Brancacio, Ravenna, Landi and St. Angelo, who were of the Obedience of Gregory. The Biſhop of Meaux was preſent there in the Quality of Ambaſſador from the King of France, and the Biſhop of Gap in the Name of the King of Sicily, with two Knights and a Secretary. One Knight, one Doctor and one Clergy-man, were preſent from the King of England. The Cardinals were plac'd on high Seats at the right Hand of the Entry into the Quire, the Biſhops and Abbots on both ſides of the Nave of the Church, and the Deputies of Chapters and Monaſteries underneath them; and the Ambaſſadors who were not Prelats, and the Doctors, in the Body of the Church. The Proceſſions, the ſolemn Maſs, and other uſual Prayers being ended, two Cardinal-Deacons, two Archbiſhops, and two Biſhops, together with ſome Doctors and Notaries, went by Order of the Council to the Gate of the Church, and ask'd with a loud Voice, Whether Peter de Luna and Angelus Corarius, Competitors for the Papal Dignity, were preſent, or any one for them? And no Perſon appearing, they made their Report to the Council, who nominated ſome Managers or Proctors in the Name of the Univerſal Church, to plead, enquire, and do whatever ſhould be neceſſary or expedient for the Extirpation of Schiſm, againſt the two Competitors for the Pontificat, and for the Union of the Church. Theſe Officers, nam'd by the Council, preſently accuſed them, and requir'd that they ſhould be declar'd Contumacious in the Matter of Schiſm and of Faith, and that they ſhould be prouounc'd in Contempt. They caus'd to be read the Acts by which the two Competitors had been ſummon'd, and the Verbal Proceſs of the Citation. But the Council, notwithſtanding the Affair was now ripe, put off any further Conſulation about it until the next Seſſion, which was to be held to Morrow: And then the Council caus'd them to be cited again as they were at firſt; and when no Body appear'd for them, they put off this Affair until the 30th of the next Month. When this Day was come, the Competitors being call'd again, and no Body appearing for them, they were declar'd Contumacious in Matters of Faith and of Schiſm, and the Sentence was pronounc'd againſt them by the Cardinal of Paleſtrina, (otherwiſe call'd, of Poitiers) with the unanimous Conſent of the Fathers of the Council; and the further Proſecution of this Affair was deferr'd till the 15th of April. On this Day it was ordain'd, That the Cardinal of Todi ſhould be cited as adhering to Gregory, and the Cardinals of St. Sabine, St. Adrian, St. Mary in via lata of Fliſque, and Challont, as adhering to Benedict; and that if the two Competitors and the Cardinals ſhould not appear at this time, they ſhould proceed further againſt them. The Cardinals of Milan and Bar, who had been at the Aſſembly of Frankfort, arriv'd in Piſa at this Seſſion, and brought with him ninety, partly Archbiſhops and Biſhops, partly Abbots and Doctors, who had not been preſent at the preceding Seſſions.

The Ambaſſadors of Robert Duke of Bavaria, Elect King of the Romans, appear'd at the Fourth Seſſion, and propoſed ſeveral Objections againſt the Authority of the Council, and requir'd that it ſhould be remov'd and aſſembled in another place, at which Gregory offer'd to appear. Their Reaſons were demanded in Writing, and Time was given them till the 24th of the ſame Month to bring in their Anſwer. Charles Malateſta of Rimini made the ſame Demand of the Council on behalf of Gregory, and propos'd more Difficulties. Two Cardinals of each Obedience were deputed to confer with him, who gave him to underſtand, that he could not hope to obtain what he demanded, and anſwer'd his Objections. Notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance they went on with the Proceſs, and after they had ask'd at the Church-gate if any of the two Competitors were come, they were declar'd anew to be Contumacious, and the next Seſſion was put off to the 24th. In this Seſſion the Advocate of the Council alledg'd all the Facts concerning the Schiſm from its firſt beginning, and from thence prov'd the Colluſion, the erroneous Proceedings and the unworthineſs of the two Competitors, in 57 Articles; and requir'd, in the Name of the Proctor of the Council, That the Aſſembly ſhould declare that the Union of the two Colleges was lawful and juſt, that the Cardinals had Power to appoint the General Council, and that the City of Piſa was a fit Place for holding the Aſſembly; That the Citations given to the two Competitors ſhould be confirm'd, and that they ſhould be reputed Contumacious, and their Favourers and Adherents ſhould be depriv'd of all their Dignities, Benefices and Offices, and that it ſhould be lawful for the Secular Judges to puniſh and chaſtiſe them in caſe they ſhould oppoſe the Decree that was to paſs againſt them; and that Kings and Princes ſhould be abſolv'd from their Oaths, and from any Obligation of Obedience to the two Competitors. He added, That altho' the Facts alledg'd againſt them were notorious, yet he requir'd that the Council ſhould name Commiſſioners to inform themſelves more fully about them. The Council from this Day declar'd that the College of Cardinals, being united, had Power to call the Council, and that in the preſent Circumſtances they had the Right to do it; That this General Council, repreſenting the Church Univerſal, was lawfully aſſembled, and had Power to proceed to a Definitive Sentence; That the number of Prelats now aſſembled was ſufficient; That the City of Piſa was a place very commodious; That Peter de Luna and Angelus Corarius had been ſufficiently ſummon'd and cited to the Council. The Remainder was put off to the next Seſſion, which was appointed to be held on the laſt Day of March.

Some time after Simon de Cramaut Patriarch of Conſtantinople, the Deputies of the Univerſities, the Ambaſſadors of the Dukes of Brabant, Holland and Liege, thoſe of the King of *England, the Archbiſhops of Mayence and Collen, arriv'd at Piſa.

The Council of Piſa. In the 6th Seſſion, the Biſhop of Salisbury, Ambaſſador from the King of England, made a Diſcourſe to the Council, taking for his Text the Words of the 83d Pſalm, Juſtice and Judgment are the preparation of your Throne; from which he exhorted the Fathers of the Council to Peace, and ſaid he had full Power from the King his Maſter as to all things, which were to be treated of in the Council. Nothing elſe was done in this Seſſion, and the next was appointed to be May the 4th: In the mean time, the Cardinals of Bourdeaux and Spain, arriv'd at Piſa.

The Council being Aſſembled on the Day appointed, Peter de Ancharano, a Dr. of Bologne, made a Diſcourſe, wherein he anſwered ſome Queſtions propos'd by the Ambaſſadors of the King of the Romans, altho' they were abſent (for they had withdrawn themſelves from the 21ſt of April, after they had publiſh'd on the 9th of the ſame Month, an Act of Appeal againſt all that the Council had done, or ſhould do) and ſhow'd, That the Objections were of no Force; That the Competitors had been lawfully Summon'd; That the Council had Power to proceed againſt them; That the Intention was to procure the Peace of the Church; and on the contrary, the Deſign of the Ambaſſadors of the Duke of Bavaria was to hinder it. In this Seſſion, Commiſſioners were Nam'd, to receive and examine the Depoſitions of Witneſſes, that ſhould be produc'd by the Proctor of the Council, who were the Cardinals of Landi, and St. Angelo for the two Colleges; the Biſhops of Liſeaux, and the three Drs. for France, and one Dr. for England. It was alſo ordain'd, That the Council ſhould ſend Deputies to Laodiſlaus, who call'd himſelf the King of Sicily, to pacifie him. The next Seſſion was put off to the 10th of May.

In a Congregation, which was held before the General Aſſembly of the 8th Seſſion, the Council nam'd Deputies to aſſiſt in the Aſſemblies of the College of Cardinals, that all things might be done by common Agreement. The ſame Day the Cardinal of Albano told the Aſſembly, That he was inform'd that the Ambaſſadors of Peter de Luna wou'd quickly come to Piſa, and that they muſt conſider how they ſhould be receiv'd. About this, there was a Conſultation the next Day, being the 9th of May, and on the Day following, being that of the Seſſion, the Proctor of the Council requir'd, That they ſhould Decree, that the Union of the two Colleges was lawfully made; That they were now become but one College; That they ſhould declare the Calling of the Council to be Legal by them; That the Council was held in a ſecure and fit place; That it repreſented the Church Univerſal, and that the Cognizance and Deciſion of what concern'd the Union and Peace of the Church, and the Extirpation of the Schiſm belong'd to them. When it was demanded, If all of them were of this Opinion, the greater part anſwer'd affirmatively; But the Biſhops of Salisbury and Evreux remonſtrated as to the firſt Head of this Demand, That there could not be an Union of the two Colleges, as long as the Cardinals of Benedict obey'd him as they did, while all the reſt refus'd to acknowledge Gregory the 12th; That it was neceſſary, there ſhould be a general withdrawing of Obedience from them. Many more Things were ſaid upon this Subject. The Patriarchs of Alexandria, the Germans and French were of this Opinion; but the Cardinals of Benedict, who had not yet withdrawn their Obedience from him, could hardly be brought to any Reſolution in this Caſe. In fine, the Proctor of the Council, having mounted into a Pulpit, demanded ſtill, That in conſideration of the Contumacy of the two Competitors, who were notoriouſly guilty of continuing a Schiſm in the Church by their Colluſion, contrary to the Oaths they had taken, the Council would pronounce and declare, That from the time it had been manifeſt, the two Competitors had no mind to procure the Peace of the Church by the means they had ſworn to make uſe of, it had been lawful to ſubtract Obedience from them, and that now they ought no more to be obey'd. He ask'd if this was the Opinion of the whole Council, and every one anſwer'd in the Affirmative with Joy, except two Biſhops, the one of England, and the other of Germany. But notwithſtanding their Opinion, the Matter was determin'd according to the Demand of the Proctor, and the Patriarch of Alexandria, having mounted into a Pulpit, together with the Biſhop of Salisbury, pronounc'd the Definitive Sentence by the Authority of the Council. The Proctor demanded, That it ſhould be drawn up in the Form of an authentick Act, which was granted him, and the next Seſſion was put off to the 8th Day, that the Commiſſioners might have time to examine Witneſſes.

The 9th Seſſion was held the 17th of May, and the Act of Subtraction which had been drawn up by ſome Doctors, and review'd in private Congregations, was then preſented, and the Proctor demanded that it ſhould be read in full Council. The Patriarch took the Act, mounted into the Pulpit and read it with a loud Voice. It contain'd, That the Council judg'd it had been lawful to ſubtract Obedience from the two Competitors, ever ſince it was evidently prov'd, That they had no mind to procure Union by the way of Reſignation, as they had ſworn to do; That all Chriſtians ought to ſubtract the Obedience from them; That the Council did Null and make Void all Sentences which the Competitors might have given, or ſhould give againſt thoſe that did ſubtract Obedience from them; That thoſe who were Judges in the Council might be Witneſſes againſt them; That the Commiſſioners might draw up Articles of Accuſation, and a Verbal proceſs of Interrogatories, as they ſhould think convenient.

In the 10th Seſſion, which was held the 22d of the ſame Month, the Proctor caus'd the Advocate to inform the Council, That the Commiſſioners had heard Witneſſes, and put the Depoſitions in Order, and that they were ready to make the Report of them to the Council by the Mouth of the Archbiſhop of Piſa. The Council agreed to this Propoſal, and Deputies were ſent to the Church-gate, to know if any of the two Competitors, who had been cited to hear the Depoſi-tions of Witneſſes, would appear; but they not being preſent, nor any one for them, they were declar'd Contumacious, and it was ordain'd, That the Proſecutors might proceed further to draw up a Proceſs againſt them, and publiſh the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes. After this, the Archbiſhop of Piſa went up into the Pulpit, and caus'd to be read the Articles propos'd againſt the Competitors in the 10th Seſſion, and obſerv'd upon each Article by how many Witneſſes it was prov'd, and of what Quality they were. Twenty Articles were made ready this Seſſion, and the reſt in the next, which was held the Day after: After which, the Advocate of the Council mounted into a Pulpit, and required in the pain of the Proctors and Managers of the Council, That all the Facts alledg'd might be declar'd notorious, manifeſt and well prov'd, and that now they might proceed further. The Council deferr'd the Conſultation about this Demand until the 25th of the Month, which was appointed for the next Seſſion, in which they agreed with the Concluſions of the Advocate, the Sentence about them was publiſh'd, and the Power of the Commiſſioners was recall'd. The next Seſſion was put off to the 29th of May, at which they were to declare the Day when they ſhould give a Definitive Sentence. The Council was then made up of 140, partly Cardinals, partly Archbiſhops, Biſhops and Mitred Abbots, of 26 Doctors of Divinity, of 300 Doctors of Civil and Canon Law, and of Ambaſſadors from the Kings of France, England, Jeruſalem, Cicily, Cyprus, Poland, from the Dukes of Brabant, Auſtria, Bavaria, from the Count of Cleves, the Marquiſs of Brandenburgh and Moravia, from the Archbiſhops of Collen, Mayence and Saltzburgh, from the Biſhop of Utrecht, the Maſter of the Order of Pruſſia, from the Patriarch of Aquileia, and many Princes of Italy: There were alſo Deputies preſent from the Univerſity of Paris. The Council of Piſa.

On the 29th of May, the 12th Seſſion was held, in which Peter Pluen, Dr. of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, mounted into the Pulpit, and made a Diſcourſe wherein he proved by many Reaſons, That the Church was ſuperior to the Pope, and made it appear, That Peter de Luna was an obſtinate Schiſmatick, and even a Heretick; that he had fal'n from the Right of the Pontifical Dignity, of which the Council ſhould immediately deprive him; He ſaid, That this was the Opinion not only of the Univerſity of Paris, but alſo of the Univerſities of Angiers, Orleans and Tholouſe. An Italian Biſhop Aſcended after him into the Pulpit, and read the Opinion of 300 Doctors of the Univerſity of Bononia, which agreed with that of the Univerſity of Paris. In fine, the Advocate of the Council demanded, That a Day might be appointed for paſſing the Definitive Sentence againſt the two Competitors, and required that it might be Wedneſday next, being the 5th of June, and that in the mean time a Congregation ſhould be held on Saturday next, to hear new Depoſitions againſt the two Competitors. This was granted him, and on the 1ſt Day of June, an Aſſembly was held, wherein the Archbiſhop of Piſa repeated all the Articles, and upon each of them he declar'd the number and Quality of the Witneſſes that depos'd it, and gave publick notice, That all thoſe who would ſee the Depoſitions entire, might do it on Monday or Tueſday next, in the Convent of the Carmelites, where they ſhould find Carmelites that would ſhow them to any one that deſir'd it.

In fine, at the 14th Seſſion which was held on Wedneſday, being the 5th of June, the Advocate of the Council demanded, That they would proceed to a Definitive Sentence againſt the two Competitors. They were call'd for again ſeveral times at the Church-gate, and ſeeing neither of them appear'd, nor any Perſon for them, the Council order'd, That the Patriarch of Alexandria ſhould publiſh the Definitive Sentence againſt them, and in purſuance of this Order, this Patriarch aſſiſted by the Patriarchs of Antioch and Jeruſalem, pronounc'd with a loud Voice in the preſence of the Aſſembly and the People, who were now ſuffer'd to come into the Church, the Definitive Sentence, which was to this effect, That this Holy General Council repreſenting the whole Church, to whom belong'd the Cognizance and Deciſion of this Cauſe, having examin'd all Matters relating to the Union of the Church, and the Schiſm between Peter de Luna, call'd Benedict the 13th, and Angelus Corarius, otherwiſe call'd Gregory the 12th, upon mature Deliberation, have declar'd with an unanimous conſent, That all the Facts alledg'd againſt them by the Proctors of the Council, are true and notorious, and that the two Competitors are manifeſtly Schiſmaticks, Favourers of Schiſm, Hereticks, guilty of Perjury, and of the Violation of their Oaths; that they give a Scandal to the whole Church by their manifeſt Obſtinateneſs and Contumacy; that they are unworthy of all Honour and Dignity, and particularly of the Pontifical, and that they are fal'n from it, depriv'd of it, and ſeparate from the Church, ipſo facto; That nevertheleſs the Church does now deprive them by this Definitive Sentence, and forbids them to uſe the Title of Sovereign Pontiffs; declares, That the Church of Rome is vacant, abſolves all Chriſtians from the Obedience which they may have promis'd them, and forbids any Perſon to obey them, to help or conceal them for the future; Ordains, That thoſe who ſhall not obey this Sentence ſhall be puniſh'd by the Secular Powers; declares all the Judgments or Sentences which they have given or ſhall give, to be Null and Void, as well as the Nominations of Cardinals, which have been made by them ſome time ago, viz. thoſe of Angelus Corarius, ſince the 3d of May, and thoſe of Peter de Luna, ſince the 15th of June, in the Year, 1408. And laſtly, to the end, That the Decrees made by the Competitors to the prejudice of Union may be Null'd, and what concerns the Promotions they have made may be Regulated, the Council appointed a Seſſion on Monday next, being the 10th of June.

On this Day, the Archbiſhop of Piſa read an Inſtrument in Writing, by which the Cardinals promis'd, That whoever among them ſhould be choſen Pope, ſhould continue the Council, and

The Council of Piſa. not diſſolve it, nor ſuffer it to be diſpers'd, until it had made a Reformation of the Univerſal Church, and of its preſent State, both in the Head and the Members; and that in caſe any one of the Cardinals that was abſent ſhould be choſen, they ſhould bind them by a Promiſe of ſufficient Force and Validity, to execute what they had before, and did now at preſent approve, viz. the Continuation of the Council during the vacancy of the See. Nothing elſe was done in this Seſſion, and the Council was adjourn'd to Thurſday, the 13th of June.

In this, a Writing was read, by which the Council conſented, and ordain'd, That the two Colleges of Cardinals ſhould proceed according to the uſual Forms, to the Election of a Pope.

The next Day, the Ambaſſadors from the King of Arragon, and thoſe of Peter de Luna, preſented themſelves to the Council: The former were heard, and deſir'd to be inform'd of what had paſs'd in the Council, and tho' they proteſted that they did not hear with a Deſign to approve their Actions; yet Anſwer was made, That Deputies ſhould be nam'd to inform them: But as to the Ambaſſadors of Peter de Luna, they were anſwer'd that they came too late, and that they were not to be heard. Nevertheleſs, out of reſpect to the King of Arragon, it was reſolv'd, That ſome part of what they had to ſay ſhould be heard; but they could not endure that this King's Ambaſſadors ſhould give him the Title of Pope Benedict the 13th; And when the Archbiſhop of Tarragona, and the other Ambaſſadors of Peter de Luna entred, a great Tumult was made: But John de Coſta, who had formerly been Biſhop of Mende, being their Orator, did firſt of all remonſtrate, That there being an Agreement between the Florentines and Cardinals, by which every one is forbidden to oppoſe any thing that had been done in a Council, he could not propoſe what he had to ſay, unleſs aſſurance were given him, That he might ſpeak with freedom, notwithſtanding this Agreement. The Council anſwer'd him, That they could not diſpenſe with this Law, yet he might ſay what he thought was to the purpoſe. Hereupon the Ambaſſadors of the King of Arragon, and of Peter de Luna, deſir'd to ſee the Articles of that Agreement, and that this Matter might be delay'd till the Morrow; which was granted them; but the Ambaſſadors of Peter de Luna withdrew without demanding Audience.

The Election of Alexander the V. On Saturday, the 19th of the ſame Month of June, the Biſhop of Navarre having made a Diſcourſe upon theſe Words, in Ch. 10. of the 4th Book of Kings, Chooſe ye one better, and ſet him upon the Throne: The Cardinals towards the Evening, entred into the Conclave to the Number of 24, and there continued until the 26th of the ſame Month; in which time they choſe Unanimouſly for Pope, Peter Philaret of Candie, the Cardinal of Milan, of the Order of Friars Minors, who aſſum'd the Name of Alexander the 5th, and immediately appointed a Seſſion of the Council on the firſt of July next.

He preſided in Perſon at this Seſſion, being ſeated on a high Chair among the Five Patriarchs, and having read the Decree of his Election, he made a Diſcourſe to the Council, and then order'd the Cardinal of Bononia to read a Decree; whereby Firſt, He approv'd and ratified all the Proceſſes Sentences and Regulations which had been made by the Cardinals for the Union of the Church, ſince the 5th of May, 1408. and all that had been done in the General Council, provided the Errors either in Matter of Right and Fact were corrected, if any ſuch there were, as much as was neceſſary. Secondly, He United the two Colleges of Cardinals into one only. Thirdly, He diſſolv'd the Difficulty concerning the Benefices of Cardinal Challant, who had continued longer with Peter de Luna than the reſt, by remitting to him any Impediment he might have contracted by his ſlowneſs in forſaking that Faction. He added, That he would ſo order Matters, that the Prelats who had come to the Council, ſhould return with contentment; that he would labour hard for the Reformation of the Church, as he had promis'd; and that he would chuſe Perſons of Probity and Vertue to conſult with the Cardinals about it. After this, it was order'd, That he ſhould be Crown'd the next Sunday, and then the Council adjourn'd till Wedneſday, the 10th of July.

In the 21ſt Seſſion, the Pope was Complemented in the Name of the Florentines, and thoſe of Siena, and order'd a Decree to be publiſh'd, wherein he declares to be Null, and perfectly makes Void all the Sentences that had been given by the two Competitors during the time of the Schiſm, againſt thoſe that were not of their Obedience; or who had embrac'd Neutrality, while the Difficulty laſted of determining which of the two was the true Pope and Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt. The next Seſſion was put off to the Wedneſday following, and after that the Council was Prorogu'd to the 27th of July, upon the account of the Arrival of Louis of Anjou, King of Sicily.

In this Seſſion, the Pope caus'd the Cardinal Challant to publiſh a Decree, wherein he approv'd and ratify'd all the Collations, Proviſions, Promotions, Tranſlations of Biſhopricks, Dignities, Benefices, Eccleſiaſtical Offices, all the Conſecrations of Biſhops, Ordinations of Clergymen, and other Acts done by the two Competitors, or their Predeceſſors, or by their Order, or their Authority, in ſuch Places where Obedience was freely paid them; provided they were done Canonically, and that thoſe who were promoted had been in peaceable Poſſeſſion, excepting what had been done to the prejudice of the Union, or of thoſe that adhere'd to the Council, particularly ſince the 3d of May, in 1408. with reſpect to Angelus Corarius, and ſince the 15th of July, in the ſame Year, with reſpect to Peter de Luna. He confirm'd alſo all the Elections, Poſtulations, Preſentations, Inſtitutions, Collations, &c. made Canonically by the Electors, Ordinaries, Patrons, &c. to thoſe who adher'd to the Council; he maintain'd all thoſe who were in peaceable Poſſeſſion of Benefices, to which they had been promoted by the ordinary ways, yet without derogating from the Regulations which had been made at Paris, in the laſt Aſſembly of the Clergy of France, or from the Rights of the Cardinals, and particularly the Cardinal of Albano. He declar'd, That he would proceed againſt the Favourers of Peter de Luna and Angelus Corarius; and ordain'd, that he or his Succeſſor, ſhall appoint another General Council to meet in the Year 1412. in the Month of April, at a convenient place which ſhall be fix'd a Year before their meeting. He declar'd alſo, That if the Cardinal de Fliſque will return within two Months, he ſhall be received in the Quality of Cardinal, and enjoy the Benefices he had before the 15th of June 1408. He confirm'd alſo the Diſpenſations and Abſolutions in Reſerv'd Caſes, agreed upon by the Biſhops during the Neutrality. He caus'd the Archbiſhop of Piſa to publiſh, That he remitted to all the Churches the Arrears of great and mean Services which were due to the Apoſtolick Chamber until the Day of his Election; That he did not intend to heap up to himſelf the Spoils of dead Biſhops, nor the Profits which ſhould ariſe out of vacant Benefices. He pray'd the Cardinals to make the ſame Allowance to all the Churches and Eccleſiaſticks; which was approv'd by all the Prelats of the Council, except the Cardinal of Albano who oppoſed it. Theſe Regulations being finiſh'd, the next Seſſion was deferred till the 7th of Auguſt.

The Council of Aquileia.

This was the laſt Seſſion of the Council of Piſa, wherein the Pope ordain'd, That the Revenues of the Church of Rome and other Churches, ſhould neither be alienated nor mortgaged by the Pope or other Prelats, until the next Council; That in the mean time the Archbiſhops and Biſhops ſhould call their Provincial Councils, the Monks and Canons Regular ſhould hold their General and Provincial Chapters; That the Pope ſhould make no Tranſlation againſt the Will of the Parties concerned; That Ambaſſadors ſhould be ſent to Kings and Chriſtian Princes, to notify the Acts of the Council, and cauſe them to execute what had been ordained in it. He granted a Plenary Indulgence and Abſolution both from Pain and Guilt to all thoſe who had aſſiſted at this Council, and adher'd to what had been determin'd in it. In fine he declar'd, That having a Deſign to Reform the Church in its Head and Members, and having taken much Pains already to that purpoſe, but not being able to finiſh it becauſe of the Departure of ſome Prelats and Ambaſſadors, he did therefore delay this Reformation until the next Council, whereof the time was already prefixed, leaving all thoſe who had been called to this Council at liberty to return to their own Homes.

This is what was done in the Council of Piſa, the Acts of which have been publiſh'd by Father Dom. Luc Dachery in the 6th Tome of his Spicilegium, and whereof we had nothing before but an Abridgment, containing the Names and Titles of thoſe who were preſent, being in number 22 Cardinals, 67 Ambaſſadors, partly Eccleſiaſtical, partly Laical, from Kings or Sovereign Princes, 4 Patriarchs, 2 Prothonotaries, 12 Archbiſhops, 67 Biſhops in Perſon, and 85 by Deputies, a very great number of Abbots, of Generals, Miniſters, and Proctors of Orders, and Convent-Priors, of Deputies from the Univerſities of Paris, of Angiers and Montpellier, and of Proctors of an infinite number of Abbies and Monaſteries, of Chapters, Cities, Provinces, and other Communities. Alexander V. confirm'd the Acts of this Council by his Bull, dated the laſt of January 1410. Gregory and Benedict ſeeing themſelves abandon'd by the Old Cardinals, created ſome new ones: Benedict made 12 of Spaniards or Arragoneſe, and Gregory alſo created ſome out of the Prelats who were of his Obedience, among whom was Gabriel Condolmier, who was afterward Pope under the Name of Eugenius IV.

The Council of Aquileia under Gregory XII.

Gregory XII. by a ſecond Bull, dated December 18. in the Year 1408. had fix'd the preciſe Place where his Council was to meet, which was Udine, a City of the Province of Aquileia, in Friuli. Thither he came at the time appointed, and open'd the Council on the Feſtival-day of Corpus Chriſti, in the Year 1409. by ſolemn Proceſſions; but there being ſcarce any Prelats preſent, he put off the next Seſſion to the 22d of June, and invited the Biſhops anew to come thither. This ſecond Seſſion was not more numerous than the former, nevertheleſs he gave order to declare, That the Elections and Enthronements of Urban VI. Boniface IX. Innocent X. his Predeceſſors, and his own, were Canonical, and that they ought to be acknowledg'd for true and real Popes; and on the contrary, That the Election of Robert of Geneva, of Peter de Luna, and Peter de Candie, who was lately choſen, were temerarious, unlawful and ſacrilegious, and that they were Schiſmaticks and Uſurpers; That they had no Right to the Papal Dignity, and that whatever they had done or ſhould do was Null and Void. In fine, in the third Seſſion, on the Fifth of September, or rather in a Congregation of a ſmall number of Prelats which he had about him, he made a Declaration importing, That he was ready to reſign the Pontifical Dignity really and actually, provided that Peter de Luna and Peter of Candy, would alſo perſonally reſign at the ſame place, their pretended Rights to that Dignity, according to the Form preſcribed in the Conclave; on condition nevertheleſs, that to make the Election of a new Pope valid, he muſt have two thirds of the Suffrages of the Cardinals of the two Obediences; and for appointing a place of meeting, that Power be given to Robert King of the Romans, and Laodiſlaus King of Jeruſalem, and Sigiſmund King of Hungary, to make choice of the place: And in caſe his Adverſaries would not accept of this Propoſal, he gave Power alſo to Princes to call a General Council, at which he promiſes to be preſent, and to ſtand to the Judgment which ſhall be there given by the greater part of each Obedience. This laſt Clauſe render'd the Execution of this Project impoſſible; for Sigiſmund, Laodiſlaus and Robert, were at War with one another, and therefore could act nothing by common Conſent, in an Affair about which their Intereſts were quite different.

How-

The Council of Aquileia.

However Gregory might put a good Face upon the Matter, he was really very much perplex'd with the preſent State of Affairs, for he fear'd leſt the Venetians ſhould abandon him, or cauſe him to be apprehended, in Obedience to the Decree of the Council of Piſa, which exhorted all Secular Powers to oblige the Competitors to ſubmit to the Determination of that Council; and this he fear'd the rather becauſe the Patriarch of Aquileia, whom he would have depriv'd of his Dignity, appear'd very vigorouſly againſt him, and the Cardinals whom he had newly created. Upon this account he took up a Reſolution to retire from Udine, but he could not eaſily put it in Execution, becauſe the Venetians had guarded the Paſſes, leſt he ſhould eſcape. He wrote to King Laodiſlaus, who ſent him two Gallies, and fifty Men for a Convoy. But this ſmall number being too weak to force the Paſſes which were guarded by ſtrong Troops, he made his Eſcape all alone on Horſeback, being diſguis'd in the Habit of a Merchant, with two Footmen, and got to the two Gallies. In the mean time, the Guards ſtop'd Paul his Chamberlain, who Travell'd in a Red Habit with his Equipage; and it was very unhappy for this poor Eccleſiaſtick that he counterfeited the Pope, for he was taken Priſoner, robb'd, and receiv'd many Baſtinadoes. By theſe Blows they Extorted from him a Confeſſion, that he had 500 Florins ſow'd up in his Shirt, which were taken from him, and the next Day one of theſe that had robb'd him, in deriſion of Gregory, put on the Pontifical Habit which Paul had, and being Cloath'd with it, went on Horſeback into the City of Udine, giving the Benediction to the People by the way. The Equipage of Gregory was ſold, Paul was put in Priſon, ſome of thoſe that belong'd to his Court were abus'd; and others fearing the ſame Treatment, lay hid in the City, until they found a favourable opportunity to retire. In the mean time, Gregory arriv'd at Abruzzo, and took up his Reſidence at Caiete, under the protection of Laodiſlaus, having a very ſmall Court, becauſe no place acknowledg'd him but Apulia, and part of Tuſcany, and Liguria, and Emilia.

The flight of Gregory into the Kingdom of Naples.

Alexander V.

Alexander V. who was choſen at Piſa, by the Cardinals of the two Colleges, was a Greek, born in the Iſle of Candie: He never knew his Father or Mother, but while he was yet very young, and went about begging his Bread, he was taken up and entertain'd by an Italian Monk of the Order of Friars Minors, who was in that Iſle, who having taught him Latin, made him take the Habit of his Order, and carried him with him into Italy. From Italy he was ſent into England, to ſtudy at the Univerſity of Oxford, from whence he went to Paris, and took his Degrees, and commenc'd Dr. in Divinity. After this he went into Lombardy, and there falling into the Acquaintance of John Galeas, he was made by his Intereſt Biſhop of Vicenza, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Milan, then Cardinal, and at laſt Pope. He was of a generous and liberal Diſpoſition, and lov'd to make good Entertainments; at his Election he was Seventy Years Old. Balthazar Coſſa, the Cardinal Deacon, who held the City and Country of Bononia, in the quality of Legat from the Holy See, had a greater ſhare than any Man in all the Tranſactions at the Council of Piſa; by his Intereſt he procur'd him to be choſen Pope, but did himſelf really in effect govern during his Pontificat. He made no Reformation, but on the contrary he granted extraordinary Favours to all ſorts of Perſons, created new Officers in his Court, gave Diſpenſations contrary to Order, united and diſunited a great many Benefices, and permitted ſome to poſſeſs a great many of them, tho' they were incompatible. Theodorick de Niem, who gives us this Teſtimony of him, adds, That he was not a fit Man for Buſineſs, or managing Affairs, and upon that account he ſcarce ever heard the Advocates plead in the publick Conſiſtories, as the Popes had uſully done; That he had ſuch a fondneſs for the Clergy that were about him, that inſtead of diſtributing the Petitions among the ordinary Officers of Chancery, to make an Abridgment of them, he gave them to theſe Clergy-men, that they might have the profit of them; and becauſe they underſtood, nothing of theſe Matters, many Errors were committed during his Pontificate, which threw the Dataries Office into great Confuſion. The ſame Author obſerves alſo, That this Pope favour'd the Friars Minors after an extraordinary manner, by giving them publick and gainful Offices and beſtowing upon them vacant Biſhopricks and Benefices as much as he could. He renew'd in their Favours the Priviledges of Preaching and Confeſſing, granted to the Mendicant Orders, by Boniface the 8th, and John the 22d, and condemn'd ſome Propoſitions that prejudic'd and diminiſh'd their Power, by his Bull dated October the 10th, 1409. which made a great noiſe in the Univerſity of Paris, who threatned to cut off the Mendicant Orders from their Body, unleſs they would renounce this Bull; againſt which Gerſon made a publick Diſcourſe at a General Proceſſion.

Alexander V. was acknowledg'd for Pope by all Chriſtendom, except Apulia, and ſome part of Italy, which had not yet abandon'd Gregory, and the Kingdoms of Arragon, Caſtile and Scotland, and the States of Count Armagnac, who acknowledg'd Benedict. Germany was divided, for Robert King of the Romans oppos'd the owning of Alexander for Pope, becauſe in many of his Letters he gave the Title of King of the Romans, to Wenceſlaus, King of Bohemia; tho' he himſelf had Poſſeſſion of the Eſtate. But Alexander V. found a means to gain the Archbiſhop of Mayence, by making him Legatus Natus * to the Holy See in his own Province; and the other Prelates of Germany he gain'd to his ſide, by granting them all the Favours and Benefices they deſir'd of him, as alſo the German Lords by granting them any Diſpenſations for Marriage that they had a mind to. As to Italy, Rome was ſtill under the Power of Laodiſlaus, when Alexander V. was choſen; but Balthazar Coſſa having ſat down before it with an Army in September, 1409. ſtrengthned the Party of Paul of Urſini, gain'd the Governor of the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and ſo order'd Matters, That the Officers of Laodiſlaus were driven away, and the City of Rome in appearance pearance was reduc'd to the Obedience of Alexander, but in effect was under the Government of Paul of Urſins. The Court of Pope Alexander was then at Piſtoya, and he thought himſelf oblig'd to go to Rome, where the Romans expected him: But Balthazar Coſſa would carry him to Bohemia, under pretence that he was oblig'd to bring him thither, but really upon Deſign as 'tis thought, that himſelf might be choſen Pope after his Death (which he foreſaw would quickly happen) the Cardinals being then in a City whereof he was Maſter. Howſoever this was, 'tis certain the thing happen'd after this manner, for Alexander V. dying at Bohemia, May the 3d, 1410. Balthazar Coſſa, who beſides his own Intereſt, had a Recommendation from Louis of Anjou, King of Sicily, was choſen Pope a few Days after, and took upon him the Name of John XXIII. Alexander V. John the 23d Pope.

This Pope was of a conſiderable Family in Naples; he had been Cardinal, and was appointed Legate of the Holy See at Bohemia, by Boniface the 9th. He amaſs'd together great Riches in this Employment, by the Exactions and Tyrannies which he exercis'd in the City and Country of Bohemia, which he govern'd as an abſolute Sovereign. He contributed very much to the Meeting of the Council of Piſa, and the Election of Alexander V. and govern'd in his Name during his Pontificate.

The firſt Deſign which John XXIII. undertook, after he was advanc'd to the Holy See, was to deprive Laodiſlaus of the Kingdom of Naples, (which he had had a great mind to do for a long time, becauſe Laodiſlaus had been the cauſe of condemning his Brethren to Death) and to put Louis Duke of Anjou in Poſſeſſion of that Kingdom. For this end he rais'd an Army, and having join'd it with the Troops of this Prince, he march'd towards Capua. Laodiſlaus met them with an Army, and gave them Battle in May 1411. The Forces of Laodiſlaus were beaten; but the Conquerors being diverted with gathering the Spoil and Booty, gave an opportunity to Laodiſlaus, to eſcape into a Caſtle, and to the remainder of his Forces to make a Retreat. In the mean time, John XXIII. returning Triumphantly into Rome, and to ſhow his Contempt of his Enemies, he caus'd their Enſigns which he had taken, to be dragg'd thro' the Dirt after a Solemn Proceſſion which he made. But Louis of Anjou was no ſooner return'd into France, than Laodiſlaus repair'd his Loſſes, and ſtrengthned his Intereſt, by gaining to his Party the principal Commanders of the Pope's Army, and then he ſent an Army in the time of Harveſt to the very Gates of Rome, which was beat back at the firſt Onſet: But John XXIII. deſpairing of reducing Laodiſlaus by force, reſolv'd to gain him by Money: And therefore he entred upon a ſecret Treaty with him, which being concluded, Laodiſlaus gave Order to Angelus Corarius to depart out of his Dominions. He was forc'd to obey, and therefore he fled to Marca Ancona, to ſhelter himſelf under the protection of Charles Malateſta, who was the only Perſon that continued faithful to him. War between Laodiſlaus and John the 23d.

The War being quickly kindled again between Laodiſlaus and John XXIII. the former came with an Army to the Gates of Rome, in May 1413. which meeting with no Reſiſtance entred into the City; for the Romans hated the Pope, who had drawn great ſums of Money from the richeſt Men in the City. John XXIII. and all his Courtiers fled, and eſcap'd with all ſpeed to Sutri, Viterbo and Monteſiaſcone; and the Pope not thinking himſelf ſafe here, continued his Journey thro' Siena, as far as Florence, where he reſided until Morning; and afterwards paſſing thro' Bohemia, he came the laſt Day of this Month into Lombardy, to treat about the Meeting of a Council with Sigiſmund King of Hungary, who had been choſen King of the Romans by one Party of the Electors of the Empire, after the Death of Robert of Bavaria, which happen'd May 18th, 1410. The other Party of the Electors had choſen Jeſſe, Marquiſs of Moravia; but he dying in a ſhort time after, all their Suffrages were united in favour of Sigiſmund. John the 23d driven from Rome.

John XXIII. having ſent at the beginning of his Pontificate the Archbiſhop of Piſa's Legate into France, together with Nicolas de Robertis a Knight, and Jeffery de Peyruſſe a Doctor, to raiſe Money there for the Procurations and Depradations of the Eccleſiaſticks Deceas'd; The Univerſity of Paris oppos'd him herein, and maintain'd the Diſpoſal that was made of them by the King's Edict, in 1406. and ſolicited the Prelates, and other Univerſities to join with them in defeating this Deſign. But notwithſtanding theſe Efforts, it was reſolv'd that the Clergy of France ſhould grant the Pope a charitable Subſidy of half the Tenths of the Revenues of their Benefices; the Prelates conſented to it, and the Univerſity yielded, becauſe this Subſidy was granted after that manner which it had offer'd at firſt. The Deſigns of John the 23d rejected in France.

The Legate came to Paris, and preſented to them a Bull of the Pope, wherein he declares after what manner he was choſen, and his good Intention to promote the Peace of the Church, and pray'd the Court to aſſiſt him. This Bull being read by the Clerk, Jeffery of Peryuſſe gave an account of the Expences the Pope had been at, to ſerve Louis Duke of Anjou, and aſſur'd them, That his Intention was to endeavour an Union of the Greek Church to the Latin, and to make Peace between the Kings of France and England, and to hold a Council at the time appointed by that of Piſa, to reform the Church both in its Head and Members. Upon the proſpect of this Council, the Clergy of France was Aſſembled at Paris, by Order of the King, to draw up ſome Memoirs which were to be carried to the Council, containing a Complaint of the exceſſive Taxes wherewith the Clergy of France were oppreſs'd. The Aſſembly was held in the Palace, where Benedict Gentian a Monk of St. Denis, ſpoke ſmartly againſt the Trouble which was given them by the Court of Rome; and particularly againſt the Penſions which the Cardinals rais'd upon the Churches of the Kingdom; againſt the Appeals to the Court of Rome, and about the Promotions of Strangers to Benefices; and ſhow'd, That theſe were the ways made uſe of to draw Money out of France. He beſeech'd the Aſſembly to conſider of theſe things; and Memorials of them were drawn up, which were entruſted with thoſe that were ſent to Conſtance.

While theſe things were a doing, a Letter from the Legate to the Pope's Secretary was intercepted, wherein he acquaints him, That the Members of Parliament pretended to be Exempt from Subſidies for the Benefices which they poſſeſs'd, and to have a Priviledge for this Exemption from the Holy See; and that the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction was wholly aboliſh'd, becauſe the Parliament took cognizance of Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes belonging to the Right of Poſſeſſion between Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, the Regulars, Biſhops, and even Cardinals themſelves. The Court was much offended with this Letter, order'd that an Information ſhould be drawn againſt it, and that the King's Advocate ſhould make a Diſcourſe againſt it in the preſence of His Majeſty and the Legate; and at laſt determin'd, That the Priviledge of not paying Tenths or Subſidies to the Pope ſhould be ſearch'd for in the Treaſury of the King's Papers; and that ſome ſhould remonſtrate to His Majeſty of what great Conſequence the pretenſion of the Legate was, that ſo for the future he might be forbid to maintain, That the King and his Judges, and particularly the Parliament, could not take cognizance of Cauſes belonging to the Right of poſſeſſing Benefices; and that, laſtly, the King ſhould be entreated to write about this Matter to the Pope and Cardinals. This is what paſt in the beginning of the Year 1411.

The next Year, the King, upon the Complaint of the Univerſity renew'd his Letters, by which he maintain'd thoſe that had been promoted to Benefices during the Neutrality: And to the end he might hinder the Traffick which had been made of the Benefices of the Kingdom by the Court of Rome; he, by the Advice of his Clergy and Univerſities ordain'd, That all Proviſions and Commendams of Churches ſhould be ſuperſeded in his Kingdom, and ſent an Expreſs to Pope John, for the redreſſing of this Grievance; which he neglecting to do, upon the Demand of the Proctor-General, and at the Solicitation of the Provoſt and Sheriffs of Paris, the Parliament and all the Courts of Juſtice being Aſſembled, with many Prelates and Members of the Univerſity, ordain'd, That the Edict made in the Month of February, 1406. ſhould be put in Execution, as to Elective Benefices; And this Decree of the Court was confirmed by the King's Council. This is what paſt in France, concerning the Pretenſions of the Court of Rome, from the Sitting of the Council of Piſa, to the Meeting of the Council of Conſtance, of which we are to give an account in the next Chapter.

CHAP. II.

The Hiſtory of the Council of Conſtance, and of the Schiſm of the Popes, until the Election of Martin V.

The appointing of the Council of Conſtance.

JOHN XXIII. ſeeing himſelf purſu'd by King Laodiſlaus, who had made himſelf Maſter of Rome, and of the Neighbouring Cities, and was preparing to Beſiege him even in Bononia, concluded with himſelf, That the only means of Deliverance and Safety that remain'd, was to put himſelf under the Protection of the Emperor Sigiſmund, and to call a Council by conſent with him. His Predeceſſor, when he Prorogu'd the Council of Piſa, had ordain'd, That another ſhould be held within three Years after: John XXIII. had pro forma, appointed it in the City of Rome, and had afterwards Prorogu'd it without appointing a place, or prefixing a time. Sigiſmund wrote to him to do nothing without Communicating it to his Ambaſſadors, whom he ſhould ſend unto him. Theſe Ambaſſadors found the Pope at Florence, and made divers Propoſals to him about holding of a Council. The Pope on his part, to expedite this Affair the more ſpeedily, ſent two Cardinals, and Manuel Chryſoloras to Sigiſmund, with Power to agree with him, as to the Place and Time of the Council; As to the Place they agreed upon the City of Conſtance; and as to the Time, that it ſhould be the 1ſt of November, in the next Year 1414. After this, the Pope having conferr'd with the Emperor, ratified what was agreed upon by his Legates, and call'd the Council to meet at Conſtance, November 1ſt, 1414. by his Bull dated at Lodi, November 2d, 1413. inviting the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Prelates of all Chriſtendom to be preſent in Perſon, or by their Deputies. Then he return'd to Bononia, where he rais'd Troops to oppoſe Laodiſlaus, who was coming to Beſiege him; but this Prince was ſeiz'd with a Diſeaſe which oblig'd him to return to Naples, where he died, leaving his Kingdom to Joan, the ſecond of that Name, his Siſter, the Widow of William of Auſtria.

This News was very joyful to Pope John XXIII. and his Court, who being now deliver'd from ſo formidable an Enemy, gave Orders for the ſecuring of Bononia, and then ſet forth for for Conſtance, October 1ſt, where he arriv'd on the 20th of the ſame Month. He open'd the Council November 16th, on which Day he held the firſt Seſſion, wherein after Reading of the Bull, by which they were call'd all together, Officers were appointed, and the next Seſſion was put off to the 17th of December, but it was not held till the next Year, becauſe a great number of Prelates and Princes, or their Ambaſſadors were expected. The appointing of the Council of Conſtance.

The Emperor Sigiſmond arriv'd there on Chriſtmas-Eve, and ſome time after, the Deputies of Gregory and Benedict, among whom there were ſome Anti-Cardinals. It was diſputed, whether they ſhould be receiv'd with their Red Hats; and for Peace ſake it was allow'd. The Ambaſſadors of the former offer'd in their Maſter's Name the way of Reſignation, but without having any Power in Writing to make it good: Thoſe of the latter ſpoke not ſo clearly, and preſented only an Agreement made between the Emperor, and the King of Arragon, to meet at Nice, in the Month of April, to confer together upon this Subject. Louis, Duke of Bavaria, who adher'd to Gregory's Party, arriv'd alſo at the Council, and there declar'd, That Gregory, and thoſe of his Obedience, were ready to embrace the way of Ceſſion, and that they would no ways hinder or delay the Union, nor any Endeavours for the Reformation of the Church in the Council, provided that John XXIII. ſhould not preſide in it, offering upon this Condition to ſubmit to the Judgment of the Council, whether Gregory conſented to it or no.

After theſe Propoſals, the Fathers of the Council conſulted among themſelves, and without Communicating the Matter to John XXXIII. concerning the means of putting an end to the Schiſm, and reforming the Church in its Head and Members; They all agreed, as to the Legality of the Council of Piſa, and yet the greater number were of Opinion, That John XXIII. ſhould renounce the Pontificat as well as Gregory and Benedict. Thoſe who were not of this Opinion, ſaid, That this was to impeach the Authority of the Council of Piſa, to treat a Lawful Pope, who was never ſuſpected of Hereſie, like depos'd Schiſmaticks; That no body could force him to renounce a certain Right, and he himſelf could not abandon his Right, without doing injury to his own Reputation, the Authority of the Council of Piſa, and the Church, whereof he was the Lawful Head; That there was another way of procuring Union, by condemning his Adverſaries, and their Adherents, and reducing them to Obedience by a War. To this it was anſwer'd, That altho' the Council of Piſa had been lawfully celebrated, and the Election of Alexander V. was Canonical; yet becauſe thoſe of the two other Obediences had not agreed to it upon the account of the difficulties about Right and Fact, it was expedient for avoiding theſe Diſputes, and procuring ſpeedily the Peace of the Church, that the three Competitors ſhould receed from their pretended Rights to the Pontifical Dignity; That this Ceſſion would no ways prejudice the Authority of the Council of Piſa, but rather eſtabliſh that which was the end and deſign of the Fathers of that Council; That altho' the Adverſaries of John XXIII. had been condemned, yet we might hearken to what they ſhould propoſe for promoting Peace; That altho' a lawful Pope, which had not been accus'd of any Crime, could not regularly be oblig'd to renounce the Pontificat; yet in the preſent Caſe, conſidering the difficulty there was otherwiſe to procure the Peace of the Church, he might be conſtrain'd to do it by the Univerſal Church, or by the Council which repreſented it; That the War which was propos'd for reducing the Competitors, was a means contrary to the Spirit of the Church, which would retard the Peace, and render it almoſt impoſſible. The opening of the Council of Conſtance.

It was alſo debated among the Fathers of the Council, who they were that had Right to give a Vote in the Council. Some maintain'd, That none but Biſhops, and other Prelates or Abbots, ought to be admitted to give a Vote: Againſt whom the Cardinals of Cambray, and St. Mark gave in Memorials, to prove, That Curates, Doctors, the Deputies of abſent Prelates, ought to be admitted to give their Votes, and even the Ambaſſadors of Princes, as to what concern'd the Schiſm, and the Peace of the Church, becauſe they were Intereſſed in it, and the Execution of their Decrees depended upon them.

After this, it was conſulted, whether Opinions ſhould be reckon'd in the Council by each ſingle Perſon, or by Nations: The Right and Cuſtom ſeem'd to be, to reckon Suffrages by the Poll, but becauſe there was almoſt a greater number of poor Biſhops from Italy alone, than of Prelates from all other Nations; it was alſo reſolv'd, That the Fathers of the Council ſhould be diſtributed into Five Nations, viz. Italy, France, Germany, England and Spain; that the things which were to be propos'd in the Council, ſhould be examin'd and determin'd by the Plurality of Voices in each Nation, and by the Cardinals in their College; and that afterwards they ſhould be reported to the Council to be there Decreed, according to the Plurality of the Votes of Nations.

John XXIII. being advertis'd of the Conſultations which were made among the Fathers of the Council, endeavour'd by all means to divert them, and to ſow Diviſion among them; but notwithſtanding his Attempts, the way of Ceſſion was decreed with the unanimous conſent of all the Nations. While theſe things were under Deliberation, an Italian Biſhop gave in a Memorial, containing many Heads of all ſorts of Crimes, of which he accus'd John XXIII. and deſir'd that the Information might be kept ſecret. The Nations of Germany, England and Poland, were of Opinion, That theſe Articles ſhould not be publiſh'd, and that this Information ſhould not be given in, which could only ſerve to diſgrace the Holy See, to ſcandalize the Church, and throw it into Confuſion, by giving occaſion to doubt of the validity of the Proviſions and Promotions that had been made. Others maintain'd, That it was convenient to inform the Council of theſe Facts, and that it was eaſie to find Proof of them, ſo much the rather becauſe the greateſt part of them were notorious. John XXIII. knowing what had paſt, was mightily perplex'd, and at firſt reſolv'd to go in Perſon to the Council, and there to own thoſe things whereof he was accus'd, (if we may believe Theodorick de Niem) but ſtill to maintain that the Pope could not be depos'd, except for the Crime of Hereſie. His Friends having remonſtrated, That it was not convenient to take this Method, he chang'd his Opinion; and the Fathers of the Council did not enter upon the Examination of theſe Accuſations, but reſolv'd to propoſe to him the way of Ceſſion. John XXIII. knowing the Reſolution which they had taken, ſent for them on the 16th of February: And as to the Propoſal which was made to him to Sign the Papal Dignity, becauſe the other Competitors would make the ſame Ceſſion, and there was no other way to procure the Peace and Union of the Church, he anſwer'd with Gravity, and in appearance with Joy, That he would voluntarily do what they deſir'd, provided the two other Competitors were willing to do the ſame: And on a ſudden he cauſes the Cardinal of Florence to read a Writing, wherein he declares, That altho' he was not oblig'd by any Vow, Oath or Promiſe to make the following Ceſſion, yet he was ready for the Repoſe of Chriſtendom, voluntarily and freely to reſtore Peace to the Church by the way of Reſignation, if Peter de Luna, and Angelus Corarius, condemn'd of Hereſie and Schiſm by the Council of Piſa, and depos'd from the Papal Dignity, would ſufficiently and validly renounce the Right which they pretended to it; and that in ſuch a manner, in ſuch circumſtances, and at ſuch a time, as ſhould be declar'd and determin'd, between him or his Deputies, and the Deputies of the Council. Theſe Offers gave great Joy to the Fathers of the Council, but having examin'd them, they found that they were not ſufficient, becauſe they were made upon a Condeſcenſion which depended upon the Will of the two Competitors; and if it ſhould happen, That one of the two would once reſign, the Council would have labour'd in vain: They demanded therefore from John XXIII. another Declaration more preciſe than this, and he gave them a ſecond expreſs'd after the ſame manner, with a Promiſe to make a Bull of it; but he added to it, That the Proceſs made in the Council of Piſa, againſt Peter de Luna, and Angelus Corarius, ſhould be renew'd and aggravated, tho' the Execution of it ſhould be ſuſpended, until time were given them to make a Reſignation; and that the King of the Romans, the Princes preſent in Council, the Ambaſſadors of King's abſent, and the whole Council ſhould engage to aſſiſt him with Spiritual and Temporal Weapons, in caſe the two Competitors would not reſign. This ſecond Declaration was judg'd yet more inſufficient than the former, becauſe he did not offer to renounce unleſs the others did ſo, and he would have the Proceſs againſt the two others renew'd. The Nations therefore having examin'd theſe two Declarations, and found them inſufficient, did earneſtly importune John XXIII. to give another more full and punctual; but he put them off from Day to Day, and endeavour'd in the mean time to perſuade the Members of the Council to eſpouſe his Intereſt, treating theſe even with reproachful Language that ſpoke to him upon this Subject. At laſt, one was drawn up which was approv'd by three Nations, and preſented to him by Sigiſmund, which he took time to conſider of, and reſolv'd at laſt to accept of it. After he had taken this Reſolution, the Prelates of four Nations came to him the 1ſt of March, in the Year 1415. in his Palace, where the Emperor was preſent, and offer'd to him in the name of the Council, by the Patriarch of Antioch, the Declaration they had drawn up, which they pray'd him to accept of. John XXIII. having taken and read it, told them, That his Deſign was always to give Peace unto the Church, and that he was come for this end to Conſtance, that he had always voluntarily and freely offer'd the way of Reſignation; and after that he pronounc'd the Declaration which was conceiv'd in theſe Words.

John XXIII. his Renunciation of the Papal Dignity.

" I John XXIII. Pope, do acknowledge, promiſe, vow and ſwear to God, to the Church, " and this Holy Council, That I will voluntarily and freely give Peace to the Church, by " the way of my mere Reſignation of the Pontificat; and this I will do, and effectually per- " form according to the Determination of this preſent Council, ſo ſoon as Peter de Luna " call'd Benedict XXIII. and Angelus Corarius, call'd Gregory XII. in their Obedience, ſhall " reſign by themſelves, or their lawful Proctors, the Right they pretend to have to the Papal " Dignity; and alſo in all other Caſes of Ceſſion, or of Death, or otherwiſe; wherein my " Reſignation may procure the Union of the Church, and the Extirpation of the Schiſm. When he had finiſh'd this Declaration, the Emperor thank'd him in the Name of the Council, for his good Reſolution, and a Seſſion was appointed on the Morrow, that he might ſolemnly renew it in the Council. This was done in that Seſſion, wherein John XXIII. repeated the former Declaration in the ſame Words, ſwore to put it in Execution, and order'd it to be drawn up in the form of a Bull.

The Fathers of the Council having drawn this Declaration from John XXIII. conſider'd of the means how to reduce Peter de Luna; and for this Reaſon pray'd the Emperor, That he would confer with the King of Arragon, when he ſhould have full Power to do it from John XXIII. who refus'd to grant it him, offering to go himſelf in Perſon into that City, where Peter de Luna ſhould be preſent, to treat and agree with him upon the Conditions of Union. The Council foreſeeing plainly, That this was only a pretence to elude the Execution of the promis'd Reſignation, and that it was to be fear'd, leſt the abſence of the Pope ſhould cauſe the Diſſolution of the Council, and the Enterview between the two Competitors would be of no effect, did therefore oppoſe it ſtoutly. In the mean time, Frederick, Duke of Auſtria, came to Conſtance, pretending that he was to go further; and ſaid nothing of the League he had made with John XXIII. or that he was come upon his account. Nevertheleſs the Report ſpread immediately in the City, That he was come to favour the Eſcape of John XXIII. But he, the better to cover his Deſign, told the Emperor, That the Air of this City was diſagreeable to him; The Emperor anſwer'd him, That he had Houſes in the Country round about the City, where he might reſide; but pray'd him, That he would not go away until the Council was ended, or if he had a mind to do it, that he would not fly away ſecretly and indecently, for his Deſign was to obſerve the ſafe Conduct he had given him, and even to accompany him where-ever he would go. John XXIII. promis'd him, That he would not retire until the Council was ended; but did not keep his Promiſe, for he went out of Conſtance in a Diſguiſe on the 21ſt of March, and retir'd to the Caſtle of Schafhauſen, which was diſtant only four Leagues, belonging to the Duke of Auſtria, who had given him his Protection. The Cardinals of Piſa, Plaiſance, Challant, Brande, Bar, and ſome others retir'd alſo from Conſtance on Palm-Sunday, and came to John XXIII. with many of his own Officers.

The Council of Conſtance.

The flight of John XXIII.

Notwithſtanding this Retreat, the third Seſſion of the Council was held on Monday the 25th of March, at which the Cardinal of Cambray preſided, and the Emperor was preſent in his Imperial Robes. After Maſs, and the uſual Ceremonies, the Cardinal of Florence read a Declaration in the Name of the Council, containing the following Articles. Firſt, That this Council was juſtly and lawfully call'd, open'd and celebrated. Secondly, That the Retreat of the Pope, and ſome other Prelates, whoſoever they be, does not at all diſſolve it, but that it continued in full Authority, whatſoever Ordinance might be made to the contrary. Thirdly, That this Council ought not, and ſhall not ſeparate, until the Schiſm be Extirpated, and the Church Reform'd in Faith and Manners, in the Head and its Members. Fourthly, That it ſhall not be tranſlated from one place to another, except for a reaſonable Cauſe, approv'd by the Advice and Determination of the Council. Fifthly, That the Prelates, and other Perſons who ought to be preſent at the Council, ſhall not retire before it be ended, except for a reaſonable Cauſe, which ſhall be examin'd and approv'd by the Deputies of the Council, with the permiſſion of thoſe who have Authority; in which Caſe, they ſhall transfer the Power to thoſe who remain. All theſe Articles were approv'd by the Aſſembly, and an Act was made of them.

On Wedneſday following, four of the Cardinals, who went to Schafhauſen, return'd to Conſtance; and on this Day there was a general Congregation in preſence of the Emperor, in which ſix Cardinals maintain'd, That the Council was diſſolv'd by the Abſence and Retreat of the Pope. They were anſwer'd in the Name of the Council with freedom and boldneſs, by many Perſons of great Authority and Underſtanding, that the Pope was not above the Council, but inferior to it, which rais'd a great Diſpute among them. After this, there was found a Placard fix'd upon the Gate of the great Church of Conſtance, by which all Officers of the Pope were enjoin'd, under Form of Excommunication and Deprivation of their Offices, to come within a Week to Schafhauſen. This Placard was brought into the Council, and rais'd great Complaints of the Biſhops againſt the Cardinals, who accus'd them of returning to diſturb the Peace. The Cardinals ſaid, That they had no hand in this Placard, but that they knew it was to be publiſh'd to Morrow at the ſame place; nevertheleſs they prorogu'd the Time appointed in this Citation.

On the Morrow, being the 28th of March, the Emperor propos'd to the Prelates, the Reaſons which John XXIII. alledg'd for hindring the continuance of the Council, which were rejected as frivolous and inſufficient; and they all cry'd with one Voice, That notwithſtanding this, the Seſſion does hold, which caus'd new Diſputes between the Cardinals and the Nations.

On Friday, being the 29th of the ſame Month, the Nations of Germany, France and England, having reſolv'd to hold a Seſſion on the Morrow, and rang'd the Articles in order which they were to determine; the Cardinals Aſſembled in the Epiſcopal Palace of Conſtance, and having conſulted among themſelves, they offer'd to the Emperor in the Pope's Name to appoint a Proctor, together with the Cardinals, for the Reſignation of the Pontificat. So that two Cardinals, by agreement with the Emperor might reſign, even againſt his Will, and that his Court ſhould not be tranſlated from Conſtance, without conſulting the Council. They promis'd to be preſent at the Seſſion which was to be held on the Morrow, provided no other Regulations were made there. The Emperor having receiv'd theſe Offers, told them, That he would Communicate them to the Nations that were Aſſembled in the Cloiſter of St. Francis. At the ſame time the News arriv'd, That the Pope fearing to be Beſieg'd by the Emperor in Schafhauſen, had retir'd by himſelf alone to the Caſtle of Laufemburgh, (the Cardinals that were with him remaining ſtill at Schafhauſen) and that he had made Proteſtations before a Notary, againſt all that he had promis'd, and ſworn at Conſtance, as being forc'd to it by violence and fear. The Emperor having receiv'd the Anſwer of the Nations, reported to the Cardinals, That they had refus'd their Propoſal, that no Reſolution ſhould be made at the Council upon any other Articles, than what the Cardinals had propos'd; but that he had prevail'd for delaying the Seſſion till Ten a Clock, and ſo between this time and that, they might ſee if they could agree.

On

The Council of Conſtance.

On Saturday the 30th of March, the Emperor, the Cardinals, and the Nations being come into the Epiſcopal Palace of Conſtance, there was a great Diſpute about the Articles which were to be determin'd in the Seſſion. The Univerſity of Paris pray'd the Emperor, That he would not make War upon the Duke of Auſtria; which he would not agree to. Altho' the Cardinals and the Nations had not agreed, yet Maſs was ſaid for holding the Seſſion, and the Prelates of the Nations were preparing to hold it alone, when the Cardinals of St. Mark and Florence deſir'd to have a Conference with the Deputies of the Nations; and at laſt agreed with them upon the following Articles, which were read in the Council by the Cardinal of Florence. Firſt, That the Synod being lawfully Aſſembled in the name of the Holy Ghoſt, which conſtituted the General Council, and repreſented the whole Catholick Church Militant, had its Power immediately from Jeſus Chriſt; and that every Perſon of whatſoever State or Dignity, even the Pope himſelf, is oblig'd to obey it in what concerns the Faith, the Extirpation of Schiſm, and the General Reformation of the Church in its Members and its Head. Thus is the firſt Article expreſs'd in the greateſt part of the Editions of the Acts of the Council of Conſtance. In ſome, theſe Words, As to what concerns the Faith, are not to be found; and in ſome Manuſcripts of the Vatican Library theſe are omitted, For the Reformation of the Church in its Head and Members; but they are found in many other Manuſcripts, even thoſe that were written at the time of the Council, in all the Manuſcripts of the next Seſſion; and Gerſon relates it in the ſame Words, in two Diſcourſes which he ſpoke in the Council; from whence it appears to be a Calumny in Schelſtrate, to accuſe, as he does, the Fathers of the Council of Baſil, of being the Authors of this Addition; and, beſides, it is not neceſſary to prove that the Council of Conſtance has determin'd, That the Pope is inferior to the Council, ſince the preceding Words, That every Perſon of whatſoever State or Dignity he be, even the Pope himſelf, is oblig'd to obey it, are alone ſufficient to eſtabliſh this Doctrin. In fine, tho' there were ſome difficulty in this Seſſion about this Clauſe, that is fully taken away in the next, where this Decree was read again, and repeated with this Addition, as Schelſtrate agrees, and which is prov'd by the Manuſcript Acts which he himſelf has produc'd.

The Second Article publiſh'd in the fourth Seſſion, contains, That John XXIII. cannot change the Officers of the Court of Rome, nor conſtrain them to follow him without the leave and conſent of the Council, and that all which he can do againſt them upon this account ſhall be Null.

The Third, That all Proceſſes made, or to be made by the Pope or his Officers, to the prejudice of the Council ſhall be Null.

The Fourth, That three Deputies ſhall be choſen out of each Nation, to examine the Cauſes of thoſe who ſhall have a mind to Retire, and to proceed againſt them who ſhall depart without leave.

The Fifth, That the better to promote the Union, there ſhall be no new Creation of Cardinals, and to prevent the Antedating of any ſuch Creation, none ſhall be acknowledg'd for Cardinals, but thoſe who were publickly known to be ſuch, before the Pope Retir'd from Conſtance.

Theſe Articles were approv'd by the Cardinals and the Prelates of the Nations, by the Emperor, the other Princes preſent, and the Ambaſſadors of thoſe that were abſent. Towards Night, Renaud de Carnet, Archbiſhop of Rhemes, reported to the Council, that being ſent by the Ambaſſadors of France to Schafhauſen, to enquire of the Pope the reaſon of his Retreat, the Pope had told him, That he would not return until he had receiv'd an Anſwer by the Cardinal of Challant, who came to him ſome time after; and he gave him four Briefs, the firſt addreſs'd to the Emperor, the ſecond to the Cardinals, the third to the Ambaſſador of France, and the fourth to the Deputies of the Univerſity of Paris; That upon his return to Conſtance, he had put them in the Hands of thoſe to whom they were addreſs'd; and at the ſame time told them, That the Pope had order'd him to declare, that he was not forc'd to Retire from Conſtance by violence or by fear, or by any fault of the Emperor, but only upon the account of his Health, and that he offer'd to perform what he had promis'd in the Council; That he had a love for the Emperor, and deſir'd to have a Conference with him, if he would go to Nice, and meet Peter de Luna, to conſider of the means to promote Peace; That 'twas true he had not receiv'd this Order from the Pope's own Mouth, but the Cardinal of Challant had deliver'd it to him in the Pope's Name. This Cardinal being preſent, acknowledg'd the thing to be ſo, and that the Pope had given him this Order; but that he was to tell him, That the Pope did not retire for fear of any Violence from the Emperor, but for fear of ſome great Men in his Court.

The Saturday following, being the 6th of April, if we may believe the Manuſcript Acts publiſh'd by Schelſtrate, there were ſome Debates between the Cardinals and the Nations, concerning the manner in which the Articles of the fourth Seſſion were drawn up; but at laſt they came to an Agreement upon this Point. Only ſome Cardinals abſented themſelves, and others made a Proteſtation, becauſe they hop'd that John XXIII. would in good earneſt make a Reſignation, and they thought it would be convenient to wait ſome time longer, until the Intention of John XXIII. were more fully diſcover'd. But notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance the Seſſion was held, and many Cardinals were preſent at it; The Cardinal of Urſins preſided at it, and the Articles decreed by the four Nations, were read by Andrew Biſhop Elect of Poſnania: The firſt is a Repetition of the firſt Article of the preceding Seſſion. The ſecond imports, That thoſe who would not obey the Ordinances and Statutes of this General Council, or any other, whatever State, Condition or Dignity they were of, even the Popes themſelves not excepted, ſhall be put under Penance, and puniſhed according to Law. The third and fourth are a Repetition of the ſecond and third Articles of the fourth Seſſion. The fifth is a Declaration that the Pope and the other Prelats of the Council had been, and were now perfectly free. The ſixth, That the Pope was bound to renounce the Pontificate not only in the Caſes expreſs'd in his own Declaration, but in all other Caſes, wherein his Renunciation might bring great Benefit to the Church, and procure the Union, and that in ſuch Caſes the Pope was bound to agree to the Declaration and Definition of the Council. The 7th, That if the Pope, being requir'd by the Council to Renounce the Pontificate for the Peace of the Church, would not, or ſhould delay to do it, he ought to be look'd upon as one that had faln from the Pontifical Dignity, to whom no Obedience was due. The eighth, That the Retreat of the Pope from the City of Conſtance was unlawful, and prejudicial to the Peace and Union of the Church, and that he ought to be ſummon'd to return and perform his Promiſe, with a Declaration that if he did not return within the time appointed by the Council, they would proceed againſt him as a Favourer of Schiſm, and ſuſpected of Hereſy. The ninth, That if the Pope would return and effectually perform what he had promis'd, Aſſurance ſhould be given him, That he ſhould neither be arreſted nor impriſon'd, nor moleſted in his Perſon or Goods, before or after the Renunciation, but that he ſhould enjoy perfect Freedom and Security. The Council of Conſtance.

After this ſome preparatory Articles were read concerning the Errors of John Huſs; and then it was reſolv'd to write to all Princes in the Name of the Council, concerning the Flight of John XXIII. and that the Emperor ſhould be entreated to endeavour his Return to Conſtance, that he might perform what he had promis'd to the Church and Council, provided ſtill that he were left at Freedom and treated with Honour. The Emperor anſwer'd, That he knew the Pope was in the Caſtle of Laufemberg, in the Hands of the Duke of Auſtria, but he did not know whether he would return, or if the Duke would permit him to come; that however it might happen, he was ready to do what the Council deſir'd, to write unto him and pray him to return, and ſend to him a ſafe Conduct; or if that would not do, to go himſelf in Perſon and bring him to the Council, either with his conſent or againſt it. The Council approv'd this Reſolution. The Emperor added, That he had ſent ſome Troops to the City of Schafhauſen, and order'd them to offer ſafe Conducts to the Cardinals and Officers of the Court of Rome that were there; who made Anſwer, That they would not return, nor follow John XXIII. but they would return to Rome, and that the Cardinals who were of Conſtance were of the ſame Opinion. Then the Cardinal of Florence declar'd, That 'twas true they had reſolv'd, in caſe the Pope would reſign, to defend him; but if he would not, they would abandon him and continue at the Council; That having no certainty whether he would hold to the Reſolution he had made, they had always taken care to preſerve his Honour, but that they knew nothing of the Cardinals deſign to return to Rome. In fine, it was concluded, That the Emperor might ſtop thoſe who ſhould endeavour to retire from Conſtance in a diſguis'd Habit.

The Decree made in theſe two Seſſions concerning the Authority of the Council above the Pope, did plainly decide the Queſtion, and ſubjected the Pope, as well as to Faith as Manners, to the Judgment of a General Council. And this ought not to be underſtood only of a time of Schiſm, or in caſe the Pope were doubtful, but generally in all other Caſes; 1. Becauſe the Words of the Council are general; 2. They import that all the World, even the Pope himſelf, is oblig'd to obey the Council, not only as to what concerns the extirpation of the Schiſm, but alſo as to the Reformation of the Church in its Head and Members, as well in Doctrin as Manners; 3. Becauſe they ſpeak not only of this particular Council, but of any other Council lawfully aſſembled; 4. Becauſe they contain general Penalties againſt all that ſhould not obey the Council, of whatſoever Dignity they were; 5. Becauſe they deduce the Authority of the Council above the Pope from its repreſentation of the Church, and from its Infallibility, and this agrees to all general Councils at what time ſoever they were celebrated; 6. Becauſe the Council acknowledges John XXIII. for lawful and undoubted Pope. From all which it appears, That there can be no place to doubt but this Decree was General. A Defence of the Council of Conſtance concerning the Authority of a Council.

The Authority of this Decree cannot any longer be diſputed, ſince it was made in full Council, after the Matter was reſolv'd upon by the Nations, and with the unanimous conſent of all the Fathers; for the Proteſtation of the Cardinals did not concern this Article, but had a particular Regard to the Perſon of John XXIII. In fine, all the Decrees of the Council of Conſtance being approv'd by John XXIII. in the 12th Seſſion, and by Martin V. in the 44th and 45th, without any exception; it cannot be doubted but this which was one of the principal Articles was comprized in the general Approbation, and conſequently that it has the force of a Law. And even in the Bull of Martin V. againſt the Errors of Wicliff, there are Articles wherein this Decree is particularly referr'd to; and in the 41ſt the Authority of the Univerſal Church is diſtinguiſh'd from that of the Pope, and there it is ordain'd, That the Univerſal Church, or the General Council, have a Sovereign Authority indefinitely; whereas 'tis only ſaid of the Pope, that he hath a Primacy over other particular Churches, which amounts to the ſame thing with the Deciſion of the Council.

The 6th Seſſion was held on the 17th of April, and there an Inſtrument of Procuration was read, which they would have Pope John XXIII. to grant for renouncing the Papal Dignity; and

Deputies

The Council of Conſtance Deputies were nam'd, viz. two Cardinals and two Prelats of each Nation, to ſummon him to come to the Council, that he might perform what he had promiſed, or to name the Proctors whom the Council ſhould appoint him, for executing the Procuration whereof the Council had ſent him a Model, with a Power, in caſe he ſhould refuſe, to cite him to the Council. One of the Deputies of the Univerſity of Paris, read in this Seſſion ſome Letters written in the Name of the Univerſity to the Pope, and to the Nation of Italy, wherein they exhort the Pope to return to the Council, and voluntarily to reſign the Pontifical Dignity. The Deputies of the Conncil went to meet John XXIII. at Fribourg in Swiſſerland, whither he had retir'd, and executed their Commiſſion by ſummoning him to name Proctors for renouncing the Pontificate, and declaring that otherwiſe the Council would proceed againſt him and Depoſe him. He anſwer'd them ſharply, That he would ſend his Inſtrument of Procuration to the Council, which he did: But that which he ſent was not judg'd ſufficient. In the mean time he propos'd divers Conditions which he deſir'd they would engage to make good in caſe of Reſignation, viz. That he ſhould be Legat a Latere, to the Pope that ſhould be choſen in Italy; That he ſhould have a Sovereign Power over the County of Bolonia, and receive a certain Revenue from the Cities in it, and that he ſhould not be ſubjected, nor oblig'd to give an Account of his Conduct to any Body.

The Council perceiving that John XXIII. deſign'd nothing elſe, but how to find out ways to avoid the Reſignation, and that he refus'd to come to the Council, or give a ſufficient Procuration, began to proceed againſt him in the 7th Seſſion held the 2d of May, wherein it was reſolv'd, That John XXIII. and his Favourers ſhould be cited by a publick Proclamation to appear within 9 Days, to anſwer to the Crimes of Hereſy, Schiſm, Simony, waſting of the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, and other Crimes whereof he was accuſed; and it was ordain'd, That his Flight from Conſtance ſhould be declar'd prejudicial to the Church, ſcandalous and odious, to be a Means of diſturbing the Union and Peace of the Church, and confirming the Schiſm, and to be contrary to his Promiſes and Oaths. This Citation made the Cardinals return to Conſtance, and the greateſt part of the Officers of the Court of Rome who were at Schaffhauſen, or in the Retinue of John XXIII. Frederick Duke of Auſtria, ſeeing himſelf purſued by the Forces of the Emperor Sigiſmund, who had invaded his Dominions, return'd to Conſtance on the laſt Day of April. He begg'd Pardon of the Emperor on the 4th of May in the 8th Seſſion of the Council, and promis'd him, That he would make the Pope return to Conſtance, and ſubmit to all that he ſhould be decreed by the Council, on condition that no Violence ſhould be offer'd to his Perſon, or his Goods; and conſented to remain in the mean time an Hoſtage, until the Pope ſhould come to Conſtance, or to any other place that the Emperor ſhould appoint. The remainder of this Seſſion was ſpent in proceeding to the Condemnation of the Errors of Wicliff.

In the ninth Seſſion, which was held the 13th of May, the Proctors of the Council demanded, That in purſuance of the Citation which had been made to John XXIII. and his Adherents, the Proceſs ſhould go on againſt him, and Commiſſioners ſhould be nam'd to give Inſtructions for it. The Cardinal of Florence roſe up and ſaid, That the Pope had ſent a Bull to the Cardinals, in which he nam'd for his Proctors three among them, viz. Peter of Cambray, William of St. Mark, Cardinal-Prieſts, and himſelf Cardinal-Deacon, to appear in Council, and anſwer the Accuſations propos'd againſt him. That theſe Cardinals being unwilling to accept of this Procuration, he had publiſh'd a Brief exhorting them to do it; but notwithſtanding they would not be his Proctors, and for his own part he renounc'd it: The Cardinal of St. Mark made the ſame Declaration; whereupon the Sollicitors of the Council remonſtrated, That the Citation being Perſonal, he ought to appear in Perſon, and not by a Proctor. They deſir'd, That two Cardinal-Deacons and five Prelats ſhould be ſent to the Gate of the Church, to know whether John XXIII. and his Adherents were there, and would appear. The Cardinals refus'd to go, but the other Prelats went thither and ſummon'd three times John XXIII. who appear'd not. An Act was made of theſe Citations, and the Council nam'd Commiſſioners to draw up the Proceſs. Towards the end of the Seſſions the Emperor and the Deputies of Five Nations, preſented the Copy of a Bull granted by Angelus Corarius, call'd Gregory XII. to Charles Malateſta of Rimini in his Obedience, wherein he gave him Power to conſent in his Name to what ſhould be done in the Council: The Emperor gave it to the Deputies to be examin'd, that if it were any ways defective or inſufficient, they might return it to Charles, who ſhould cauſe it to be amended, as the Council ſhould judge convenient.

In the 10th Seſſion, which was held the 14th of May, after they had again call'd for John XXIII. the Commiſſioners reported the Depoſitions of the Witneſſes, and told the Council, It was ſufficiently prov'd that John XXIII. had waſted the Revenues of the Church; that he was a Simoniack, a ſcandalous Perſon, and a Diſturber of the Faith, and that as ſuch he ought to be declar'd ſuſpended from the government of the Church. Upon this Demand, which was made by the Sollicitor and the Deputies of Nations, the Council declar'd him depriv'd of the Adminiſtration of the Revenues of the Church, as well to Spiritual as to Temporal Affairs, and forbad any to obey him, reſerving ſtill the Proceſs againſt him to Depoſe him entirely. This Sentence of Suſpenſion was read by the Patriarch of Antioch, and approv'd by all the Fathers of the Council.

On Saturday the 25th of May the 11th Seſſion was held, wherein the Sollicitors of the Council preſented in writing the Heads of an Accuſation they had to propoſe againſt John XXIII. containing an infinite number of Crimes, that were either notorious or prov'd by Witneſſes, as Lewd-neſs and Diſorders in his Youth, the purchaſing of Benefices by Simony, his advancement to the Dignity of a Cardinal by the ſame means, his Tyranny while he was Legate at Bononia, his Inceſts and Adulteries while he was in that City, his Poyſoning of Alexander V. and his own Phyſician, his Contempt of the Divine Offices after he was Pope, his neglecting to recite the Canonical Prayers, and to practiſe the Faſts, Abſtinences and Ceremonies of the Church, his denying Juſtice, and oppreſſing the Poor, his ſelling Benefices and Eccleſiaſtical Dignities to thoſe that bid moſt, his authorizing an infinite number of dreadful Abuſes in diſtributing of Preferments, and committing a Thouſand and a Thouſand Cheats; his ſelling Bulls, Indulgences, Diſpenſations, and other Spiritual Graces, his waſting the Patrimony of the Church of Rome, and mortgaging that of other Churches, his Male-adminiſtration of the Spiritual and Temporal Affairs of the Church; and laſtly, his breaking the Oath and Promiſe he had made to renounce the Pontificat, by retiring ſhamefully from Conſtance, to maintain and continue the Schiſm. At the end of each Article, the number and quality of the Witneſſes that prov'd it was expreſs'd, and a Remark was made from time to time of the Advice that had been given him to amend, notwithſtanding which he had ſtill continu'd in the ſame Diſorders. The Council of Conſtance.

While the Proceſs was carry'd on againſt John XXIII. in the Council, the Pope having fled from place to place, and being abandon'd by the Duke of Auſtria, was conducted from Fribourgh, by Order of the Council, to the Caſtle of Celle, two Leagues diſtant from Conſtance; from whence he wrote on the 26th of this Month a very ſubmiſſive Letter to the Emperor, and ſign'd a Writing, wherein he promis'd to ſubmit to what ſhould be ordain'd by the Council. The next Day, the Deputies of the Council went to meet him, and having repeated to him the Heads of the Charge that was given in againſt him, they requir'd him to declare, Whether he would oppoſe the Continuation of the Proceſs, or anſwer theſe Accuſations; he declar'd, That he had always labour'd for the Union of the Church, in the time of the Council of Piſa, and ever ſince that time, that he was heartily ſorry for his ſhameful departure from Conſtance; That he had no Defence to offer againſt what was objected to him; That he was ready to perform the Promiſe he had made and ſign'd the Day before, and to conform in every thing to the Determination of the Council; That he approv'd and ratify'd the Proceſs made againſt him by the Council; That he would make no other Defence againſt the Heads of his Charge, but by acknowledging that the Council of Conſtance was moſt Holy, which could not Err; and that it was a Continuation of that at Piſa, which he would never contradict, tho' he were at Bononia, or in any other place; That he confeſs'd he had no Right to the Pontifical Dignity. The Depoſitions of the Witneſſes were read to him, to which he made no other Anſwer, but that the Council ſhould be his Defence. He was cited to appear on the Morrow at Council, there to hear his Sentence; he ſaid, That he approv'd and confirm'd it befor-hand, only he recommended himſelf to the Council, and threw himſelf wholly upon them, both to take care of his Reputation, and provide for his Subſiſtence.

The Biſhop of Lavaur, who ſpoke in behalf of the Deputies, to Pope John XXIII. made his Report to the Council in the 12th Seſſion, held on May the 29th, of the Anſwers he had receiv'd; and afterwards, upon the Demand of the Proctor the Biſhop of Arras read a Decree, in which the Council declar'd, That in caſe the Holy See ſhould be vacant, none ſhould proceed to the Election of a Pope, without the advice and conſent of the General Council; and that if any were choſen otherwiſe, no Body ſhould obey him. After this Declaration, the Definitive Sentence of the Council was read againſt John XXIII. wherein it was declar'd, That the Clandeſtine Retreat of the Pope out of the City of Conſtance, was unlawful, ſcandalous, tending to the diſturbance of the Peace and Union of the Church, and to continue the Schiſm, contrary to the Vow, Promiſe and Oath he had made to God, to the Church and the Council; that he was a notorious Schiſmatick, a waſter of the Revenues of the Church, a bad Adminiſtrator of Spiritual and Temporal Revenues; that he had brought a Scandal upon the Church by his Diſorders; that becauſe he had not amended after Admonition, he ought to be depriv'd of his Papal Dignity and depos'd, of which now the Council did actually deprive him and depoſe him; and declar'd, That all the Faithful were abſolv'd from their Oath, and the Obedience due to him; forbad him to acknowledge or call him Pope; condemn'd him to be confin'd to a certain place, under the Guards of Sigiſmund, King of the Romans and Hungary; and reſerv'd to themſelves a Power of impoſing other Penalties which his Crimes deſerv'd, as ſhould be agreed upon either according to the rigor of Juſtice, or the mitigation of Mercy. In a third Decree, the Council forbad to chooſe any of the three for Pope, who now pretended a Right to the Pontificat, and in caſe any of them ſhould be choſen, it declar'd the Election Null, and forbad all Perſons to obey him, of whatſoever Condition they were. After the reading of theſe Acts, Cardinal Viviers, Preſident of the Council, enquir'd if any one would contradict this Sentence; and no Body offering to oppoſe it, it was approv'd in the name of the College of Cardinals; and afterwards the Deputies of the five Nations, and generally all thoſe who were preſent at the Council, declar'd, That they approv'd it. The Cardinal of Florence had a mind to read a Writing, which appear'd to be ſome Proteſtation, but all the reſt oppos'd it, and he was forc'd to hold his Peace. After this, the Seals of Balthazar Coſſa were broken, being preſented by the Archbiſhop of Riga, Vice Chancellor. The Depoſition of John XXIII.

kind only; and it was ordain'd, That this way ſhall be obſerv'd, and obtain the force of a Law, which cannot be rejected or alter'd without the Authority of the Church, and that all thoſe who diſobey'd ſhall be proceeded againſt. In this Seſſion, Commiſſioners were appointed, to proceed againſt Hereticks.

The Renunciation of Gregory XII.

In the Fourteenth Seſſion, held July the 4th, at which the Emperor preſided, the Cardinal of Raguſa, and Charles of Malateſta, Lord of Rimini, preſented to the Council a Bull of Angelus Corarius, call'd by thoſe of his Obedience Gregory XII. wherein he approv'd and authoriz'd the Council, and all that it ſhould do; together with an Inſtrument, whereby he Empower'd Charles Malateſta to Act in his Name, and to do whatever he ſhould judge convenient; and another Inſtrument Authorizing all that the Council ſhould do. Theſe Inſtruments being read by the Cardinal of Raguſa, the Council approv'd them ſo far as was needful, united the College of Cardinals of Gregory XII. to that of the Cardinals of John XXIII. and ordain'd, That in the Acts which ſhould hereafter be paſs'd in the Council, no mention ſhould be made of the Pope or Holy See, but only of the Years of the Emperor Sigiſmund. Afterwards was read a Bull of Gregory, containing expreſly, That he Empower'd Charles Malateſta to renounce or reſign up his Right to the Pontificat: In purſuance whereof, Charles Malateſta ask'd the Council, whether they thought it convenient, That this Renunciation ſhould be made at Conſtance, or that ſome ſhould firſt be ſent to Nice, to meet Peter de Luna. The Council anſwer'd by the Archbiſhop of Milan, That it was uſeful and expedient for promoting the Peace, That this Renunciation ſhould be made at Conſtance, before any were ſent to Nice, to know whether Peter de Luna would renounce or no. Afterwards the Council renew'd the Decree, prohibiting to proceed to a New Election of a Pope, but with the conſent of the Council, and after ſuch a manner as it ſhould preſcribe; and that the Council ſhould not be diſſolv'd until a Pope was choſen. The Emperor was entreated to take care of this Matter, and to publiſh Declarations to this purpoſe, which he did. Then the Council confirm'd all that had been done Canonically by Gregory in his Obedience; declar'd the Proceſſes to be Null, which were made for the cauſe of Schiſm; and that the Prohibition they had made to chooſe Gregory a-new, was not upon the account of his Incapacity, but only to promote the Peace, and avoid Scandal and Suſpicion. The Council reſerv'd to themſelves alſo a Power, without doing wrong to any of the two Obediences, to take care of the Cardinals who had the ſame Title, and receiv'd the Cardinals of Gregory XII. confirm'd them in their Offices and Priviledges; and laſtly, pray'd the Emperor to provide for the ſafety of the Council, who immediately publiſh'd a Declaration upon this Subject. Afterwards, Charles Malateſta, as Proctor of Gregory, after a long and eloquent Diſcourſe, made a pure and ſimple Renunciation and Reſignation of the Pontificat, and diſmis'd all his Right which he might have to it. This Renunciation was accepted by the Council, who caus'd an Inſtrument to be drawn up, wherein they gave Power to the Proctors of the Council, to require Peter de Luna to Renounce within Ten Days his pretended Right to the Papal Dignity; and if he ſhould not do it, they declar'd him a notorious Schiſmatick, Incorrigible, Obſtinate, Heretical, a breaker of his Oaths, and unworthy of all Honour, and of all Pontifical Dignity, depos'd, depriv'd of all Right, which he had or could have, to the Pontificat; forbad him to aſſume the Title of Pope, and all the Faithful of whatſoever condition to obey him, or to harbour him; enjoyn'd them to ſhun him, and treat him as a Schiſmatick, and a Diſturber of the People of the Church, and a Heretick, and to do the ſame alſo to his Favourers. This Reſolution was approv'd by Four Nations, by the Cardinal, and by the Emperor.

The Fifteenth Seſſion, held July 6th, was ſpent in making a Proceſs againſt John Huſs.

The Sixteenth was held the 11th of the ſame Month, in which the Council deputed Fifteen Commiſſioners to go into Arragon, and treat with Peter de Luna by conſert with the Emperor. After this, ſeveral particular Regulations were made concerning the Perſons of the Prelats, and the Acts of the Council.

In the Seventeenth Seſſion, July the 15th, the Council congratulated the Emperor upon the Journey he undertook into Arragon, to confer with King Ferdinand, and agree with him about the Means of finiſhing the Peace of the Church; and ordain'd Prayers to be made for the ſucceſs of his Journey, and thunder'd out Excommunications againſt all thoſe that ſhould croſs his Deſign. In the ſame Seſſion, the Council in Conſideration of the generous manner of Gregory's Renunciation, and the better to entice Peter de Luna to do the ſame, confirm'd him in the Dignity of Cardinal Biſhop, granted him the firſt place in the Sacred College, ſaving to the future Pope, in caſe that Benedict ſhould alſo Renounce voluntarily, the Power of ordering which of the two ſhould have the precedency; declar'd him Legate to the Holy See for his whole Life, in Marca de Ancona, and in the Country of Farſe, with the Juriſdiction annex'd to this Dignity; confirm'd all that he had done, even where there was ſome Default, and forbad any for ever to moleſt or accuſe him, or proſecute him either Criminally or Civilly upon any account whatſoever.

In the Eighteenth Seſſion, Auguſt the 17th, the Council made ſome proviſional Orders, and nam'd Ambaſſadors for Italy, who were to regulate what was to be done in that Country, with Angelus Corarius, who had approv'd and confirm'd the Renunciation made in his Name in the Council by Charles Malateſta, and laid aſide the Pontifical Robes.

In

In the Nineteenth Seſſion, September 23d, after they had treated of the Affair of Jerom of Prague, and ſome other Hereticks, two Orders were made; Firſt, That the Beneficiaries who were preſent in the Council ſhould enjoy the Revenues of the Benefices; and Secondly, That the Proviſions of Benefices granted by John XXIII. ſhould be confirm'd until the Day of his Suſpenſion. The Council of Conſtance.

In the Twentieth, on November 21ſt, they treated of the Difference between the Biſhop of Trent and Frederic, Duke of Auſtria, concerning ſome Lands belonging to that Biſhop which the Duke had uſurp'd the Poſſeſſion of; and the Council granted a Monitory under pain of Excommunication, Suſpenſion and Interdict, againſt thoſe that ſhould detain any Profits of Places belonging to that Biſhop.

While theſe Things were tranſacted at the Council, the Emperor went to Narbonne, and waited there ſome time for the King of Arragon, who was fal'n Sick at Perpignan, whither the Emperor went to meet him with the Ambaſſadors of the Council. The other Princes and Deputies of the City of the Obedience of Benedict were preſent, and Benedict himſelf came thither alſo after they had waited a long time for him; but notwithſtanding the earneſt Prayers of the Emperor, the Kings, the Princes, and the People, he would not reſolve to reſign the Pontificat; and for fear leſt he ſhould be forc'd to do it, he retir'd ſecretly from Perpignan. After his Departure, the Princes and the People of his Obedience reſolv'd to abandon him, and ſent their Ambaſſadors to meet the Emperor and the Ambaſſadors of the Council, who were return'd to Narbonne, to treat with them. This Treaty was concluded on December the 13th at Narbonne, on the following Conditions: Firſt, That the Prelates of the Council of Conſtance ſhould call thoſe of the Obedience of Benedict, by Circular Letters ſent by the King of Arragon to the Princes of that Obedience, to be given to their Prelates, to meet at the Council, within three Months after theſe Letters were deliver'd to the King of Arragon; and that the Kings and Princes of the Obedience of Benedict ſhould write alſo Circular Letters to call the Prelates of the other Obedience to meet at the Council of Conſtance at the ſame time. Secondly, That in theſe Letters, the reaſon of the Councils meeting ſhould be expreſs'd only in general terms, viz. For the Extirpation of Schiſm and Hereſies, for the Union of the Roman Church, for the Reformation of the Univerſal Church in its Head and Members, for the Election of one ſole Paſtor, and for other cauſes the cognizance whereof did of right pertain to a General Council: But that the Emperor and the Ambaſſadors of the Council ſhould promiſe by a particular Inſtrument, that nothing ſhould be Ordain'd contrary to the Intereſt of the Kings, Princes and Prelates of the Obedience of Benedict. Thirdly, That the Prelates of that Obedience ſhould be receiv'd into the Council aſſoon as they ſhould come, and then ſhould proceed joyntly with the reſt againſt Benedict, if he would not voluntarily renounce the Pontificat; that his Proceſs ſhould be form'd Juridicially, and without any regard to what was done in the Council of Piſa; and that another Pope ſhould not be choſen until his Depoſition was firſt pronounc'd. Fourthly, That ſo far as was neceſſary, all the Proceſſes, Judgments, Decrees, &c. made by Gregory, John XXIII. or their Predeceſſors ſhould be declared Null, and even thoſe made by the Council of Piſa, againſt Benedict and his Adherents, and that they could not any ways proceed againſt them upon the account of the paſt Schiſm. Fifthly, That all the Proviſions and Graces granted by Benedict to the Princes, Prelates, and others of his Obedience, ſhould be approv'd and confirm'd. Sixthly, That the Cardinals of his College ſhould enjoy all the Dignities and Priviledges of their Cardinalſhip. Seventhly, That Proviſion ſhould be made for the Officers of his Court. Eighthly, That in caſe Benedict ſhould happen to Dye before his Renunciation or Depoſition, the Princes of his Obedience ſhould not ſuffer another Pope to be choſen in their Dominions; and that if one ſhould be choſen they ſhould not acknowledge or allow him, but remit the Election to a General Council, and own him whom they ſhould approve. Ninthly, That the Cardinals of the different Obediences, who ſhall be found to have the ſame Title, ſhall retain it while the Council continues; and that before the end of the Council, Proviſion ſhall be made for the Honour and Maintenance of both of them. Tenthly, That Paſſports and Securities ſhall be given to Benedict, and all thoſe of his Obedience, who have a mind to come to the Council. Eleventhly, That the Emperor and Ambaſſadors of the Council ſhall be oblig'd by Oath to cauſe the preceding Articles to be approv'd and perform'd by the Prelates of the Council. Twelfthly, That the Diſpatches of this Inſtrument ſhall be deliver'd to the Parties as there ſhall be occaſion. The Agreement between Sigiſmund and the King of Arragon, about Benedict XIII.

This Treaty was brought to Conſtance by the Ambaſſadors of the Council, and read in a General Congregation held January 30th, in the Year 1416. at which it was approv'd and ſign'd by the Cardinals and other Prelates of the Council.

In the Twenty Firſt Seſſion, on May 30th, they treated of nothing but the Affair of Jerom of Prague, who was there condemn'd.

In the Twenty Second, held on the 15th of October, the Ambaſſadors of Alphonſus King of Arragon, who had ſucceeded his Father Ferdinand, took their Seats in the Council, and after reading the Letters of the Prelates at Conſtance, directed to the King of Arragon, for calling them to the Council, the Ambaſſadors of this Prince on their Part made a Convocation of the Council, which was accepted by the Prelates, who deſir'd they ſhould proceed to conclude the Union according to the Tenor of the third Article of the Treaty ſign'd at Narbonne. The Ambaſſadors anſwer'd, That they would unite themſelves to the Council, which Union the Council accepted of, and then they took their Seats on the ſame Bench with the Ambaſſadors of the King of France; after ſuch a manner that the Count of Cardone, firſt Ambaſſador of Arragon, had his Seat next to Gerſon, who was chief of the Ambaſſadors of France, and the others were plac'd alternatively; but not till thoſe of France had firſt made their Proteſtations, that this ſhould not prejudice the Right of Preference which belong'd to the Ambaſſadors of the French King, nor give the Right of an Alternative Seat to the King of Arragon; which Proteſtations were admitted by the Ambaſſadors of the King of Arragon and the Council. The Ambaſſadors of Arragon were allow'd the Right of giving their Suffrages in the Name of all the Prelates, not only of their own Kingdom, but alſo of their Obedience, until the Ambaſſadors of other Princes of the ſame Obedience ſhould arrive; and after this, the Council approv'd, allow'd and confirm'd the Articles of the Treaty of Narbon.

In the Twenty Third Seſſion, on November the 5th, the Proceſs againſt Peter de Luna was Commenc'd, who had retir'd to the Caſtle of Paniſcole, a ſtrong place of Arragon, by the Sea-ſide, near to Tortoſe; and for that end Commiſſioners were nam'd to go and inform ſummarily againſt him at theſe places which were neareſt to Paniſcole; and in the Twenty Fourth Seſſion, held the 28th of the ſame Month, a Citation was read, which was to be given him to appear before the Council.

The Ambaſſadors of the Count of Foix were receiv'd in the Twenty Fifth Seſſion, held the 14th of December, and thoſe of the King of Navarre in the Twenty Sixth, on the 24th of the ſame Month.

In the Twenty Seventh, February the 20th, and the Twenty Eighth, March the 3d, in the Year 1417. they proceeded againſt Frederick Duke of Auſtria, who had Poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Revenues of the Biſhop of Trent, and had detain'd him Priſoner,

In the Twenty Ninth, on March the 8th, the Council nam'd Officers for inſtructing a Proceſs againſt Peter de Luna; and the Proctor demanded, That the Hundredth Day being come, on which he was to appear, he ſhould be ſummon'd at the Church-gate, which was done; but he not being preſent, the Proctor requir'd that he ſhould be declar'd Contumacious, the Conſideration whereof the Council put off to a further Day.

In the Thirtieth Seſſion, held the 29th of the ſame Month, the Commiſſioners of the Council reported after what manner they had cited Peter de Luna, and the Anſwer he had given them, and caus'd to be read the Inſtrument which they had drawn up about it. The Council approv'd the Subtraction of Obedience made by the King of Arragon, and revok'd a Bull publiſh'd to the contrary by Benedict.

In the Thirty Firſt Seſſion, held the laſt Day of the ſame Month, nothing was done about the Affair of Peter de Luna; but a Monitory was decreed againſt the Count of Vertus, who kept the Biſhop of Aſke Priſoner; and the Difference was determin'd between the two Biſhops of Baionne, one of the Obedience of John XXIII. and the other of that of Benedict XIII. in favour of the latter, on condition nevertheleſs that if he ſhould Dye, the Chapter of Baionne might ſuperſede it at a New Election, as they ſhould agree about it with the King of Arragon.

In the Thirty Second Seſſion, held the 1ſt of April, Peter de Luna was ſummon'd again three times; who not appearing, nor any Body for him, Commiſſioners were nam'd to inſtruct his Proceſs, and to take the Depoſitions of Witneſſes againſt him.

Peter de Luna was again cited in the 33d Seſſion held the 12th of May, and in the 34th held the 5th of June, the Commiſſioners made their Report of the Articles and Depoſitions of the Witneſſes.

The Ambaſſadors of John King of Caſtile and Lyons were received in the 35th Seſſion, held on the 18th of the ſame Month, with the ſame Ceremonies that had been us'd to thoſe of the King of Arragon, and the Subtraction of Obedience from Benedict, made by the King of Caſtile, was approv'd. The Count of Armagnac being the only Perſon of all the Princes of the Obedience of Benedict who had not ſent to the Council, the Proctor enquir'd if any Perſon was there in his Name; whereupon Gerſon roſe up and ſaid, That the Ambaſſadors of the King of France had a Writing, by which it appear'd to be the Intention of this Count to follow the Example of the King: The Proctors remonſtrated, That this was not ſufficient, and proteſted publickly againſt him.

In the 36th Seſſion held the 22d of July, the Council order'd, That a new Citation againſt Benedict ſhould be fix'd up, whereby he ſhould be ſummon'd to appear the 26th of July, to hear the Definitive Sentence pronounc'd againſt himſelf: All the Proceſſes made and Judgments given by Benedict XV. againſt the Princes, or others who had withdrawn their Obedience, were made null and void.

The Depoſition of Benedict XIII.

Laſtly in the 37th Seſſion on the 26th of the ſame Month, at which the Emperor Sigiſmund was preſent, Peter de Luna was declar'd contumacious, and condemn'd as a perjur'd Perſon, who gave Scandal to the Univerſal Church, favour'd an old Schiſm, and diſturb'd the Peace of the Church, as a Schiſmatick, Heretick, and unworthy of all Title, Honour and Dignity, depriv'd of all Right he could have to the Pontificate, ſeparated from the Church; and laſtly, depos'd by the Council, who forbad all the Faithful of whatſoever Quality and Condition to obey him, or harbour him; and declar'd all the Sentences, Proceſſes, Prohibitions, Cenſures and Conſtitutions contrary to this Decree, to be null and void.

In

In the 38th Seſſion held the 28th of the ſame Month, the Council revok'd ſeverally the Decrees made againſt the Ambaſſadors of Henry the Infant of Caſtile, and gave the Ambaſſadors of Caſtile, Portugal and Navar, the ſame Right of giving Votes for their Nations, which had been granted to thoſe of Arragon. Towards the latter end of this Seſſion there were great Conteſts between the Cardinals and Nations of Italy and Spain on the one ſide, and the Emperor and the Nations of Germany on the other ſide, concerning the Matters which were to be treated of in the Council. The Germans endeavour'd with all their Might, That the Council ſhould take care to make Decrees for the Reformation of the Church in its Head, before they proceeded to the Election of a Pope; and the Cardinals on the contrary, had a Mind to begin with the Election of a Pope, who ſhould afterwards take care of the Reformation of the Church. This Conteſt laſted almoſt three Months, and the Cardinals made a Proteſtation againſt the German Nation; but at laſt it was agreed, That the Council ſhould draw up the Articles for reforming the Head of the Church and the Court of Rome; and that it ſhould be ordain'd, That the Pope who ſhould be choſen, ſhould make this Reformation before the Diſſolution of the Council. The Council of Conſtance.

In the 39th Seſſion on the ninth of October, the Council conſidering that the frequent celebration of General Councils was a means moſt proper to extirpate Schiſms and Hereſies, and to reform Abuſes and Diſorders, made a Decree, by which they ordain'd, That another General Council ſhould be held 5 Years after the end of this, a third 7 Years after the end of the ſecond, and for the future one ſhould be held every ten Years, in ſuch Places as the Pope ſhould appoint at the end of each Council, with the conſent and approbation of the Council it ſelf: That his Holineſs with the advice of the Cardinals might ſhorten this time, but not prolong it, and that he could not change the place without neceſſity; in which caſe he muſt give notice, and appoint another place a Year before-hand: That in caſe of Schiſm, aſſoon as any two Perſons appear'd who took upon them the Title of Popes, the Council ſhould be held the next Year, and all thoſe who were wont to be preſent at the Council ſhould immediately reſort thither: That the two Competitors ſhould be ſuſpended from all Adminiſtration and all Power, aſſoon as the Council was open'd: That in caſe any Election of a Pope ſhould be made by Violence or a conſiderable Fright, it ſhould be null; but that the Cardinals could not proceed to a new Election, until the Council had judg'd of the Validity of that which had been made; and that if they ſhould proceed to do it the Election ſhould be null, and they ſhould be depriv'd of their Right to chooſe, and be degraded from their Dignities. The Council after this preſcrib'd a Form of Faith which the Popes ſhould be bound to profeſs for the future after their Election, and added to it two Conſtitutions; one by which they forbid to tranſlate Prelats againſt their Will to other Churches, and the other by which they aboliſh'd the Right which the Pope aſſum'd to himſelf of receiving the Revenues of deceas'd Prelats, and the Exactions of the Rights of Viſitation and Procuration.

In the 40th Seſſion held October the 30th, a Decree of the Council was publiſh'd, wherein they ordain'd, That the future Pope ſhall join with the Council, or with thoſe that ſhall be deputed by the Nations, in taking care to reform the Church in its Head and Members; and alſo the Court of Rome, according to Equity, and as was neceſſary for the good Government of the Church, before the Council ſhould be diſſolv'd, upon the Articles preſented by the Nations, which are, 1. Concerning the number and quality of the Cardinals. 2. About Reſervations made to the Holy See. 3. Concerning Annates. 4. About the Collation of Benefices, and the Promiſes of them when they ſhall be vacant, and about Confirmations of Elections. 6. About Cauſes which ought to be pleaded at Rome or elſewhere. 7. About Appeals to the Court of Rome. 8. About the Offices of the Chancery and the Penitentiary. 9. About Exemptions and Unions made during the Schiſm. 10. About Commendams. 11. About the Profits of vacant Benefices. 12. Againſt the Alienation of the Revenues of the Roman Church. 13. About thoſe things for which the Pope ought to be puniſh'd or depos'd. 14. About the Extirpation of Simony. 15. About Diſpenſations. 16. About Proviſions in the Name of the Pope and the Cardinals. 17. About Indulgences. 18. About Tithes.

All theſe Articles were diſputed between the Nations and the Cardinals, but that about Annates was longeſt debated, for moſt Voices among the Nations carried it, That Annates were not at all due, and that this claim of Right ought not to be ſuffered; and that ſo much the rather becauſe John XXIII. had abus'd it extravagantly, by exacting many Annates of vacant Benefices ſeveral times in the ſame Year. The Cardinals on the contrary were of Opinion, That theſe Abuſes ought to be reform'd, but the Right of Annates and mean Services ſhould be maintain'd, and caus'd an Article to be drawn up after the following manner: That the Tax ſet down in the Regiſters of the Apoſtolick Chamber ſhall be paid for vacant Churches and Monaſteries, to furniſh the Pope and Cardinals with Means for their Maintenance; That if any of theſe Taxes were exorbitant they ſhould be reform'd; That they ſhould be paid but once for one Church or Monaſtery, in caſe it ſhould happen to be vacant twice in one Year. This Project being communicated to the Nations, they conſulted about ſeven Days, and at laſt concluded, That Annates ought to be wholly taken away for the time paſt, the preſent, and the future. The Cardinals defended this Right by John de Scribanis their Proctor, who appeal'd from this Concluſion to the future Pope. The Nation of France, who had the greateſt Hand in this Affair, gave a large Anſwer to this Appeal, wherein they gave a Reaſon for the Reſolution of the Nations, and maintain'd that the Annates cannot be defended by any Priviledge, Cuſtom or Preſcription; that excepting the Benefices vacant in Curia, there is no Rule of Law which favours theſe Annates; That the original of The Conteſts about Annates.

The Conteſts about Annates.

them came from a Reſervation which John XXII. made of one part of the Revenues, of Dignities and Benefices, except Abbies, for a certain Journey beyond Sea, and other urgent Occaſions; That upon this account the Church pays nothing for Abbies in England; That this Pope alſo excepted the Biſhopricks, and made divers Reſtrictions to his Ordinance; That ſince his time many Popes had made the like Reſervation for certain Cauſes which they expreſs'd; That the Clergy, Princes and People, had ſometimes endur'd them, but being at other times found too chargeable, they had refus'd to pay them, as they had done in England, and that they might do it with Reaſon and Juſtice, eſpecially, becauſe the Cauſes for which they were at firſt eſtabliſh'd had now ceas'd: That the granting the Revenue of one Year of Prelacies and vacant Abbies, was introduc'd by the voluntary and free Oblation which ſome of thoſe whoſe Election was confirm'd, made to the Holy See; That it had the name of Common Service, becauſe it was divided among the Officers of the Court of Rome, and that afterwards a Law was made to oblige Men to do it under pretence of Cuſtom; That a Valuation had been made of Benefices; That this Exaction was Simoniacal, or at leaſt ſuſpected of Simony, and therefore could not be authoriz'd by any Cuſtom or Preſcription; That altho' Annates might lawfully be exacted, yet it was convenient to aboliſh them upon the account of the Complaints, Violences, Scandals, Oppreſſions and Quarrels they had caus'd, and did cauſe every Day; That France had been forc'd to take them away by Proviſion; That it had demanded the Supreſſion of them from the Pope, who had promiſed it, and did ſtill demand the ſame at preſent of the Council. Afterwards they anſwer'd the Reaſons alledg'd by John de Scribanis, to oppoſe the Reſolution of the Nations, and juſtify the Annates. He objected as to the manner in which this Reſolution was made, that they had not proceeded to a Scrutiny, nor propos'd the thing to the Deputies of the Nations. To this it was anſwer'd, That there was no Law made for deliberating always by the way of Scrutiny, and that there were many Affairs about which they had conſulted only viva voce; but that this at firſt had been carried to the Deputies of the Nations, according to Cuſtom. As to the Matter it was alledgd, That it muſt needs be granted, that the inferior Churches, which were deſcended from the Church of Rome, ſhould furniſh the Pope and the Cardinals with Neceſſaries. To which it was anſwer'd, That the Biſhop of Rome had Revenues ſufficient for his Subſiſtence as well as other Biſhops, and in caſe they were not ſufficient, the Clergy of his own City and Dioceſs, and even thoſe of other Churches, might grant him Annates, by way of charitable Relief, for a time, and with regard to his preſent Neceſſities, but not as a Debt of perpetual Obligation: That moreover, altho' the Church of Rome was the chief, and the Miſtreſs of all other Churches, upon the account of the Virtues and Merits of St. Peter, and thoſe who had been her firſt Biſhops, (for as to the latter Biſhops they did not at all reſemble the Primitive) yet it was not true that it had preceded all others, ſince the Greek Church was the firſt in order of time: That as to the Cardinals, they might be conſider'd either as Curates and Biſhops of their Titles, (and in this quality they ought to diſcharge the Function of Curates and Biſhops) or as Counſellors to the Pope; but that they were by no means Coadjutors to the Pope: That this Title belongs to the Biſhops, who are above the Cardinals by Divine Right, altho' theſe at preſent are advanc'd above them, and deſpiſe them; That they are rich and powerful enough upon their accounts to maintain their Dignity; That as to the Poſſeſſion which Scribanis alledg'd and pretended the Pope and Cardinals had even in the Kingdom of France, it was anſwer'd, That they never had a Title to eſtabliſh that Poſſeſſion, and that if at any time they receiv'd Annates, it was only by Permiſſion and Sufferance: That the Sums which the Pope exacted by means of Annates were exceſſive, ſince they amounted, according to the Taxation of the Apoſtolick Chamber, for the Biſhopricks and Abbies of France only, to the Sum of 697750 Livres of Revenue, which would make up almoſt 7 Millions for all the Nations; That the Pope and Cardinals had Revenue enough without this; and that by other ways the Nation of France paid them betwixt 60000 and 70000 Livres of Revenue: That if this Nation concerns it ſelf more in this Affair than the reſt, it is becauſe there is none that is tax'd higher; for the Apoſtolick Chamber takes nothing in England but the Revenue of the Vacancy of ſome Biſhopricks, which are but few, and the Cardinals are not ſuffer'd to poſſeſs any Benefices there: That nothing is receiv'd from all Spain; That the Benefices of Italy are of ſmall Value; That when the States find themſelves tax'd too high, they forbid to give any thing, as was lately done by Florence, which depriv'd the Holy See for 5 Years of the Collation of Benefices in that State, upon the account of the Abuſes committed by John XXIII. in the Collation of an Abby. Laſtly, That in Germany there are only ſome Churches from which the Apoſtolick Chamber receives any thing, and that in others nothing is given to the Pope; That even the Apoſtolick Letters are not receiv'd there, but only ſo far as the Biſhops pleaſe, who do often refuſe their Vidimus; That there is no Nation but France that is over-charg'd, becauſe it has been obedient and well-affected. After this, they diſcover'd the weakneſs of John de Scribanis's Anſwers to their Objections againſt Annates, and particularly confuted the Reaſons he made uſe of to excuſe them from Simony. From whence they concluded, That the Appeal of Scribanis, and the other Appeals of the Cardinals to the future Pope upon this Head, ought not to be admitted; that no reſpect of Perſons ought to be ſhew'd in this caſe; and that the Nation of France did not mean to ſhew any, nor to change their Reſolution in any thing, but to endeavour the reception of it in the Council, and in all other places, as occaſion ſhould require.

Notwithſtanding this Oppoſition, the Article remain'd in the ſame Form that it was drawn up by the Cardinals; but no more was ſpoke of it after the Election of the Pope: And this Article,

as well as the greater part of thoſe which concern'd the Reformation of the Court of Rome, were never publiſh'd, nor confirm'd by Pope Martin V. tho' the contrary was agreed upon in this Seſſion. The Conteſts about Annates.

The Council ordain'd afterwards, That they ſhould proceed to the Election of a Pope, notwithſtanding the abſence of the Cardinals of Peter de Luna, on condition nevertheleſs, that if they ſhould come before the Election was finiſh'd, and unite themſelves to the Council, they ſhould be admitted to give their Votes: And to the end that this Election might be the more ſolemn, it was order'd, That for this time only, 6 Prelats of each Nation ſhould be join'd to the Cardinals; and that he who ſhould be choſen by two thirds of the Cardinals, and by two Deputies of each Nation, ſhould be acknowledg'd for Pope.

In the 41ſt Seſſion held November the 8th, Deputies were nam'd, who were to be join'd to the Cardinals to Elect a Pope; the Articles were read to which they were to Swear, and the manner of their Behaviour in the Conclave wes ſettled. They entred into it the ſame Day, and on Thurſday following, which was the Feſtival of St. Martin, they did all with one Voice chooſe for Pope Odon Colonna Cardinal-Deacon, having the Title of St. George, who aſſum'd the Name of Martin V. upon the account of the Day of his Election; he was enthron'd the ſame Day, and crown'd the 21ſt of the ſame Month. The Election of Martin V.

He preſided in the 42d Seſſion, which was not held till the 28th of December, and there he caus'd to be read a Bull, by which he diſcharg'd the Emperor Sigiſmund and the Duke of Bavaria, from the trouble of keeping Balthazar Coſſa, and oblig'd them to deliver him into the Hands of thoſe whom he ſhould name to receive him.

In the 43d Seſſion held the 21ſt of March, in the Year 1418. Pope Martin V. publiſh'd ſome Conſtitutions for the Reformation of the Church; The 1ſt. About Exemptions, wherein he recalls all thoſe that had been granted by the Popes ſince the death of Gregory XI. The 2d, Concerning the Unions which he order'd to be examin'd anew. The 3d, About the Revenues of vacant Churches, which he forbad any to apply to the Benefit of the Pope, or the Apoſtolick Chamber. The 4th, about Simony, which is committed in Elections, Poſtulations and Collations. The 5th, Whereby he annull'd all the Licenſes granted by the Popes to poſſeſs Benefices which require one of the Holy Orders, without being oblig'd to take it. The 6th, Whereby he forbad to impoſe Tenths, or other Taxes, upon Churches or Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, except for ſome great Advantage which concern'd the Univerſal Church, with the conſent of the Cardinals and Prelats of the Places. The 7th, Wherein he renew'd the Laws about the modeſt Habits of Clergy-men. The 8th, Wherein he declares that by the preceding Conſtitutions, and by the Concordats made with each Nation, he had ſatisfy'd the Decree concerning Reformation, made in the Seſſion of the 30th of October laſt, by which means he eluded the Reformation of the Cardinals and the Court of Rome, which had been decreed in the Council.

The News of the Election of Martin V. being carried into France, and Louis de Fliſque being ſent to communicate it to the King, this Prince held an Aſſembly of Prelats, of his Counſellors, his Court of Parliament, and the Univerſity, wherein it was reſolv'd, That the Edict of the Year 1406, ſhould remain in Force; and that for the future in Cathedral, Collegiate and Conventual Churches, and other Elective Benefices, they ſhould be provided for by the Election or Poſtulation of the Chapters, Colleges and Communities, as well Regular as Secular; and that as to other Benefices which were not Elective, they ſhould be provided for by the Preſentations, Collations, and Inſtitutions, of thoſe to whom it belong'd of common Right, or by Cuſtom or Privilege, notwithſtanding and without having regard to any general or ſpecial Reſervations from any Perſon whatſoever. On the 26th of February 1418, the Dauphin coming to Parliament, forbad the Univerſity to acknowledge or obey the Pope choſen at Conſtance, until the King and his Council ſhould order it. Nevertheleſs he was acknowledg'd for lawful Pope; but becauſe the Council, in ſpite of the preſſing Sollicitations of the Ambaſſadors of France, would not take care to reform the Court of Rome, the Regulation made in 1406. concerning the Collation of Benefices, was confirm'd anew in France. The Regulation made in France about the Diſcipline of the Church.

There remain'd no more to be done by Pope Martin V. for ſatisfying the Decrees made by the Council before his Election, but to appoint the Place where the future Council was to be held; which he did in the 44th Seſſion, April the 19th, wherein he read the Conſtitution for appointing the future Council at Pavia.

In fine, on the 22d of the ſame Month the laſt Seſſion of the Council of Conſtance was held, wherein, after the Maſs of the Holy Ghoſt, Ombaud Cardinal-Deacon, by the Order of the Pope and the Council, ſaid, Sirs, Go in Peace; and thoſe who were preſent anſwer'd Amen. The Ambaſſadors of Poland demanded the Condemnation of a Book of John de Falkemberg, which contain'd moſt cruel Errors and Herſies, and had been condemn'd by the Deputies of the Nations. Whereupon Martin V. made Anſwer, That he approv'd whatever had been determin'd, concluded and ordain'd, in Matter of Faith by the Council; that he approv'd and ratified what was done in it Conciliarly, and not what was done in it after another manner, i. e. That which had been concluded only by the Nations, and had not been approv'd in the General Aſſembly of the Council, as the Decrees of Reformation propoſed in Seſſion 40th, the Condemnation of the Errors of John Petit and Falkemberg. Gerſon remonſtrated, That there were yet many Articles to be decided in the Council, about Matters which had been already debated, and chiefly about divers Errors, that if they were not condemn'd ſome would impute this Omiſſion to The end of the Council of Conſtance.

an affected Negligence, about Things which require a very particular Care and Attention, and which are of the greateſt Conſequence, ſuch as the Error of John Petit, that every Tyrant might lawfully be killed; That others would believe it was through Ignorance that they would not decide ſome Propoſitions which are not of the firſt Principles of Faith, whether they are Falſe or True, Holy or Impious, and whether they ought to be receiv'd or rejected; Others would pretend that they us'd reſpect of Perſons, or were mov'd by the fear of Man, which would make theſe murmur againſt whom they had proceeded in Matters of Faith, as the Bohemians; Others would ſay, there was a denial of Juſtice in Matters of Faith and Manners, or at leaſt a blameable Diſſimulation; a great many would impute it to the Covetouſneſs of the Prelats, who ſought nothing but their own profit in the Reformation of the Church, and not the Spiritual Good of others: Some would obſerve that it was a Contempt of Kings, Princes and Univerſities, as of the King of France, of Poland, and the Univerſity of Paris; Others would imagine, That they intended nothing but to weaken the Power of Ordinaries in their Dioceſe, and commit all Authority to the Court of Rome: Others would impute it to the Corruption of Manners in the Prelates of the Council, or to the negligence of the Ambaſſadors of Princes and the Univerſities, who had not done their Duty: Many would maintain, That this would weaken the Authority of what the Council had done; That it would expoſe the Truth, and thoſe that Preach'd it to Danger; That it would give occaſion to Murders, Perjuries, Seditions; That it would be ſo far from procuring the Converſion of Hereticks, That it would confirm them in their Errors; That this would give occaſion of ſlackning Obedience to the Pope newly choſen, and afford Matter of Deriſion to Infidels, and the Partizans of Peter de Luna, who would laugh to ſee that in the preſence of the Council Errors were ſuffer'd or over-look'd; and laſtly, That this Silence might paſs for a tacit Approbation of the Error. Gerſon made theſe Proteſtations and gave them in Writing; but no Anſwer was made to him, nor any regard had to what he ſaid. The Ambaſſadors of Poland inſiſted upon the Demand of the Condemnation of the ſeditious Book of Falkemberg, which at leaſt warranted the Maſſacre of all the Polonians without hearing them; and when they ſaw that no Satisfaction was given them, they appeal'd to the future Council. The Pope oppos'd this Appeal with a Decree, wherein he declar'd, That it was not lawful in any Caſe to appeal from the Judgment of the Pope, which, as Gerſon remarks, deſtroy'd a Decree of the Council, and ſubverted the Fundamental Maxim upon which it was eſtabliſh'd. However, the Bull of Martin V. containing the Prohibition of appealing to the Council, was not read, nor approv'd in this Seſſion of the Council, but publiſh'd in a private Aſſembly of the Cardinals.

In the mean time, Pope Martin V. without any regard to the Remonſtrances of Gerſon, or the Demands of the Ambaſſadors of Poland, put an end to the Council, by cauſing to be read a Conſtitution, wherein he gave leave to all who had been preſent in the Council to return to their own Houſes, with plenary Indulgences for them and their Domeſticks. Thus ended the Council of Conſtance, which ſeem'd to have wholly extinguiſh'd the Schiſm; yet it was not ſo fully done, but there remain'd ſtill ſome Sparks of it. And as to what concerns the Reformation of the Church in its Head and Members, which was another end of the Council, it was ſcarce begun but it was put off to another time.

The ſequel of the Council.

Gregory XII. and John XXIII. held to that which was decreed in the Council; the former died at Recanati, even before the Council was ended; the ſecond having brib'd his Guards with Mony, deliver'd himſelf out of Priſon, and came to Florence to caſt himſelf at the Feet of Martin V. and implore his Mercy: The Pope receiv'd him very courteouſly, made him Cardinal and Dean of the Sacred College, and gave him a Place more eminent than the reſt. He enjoy'd but a little while this Conſolation, for within ſix Months after, being weary of leading a private Life, he died at Florence, where a ſumptuous Funeral was made for him.

The obſtinacy of Benedict XIII.

There remain'd now only Benedict XIII. who was ſhut up in the Caſtle of Paniſcole, where he preſerv'd ſtill the Name and the Enſigns of the Papal Dignity, being accompanied with four Cardinals. Martin V. ſent the Cardinal of St. Euſebe a Florentine, his Legat in Arragon, to enjoin him, under the Penalty of Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, to reſign. The Cardinals that were with him remonſtrated to him, That he ought to do it for the Benefit of the Peace. He anſwer'd them after his uſual manner, That he would perſonally confer with his Competitor, to ſee what he would do about it. Upon this Anſwer two of his Cardinals forſook him, and there remain'd only two with him, whereof one was a Carthuſian, and the other was call'd Julian of Obla. Then all Spain acknowledg'd Martin; the Scots quickly follow'd the Example, and at laſt the Subjects of the Count of Armagnac, ſo that all the Authority of Benedict was confin'd to the Caſtle of Paniſchole. Nevertheleſs ſome time after King Alphonſus being exaſperated againſt Martin the Pope, becauſe he had inveſted Louis III. Duke of Anjou in the Kingdom of Naples, had a mind to revive the Pretenſions of Benedict, and ſent an Ambaſſador to the Council which was to be held at Siena, to endeavour that Benedict might be own'd, and Martin rejected; which was one Cauſe wherefore Martin put off the Council to another time. At laſt Benedict dying in his Contumacy, in the Year 1424. the Cardinals that remain'd about him, choſe for Pope Gillio de Munian, a Canon of Barcelona, a Spaniard, who took upon him the Name of Clement VII. created Cardinals, and did all the Acts of a Pope: But ſome time after Martin V. having accommodated the Difference with the King of Arragon, and appointed the Cardinal of Foix for his Legat in Spain, Clement was forc'd to reſign into his Hands all his pretended Rights; and that he might do it with ſome Show of Germany, that he would refer the Choice of it to the Pope's Legates. Philibert, Biſhop of Amiens, ſaid as much in the name of the Deputies from France, who were ſix in number. Richard, Biſhop of Lincoln, conſented to it alſo in behalf of thoſe from England, who were a much greater number; and declar'd, That for the preſent he would approve of that place which ſhould be choſen by the Legates. There were no Deputies from the Nation of Spain, nor any other Italians but the Pope's Legates. The next Day, Andrew, Biſhop of Poſnania, having ſaid Maſs, the Archbiſhop of Toledo read a Writing, which contain'd, That the General Council being lawfully Aſſembled at Pavia, chang'd this City becauſe of the Peſtilence which was there, and in its room made choice of the City of Siena, as a place fit and ſufficient for the Continuation of this Council. The Archbiſhop of Crete anſwer'd in the name of the Nation of Italy, That he lik'd it well, altho' he had no Power over it. The Deputies of the Nations of Germany and England conſented alſo to it. There is nothing ſaid of what was done by thoſe of the French Nation, but only 'tis obſerv'd, That they had not ſeen the Writing which was read by the Biſhop of Poſnania.

The Opening of the Council of Pavia, and its Tranſlation to Siena.

By Vertue of this Decree, the Council was adjourn'd to Siena, by the ſame Prelats, and ſome others who came thither. They began there with making a Decree, wherein they renew'd the Penalties of Law againſt thoſe who ſhould give any aſſiſtance to the Wiclevites and Huſſites; and a Plenary Indulgence was granted to all thoſe that would proſecute them, and labour to ruin this Hereſie. By a ſecond Decree the Sentence of Condemnation was confirmed, that had been given in the Council of Conſtance againſt Peter de Luna; and the Fault of all thoſe was aggravated who ſhould continue or maintain the Schiſm after his Death. By a third Decree, the Ordinaries and Inquiſitors were enjoin'd diligently to intend the ſeizing, condemnation and puniſhing of Hereticks, or their Favourers, under the pain of Suſpenſion for four Months, in caſe of Negligence. Afterwards the Affair of the Greeks was treated of in the Council, and the Relation of the Embaſſy of Antony Maſſanus, was read there; the Propoſals he had made to the Emperor of the Greeks, and the Anſwer that was given to them. Before the Council took any Reſolution in this Affair, and conſider'd of the Reformation of the Church which had been propos'd, Martin V. fearing leſt the Ambaſſador of the King of Arragon ſhould attempt ſomething againſt him, and leſt the Council ſhould make Orders about the Reformation contrary to the Intereſt of the Court of Rome; contriv'd to adjourn the Council to another Time and Place, under pretence of the ſmall number of Prelats that were come to the Council, of the Wars wherewith the Emperor was diſtracted, and the Diſputes which had been between the Prelats of the Council.

The Council begun at Siena.

Pope Martin had given a Power to his Legates to tranſlate the Council with the Advice of the Prelats: By Vertue of this Power they reſolv'd to put an end to the Council at Siena, and to appoint another, and caus'd ſome Deputies of Nations to be nam'd to agree about the place. Theſe Deputies after many Debates, made choice of the City of Baſil, for holding the Council ſeven Years after, according to a Decree of the Council of Conſtance, by their Conſultation on the 19th of February, 1424. which was afterwards approv'd in full Council; Firſt, by the Pope's Legates, and after them by the principal Prelats of each Nation, except the Archbiſhop of Toledo, who would not conſent to it in behalf of his Nation, becauſe, as he ſaid, he had no Power, but only as Archbiſhop and Primate of Spain. This deſign'd Diſſolution of the Council diſpleas'd the greateſt part of the Prelats, who complain'd loudly, That the Pope hindred the Reformation of the Church, which oblig'd his Legates to Proteſt, That by this Tranſlation the Council of Sienna ſhould not be accounted wholly diſſolv'd, but that the Preſidents of the Council ſhould labour with the Deputies of the Nations in the Reformatiotn of the Church. The Preſidents of the Nations made alſo the ſame Proteſtation, and after this, the Decree of the Diſſolution of the Council of Siena was publiſh'd on the 26th of the ſame Month of February, and on the 7th of March, the Preſidents of the Council order'd the Prelats to retire to their Dioceſſes, and forbad them to make any Aſſembly, which might paſs for a Continuation of the Council of Siena. The Pope by his Bull dated the 12th of March, confirm'd the Tranſlation of the Council from Siena, and renew'd the Prohibition to continue it; and by another Bull dated the ſame Day, he appointed three Cardinals to receive and examine, the Informations, Inſtructions and Memorials that ſhould be given in for the Reformation of the Eccleſiaſtical State.

The Diſſolution of the Council at Siena, and the Appointment of that of Baſil.

In the mean time, the Affairs of the Greeks declining daily, the Emperor John Palæologus, who ſucceeded his Father, was oblig'd to renew the Negotiation of Peace with the Latines; and ſent Ambaſſadors to the Emperor Sigiſmund, who entred upon a Conference with the Cardinals, delegated by the Pope. Theſe propos'd to determine the Differences between the two Churches, by appointing three famous Perſons on one ſide and the other, and had a mind to engage them to come to Italy: But the Greeks anſwer'd, That they would write about it to the Emperor, and the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and if they judg'd it convenient they would go thither; but withal, That their Voyage would be very coſtly: The Latines demanded of them what the Expence might amount to; They ask'd 75000 Florins, without reckoning the Expence of the Emperor's Voyage. The Pope having promis'd them this Sum, they went into Italy, where they ſaluted his Holineſs; who exhorted them to puſh forward the Execution of this Deſign, to the end that a Council might be held, and the Union made while he was Living. The Ambaſſadors of the Greeks return'd into Greece, with Andrew of Rhodes, and Eudemon Joannes, annes, and reported the News to the Emperor, who ſent to the Pope Marc Jagaris, General of his Troops; and Macarius the Long, an Abbot, who took Meaſures with the Pope for compaſſing the Union. In fine, the Emperor having held a Council about theſe Points, which were to be concerted with the Patriarch, ſent to the Pope a third Embaſſy more numerous than the former, which arriv'd in Italy, after the Death of Pope Martin V. who died on the 20th of February, 1431. The Ambaſſadors addreſs'd themſelves to Eugenius IV. his Succeſſor, in whom they did not find the ſame ſweetneſs of Temper, nor the ſame meek Diſpoſition as were in his Predeceſſor: He wrote nevertheleſs to the Emperor and the Patriarch, that if they pleas'd he would tranſlate the Synod, which was aſſembl'd at Baſil, into Italy; but the reſt of his Letters were full of Words of Contempt, which were no wiſe agreeable to the Greeks.

The Year 1431. was the time appointed for the Meeting of the Council of Baſil; and Martin V. from the beginning of that Year, had nam'd Julian the Cardinal of St. Angelo, to preſide at this Council; with Power to propoſe, conſult of, and ordain there what ſhould be agreed upon for the Preſervation and Encreaſe of Religion, of the Faith of Jeſus Chriſt, and the State of the Church, for the Reformation of the Clergy, for the Re-union of the Greeks, and of other Perſons divided from the Church, for the maintenance of Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, for the benefit, the Peace and Tranquility of States and Princes: The Bull by which he gave this Power is dated February the 1ſt, 1431. and he died the 20th of the ſame Month. The Cardinals choſe in his room Gabriel Condolmier, a Venetian, a Son of Gregory XII.'s Siſter, who had been advanc'd to the Biſhoprick of Sienna, and after that to the Dignity of Cardinal: He was choſen the 4th of March, and Crown'd the 11th. One of the firſt things that he did after his Election, was to confirm the Dignity of Preſident of the Council of Baſil, to Cardinal Julian. He order'd him by his Letter dated the laſt of May, in the ſame Year, to repair to Baſil, there to preſide at the Council, till the Affair of the Bohemians ſhould be finiſh'd; judging it needleſs to ſend thither another Legate, becauſe there were yet but a few Prelates come to Baſil.

This Cardinal, by Vertue of the Power which the Bull of Martin V. gave him of Subſtituting other Perſons, in caſe he could not be preſent at the Council, ſent thither John Polmar, Chaplain to the Pope, and Auditor to the Sacred Palace; and John de Raguſa, Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and Proctor General of the Order of Friars Predicant, to preſide in his Name at the Council. They arriv'd at Baſil the 19th of July, and open'd the Council the 23d of the ſame Month; but becauſe few Prelates were come, they kept only private Congregations until the Month of December. But when Cardinal Julian arriv'd himſelf, he made a Decree on the 7th of December, by which he appointed the firſt Seſſion of the Council on the 14th of the ſame Month; and on that Day it was held, at which, after the uſual Ceremonies were over, the Decrees of the Councils of Conſtance, and Siena, and the Letters of the Popes, Martin and Eugenius, about appointing of the Council, were read. Then it was declar'd, That the General Council was lawfully Aſſembled in this City; Firſt, To diſſipate Errors; Secondly, To procure Peace; Thirdly, To reform Abuſes. The Prelats were exhorted to give their Votes with freedom and ſincerity, in the Spirit of Peace, and to obſerve there the Modeſty preſcrib'd in the Eleventh Council of Toledo; and to prevent the Conteſts which might ariſe about Ranks and Degrees, it was ordain'd, That the place which any one ſhould have in the Council, and the quality which he ſhould take upon him there, could not ſerve for the Title of a new Right acquir'd, nor prejudice any Body. In fine, Decrees were made againſt thoſe who ſhould diſturb the Council, hinder the Prelats from coming thither, abuſe them, or rob them on the Road. A Right was granted to all who ſhould be there preſent to receive the Profits of their Benefices, altho' they were abſent; and the Officers of the Council were then appointed, which was as follows.

The manner after which they treated of Affairs in the Council was thus. All its Members were divided into four Claſſes, or equal Deputations in number, in which they plac'd, as near as was poſſible, an equal number of Perſons of each Order, and each Nation. The firſt was call'd the Deputation of the Faith, the ſecond of the Peace, the third of the Reformation, and the fourth of common Affairs. Each Deputation had its Preſident, its Proctor, and its Officers; theſe met apart three times in a Week, and conſulted about the Matters which were propos'd to them: Each of them had three Deputies, which met to examine and prepare Affairs, and then ſent them back to that Aſſembly of the Deputations, to which the Cognizance of them of right belong'd. When they had conſulted about it, the Sentence which prevail'd was carried to the three other Deputations; and after it was approv'd by all the Deputations, or at leaſt by three of them, it was reported in the General Congregation, where the Preſident concluded in the Name of the Council, according to the Plurality of the Votes of the Deputations; and then this Concluſion was publiſh'd in a Solemn Seſſion, which was held in the principal Church of the City of Baſil. The Preſident was preſent there in his Pontifical Robes, and was plac'd in an Epiſcopal Chair near the Altar; his Face was turn'd towards the Fathers of the Council, who were ſitting on their Seats in Pontifical Robes on both ſides of the Quire. The Ambaſſadors of Princes were in the middle, upon Benches, their Faces being towards the Preſident, and behind them were the Generals of Orders, the Doctors, and other Eccleſiaſticks. The uſual Prayers being ended, one or two Prelats mounted into a Pulpit, read the Decrees, and ask'd if they approv'd them. The Preſident of the Council, and thoſe of each Deputation anſwer'd in the Affirmative, and ſo the Seſſion ended.

The Second Seſſion was not held till the 15th of February, 1532. The Council for confirming and eſtabliſhing its own Authority, and hindring Pope Eugenius from attempting to diſſolve or tranſlate it, renew'd two Decrees of the Council of Conſtance; the Firſt, whereby it was declar'd, That the Synod being Aſſembled in the Name of the Holy Spirit, which compos'd the General Council, and repreſented the Church Militant, has its Power immediately from Jeſus Chriſt; and that every Perſon, of whatſoever State or Dignity, even the Pope himſelf, is bound to obey it in what concerns the Faith, the Extirpation of Schiſm, and the general Reformation of the Church in its Head and Members. The Second, by which the Council declares, That all thoſe, of whatever Dignity or Condition, not excepting the Pope himſelf, who ſhall refuſe to obey the Ordinances and Decrees of this General Council, or any other, ſhall be put under Penance and Puniſh'd. In purſuance of theſe Decrees, and of that which order'd the Holding of General Councils, the Council of Baſil declar'd, That it never could, nor can be diſſolv'd, tranſlated, or Prorogu'd by any Perſon whoſoever, nor even by the Pope himſelf, without the Conſent and Decree of the Aſſembly: They declar'd every thing to be Null, which the Pope or any other ſhould do to hinder the Holding of the Council, or to ſummon to another place thoſe who were or ſhould be preſent at it; and they were forbidden to depart upon any account whatſoever, without the leave of the Council. The Council of Baſil.

When certain News was brought, That Eugenius had publiſh'd a Decree for the Diſſolution of the Council, the Prelats appointed the Biſhop of Lauſane, and the Dean of Utrecht to go to the Pope and the Cardinals in the Name of the Council, and to deſire of them earneſtly the Recalling of this Decree. Theſe two Deputies executed their Commiſſion, and the Emperor alſo join'd his Prayers with theirs; but they could not prevail with the Pope to grant this Revocation. When therefore they return'd to Baſil, and brought thither his Anſwer, the Council in the Third Seſſion, held the 29th of April, having renew'd the Decrees of the former Seſſion concerning the Authority of a General Council, declar'd, That they had entreated, requir'd, and advertis'd the Pope to recal the pretended Diſſolution of the Council; and to publiſh his Revocation to all the World, not only that he ſhould not hinder, but alſo that he ſhould give all manner of Aſſiſtance for holding the Council, and that he would be there preſent in Perſon within three Months, if his Health would permit; or at leaſt that he ſhould ſend thither ſome Perſons with full Power to Act in his Name; and in Caſe he ſhould neglect to do it, the Council proteſted, That they would provide for the Neceſſities of the Church, as the Holy Spirit ſhould dictate to them, and that they would proceed in the ways of Juſtice againſt him. They exhorted alſo, and advertis'd the Cardinals to be preſent at the Council within three Months, except thoſe who had ſome Canonical impediment, and particularly the Cardinal of the Croſs, who was Mediator of the Peace between the Kings of France and England; but as to the Cardinals of Plaiſance, of Foix, and St. Euſtache, who were nearer to the Council, they limited the Time to two Month. In fine, they ordain'd all Prelats to publiſh this Decree, to notifie it to the Pope, if it could be done, and to cauſe it to be fix'd up in Publick Places; and declar'd, That from the time it ſhould be read, publiſh'd, and fix'd upon the Gate of the Church of Baſil, it ſhould be reckon'd to be ſignify'd to the Pope. The Decree of Eugenius for diſſolving the Council rejected.

In the Fourth Seſſion, held June the 20th, after the ſafe Conduct had been read and approv'd, and the Letter of the Council to the Bohemians, divers Decrees were made for the Continuation of the Council. The Firſt, That if the Holy See ſhould be vacant during the holding of the Council, the Cardinals could not chooſe a Pope, but in the place where it was held: The Second, That no Perſon ſhould be diſpens'd with for not coming to the Council, under pretence of an Oath, Promiſe or Engagement made to the Pope or any other Perſon; all which are declar'd Null, as well as all Proceſſes made for this cauſe. The Third, That a Leaden Seal ſhould be made for Sealing the Acts of the Council. The Fourth, That the Pope could not create Cardinals while the Council was Sitting. In the ſame Seſſion, the Government of the City of Avignon, and the Countſhip of Venaiſſin, were given to the Cardinal of St. Euſtache.

The Fifth Seſſion, held the 9th of Auguſt, was ſpent in appointing Officers and Judges for the Council.

In the Sixth Seſſion, held the 6th of September, the Proctors of the Council came to ſome Concluſions againſt Pope Eugenius, and requir'd that he ſhould be declar'd Contumacious: He was cited three times at the Gate of the Church, and at laſt the Archbiſhops of Tarente and Coloſſe, the Biſhop of Magalone, and an Auditor appear'd, and call'd themſelves the Pope's Nuncio's; but not being able to juſtifie their Power, the Proctor requir'd that they ſhould not be heard; nevertheleſs upon their Remonſtrances, the Conſultation about this Matter was put off. After the ſame manner the Cardinals were cited, and the Proctors of ſome of them appear'd.

In the Seventh Seſſion, held the 6th of November, the time given to the Cardinals for entring into the Conclave after the vacancy of the Holy See, was enlarg'd; and it was order'd, That if the Holy See ſhould be vacant, they ſhould not proceed to the Election of another Pope till Sixty Days after.

In the Eighth Seſſion, held the 18th of December, the Council publiſh'd a new Decree againſt Pope Eugenius, wherein it ordain'd, That he ſhall revoke within Sixty Days the Diſſolution of the Council, notwithſtanding any delays, or other times prefix'd, and that otherwiſe they would

The Council of Baſil. would proceed againſt him without a new Citation: All the Proviſions and Collations of Benefices which he might grant between this time and that, are declar'd Null; all Officers and Prelats are enjoin'd to forſake him within Twenty Days after the Expiration of this Term. After this, another Decree was made, wherein they declar'd, That there cannot be but one General Council, and forbad all Prelats to go to Bononia, or any other place; or be preſent at another Council, under pain of Excommunication and Deprivation of their Benefices: They declar'd alſo thoſe to be fal'n from any Right to their Benefices, who ſhall deſire or obtain of Pope Eugenius, the Deprivation of thoſe who are preſent at the Council. Laſtly, they forbad Pope Eugenius to alienate the Caſtles and Lands of the Church of Rome, as he had projected; and to lay new Taxes upon the City of Rome, or other places; and in caſe he ſhould do it, they declar'd whatever ſhall be done to be Null.

The Emperor Sigiſmund was preſent at the Ninth Seſſion, held the 22d of January, 1433. wherein all Proceſſes were made Null and Void, which Pope Eugenius might make againſt this Prince, againſt William Duke of Bavaria, and any other Perſon, upon the account of the Protection they afford to the Council.

The Term of Sixty Days allow'd to Eugenius for recalling the Diſſolution of the Council being expir'd, the Proctors demanded in the Tenth Seſſion, held February the 19th, That he ſhould be condemn'd as Contumacious; yet the Council order'd him to be ſummon'd three times, and put off the Conſideration of it to another Day.

In the Eleventh Seſſion, held April the 27th, the Council renew'd the Decree of the Council of Conſtance, concerning the Celebration of General Councils; Ordain'd, That it ſhall be free for all Prelats to be preſent at it, and that the Pope himſelf could not hinder the Cardinals, and thoſe of his Court from coming to it; That the Council being Aſſembled, could not be diſmiſs'd or tranſlated but with their own Conſent, and with the Advice of two Thirds of the Prelats; and laſtly, That a Month before the end of the Council, they ſhall be oblig'd to appoint a future Council. It was ordain'd alſo, That the Electors of the Pope when they enter into the Conclave ſhall ſwear to obſerve this Decree, and that it ſhall be publiſh'd.

In the Twelfth Seſſion, held July the 14th, the Council made a third Decree againſt Eugenius, wherein they requir'd him the third time to revoke the Diſſolution of the Council of Baſil; to declare that it was lawfully begun and continued, and that he approv'd it; and to draw up a Bull to this purpoſe within the Term of Sixty Days, otherwiſe they would declare him to be Contumacious, Incorrigible, one that gave Scandal to the whole Church; and who was ſuſpended from all Adminiſtration of the Papal Power, as well in Spirituals as Temporals, which the Council declar'd to be forfeited in this Caſe; made Void all that Eugenius ſhould do, forbad any to obey him, and enjoin'd the Prelats to come to the Council. In the ſame Seſſion, the Council made another Decree, wherein they aboliſh'd the Reſervations of Benefices, and ordain'd, That they ſhould be provided for by the ways of common Right; that's to ſay, by Election, whereof the Council preſcrib'd the Form, and declar'd the Duty of the Electors.

In the Thirteenth Seſſion, held the 11th of September, the Term of Sixty Days allow'd to Pope Eugenius, being ready to expire, the Biſhops of Spalatro and Cervia appear'd in the Aſſembly on the Pope's behalf: The Cardinal of St. Angelo enquir'd of them in the Name of the Council, if they had brought an Inſtrument of Approbation of the Council by the Pope; They had nothing but a Bull of Credit, and gave no formal Conſent to the Holding of the Council: But the Duke of Bavaria, and John of Offemburg, who had Letters of Credit from the Emperor, ſaid in his Name, That he had ſollicited Eugenius to adhere to the Council, and to be Perſonally preſent at it, and that hearing the News of a Decree of an Admonition made againſt him, he had us'd all diligence to oblige him to obey what the Council had order'd; That he had made Anſwer to him, That he could not be ignorant of all that he had done and ſuffer'd for the Peace of the Church; That he pray'd the Council to remember it, and to allow him Ten Days further; That the Emperor wiſh'd they would grant him this delay, and that he would cauſe the Princes and Prelats of Germany to come to the Council; That if the Pope in the mean time ſhould uſe any Proceedings againſt the Council, he would conſent that the Council ſhould annul them. This Delay was granted upon the Emperor's account, and another Decree was made againſt any thing that might have been done to the prejudice of the Prelats of the Council.

The State of the Pope's Affairs in Italy. While theſe things were a doing at Baſil, the Pope's Affairs had ſuffer'd various changes in Italy. Eugenius, after his Advancement to the Papal Dignity, being advertis'd, That his Predeceſſor had left a great Treaſure behind him, and that Poccius, his Vice-Chamberlain, knew where it was, gave order to Stephen Colonna to Arreſt him. Stephen executed this Order, Arreſted Poccius with much Violence and Noiſe, but did not rob him of his Treaſure. Eugenius having declar'd himſelf diſcontented with Stephen, he retir'd to Paleſtrina, towards the Prince Colonna, and exhorted him to drive Eugenius out of Rome; becauſe he perſecuted the Colonna's, and ſtirr'd up Perſecution againſt the Creatures of Martin V. The Prince of Paleſtrina came with ſome Troops to Rome, and entred it; the Battel was fought in the City, where he and his Men were beat back; nevertheleſs the War continued, but at laſt Eugenius made a Peace. Some time after, Philip, Duke of Milan, having made Peace with the Venetians and Florentines, ſent Francis Sforza, and Nicolas Forcebras, with ſome Forces againſt Eugenius; they ravag'd the Campagne of Rome, without any oppoſition from Eugenius: The Romans took this

The Council of Basil.

The twenty first Session held June the 9th in the same Year, the Council proceeding still in the Reformation. First, Forbad every Person, either to give or exact any thing in the Court of Rome, or elsewhere, for the confirmation of Elections, Admissions, of Postulations, Presentations, Provisions, Collations, Elections, Institutions, &c. of all sorts of Benefices or Ecclesiastical Offices, any more than was done for the receiving of Orders, Benedictions, or the Pallium, upon any pretence whatsoever, such as the Expedition of the Letters, the Right of the Seal, the Annates, Mean-Services, First-Fruits, or any other, under the pain of incurring by the Disobedient the Penalties enacted against Simoniacks; and that in case the Pope should disobey, he shall be delated to a general Council. The Second Decree of this Session is a Law, whereby it is order'd, That those who have a colourable Title to a Benefice, and have been in peacable Possession of it for three Years, cannot be molested. The other Regulations concern the method of celebrating Divine Service, as well in publick as in private: Whereby 'tis Ordain'd, That in Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, Divine Service shall be read distinctly by Clergy-men in their Surplice, who shall observe the Gravity and Modesty which becomes the Place and their Office; That they shall not keep Silence, nor repeat their Office privately, while others are Singing; that none but those that are present shall have a share in the Distributions; That those who are Benefic'd or are in Holy Orders, being oblig'd to repeat the Canonical Prayers, ought to do it privately, with Devotion; That they shall never neglect to Sing at Mass, the Creed and the Preface: The Canons are forbidden to oblige themselves to pay others Debts, under pain of Suspension from their Office, or to hold a Chapter in the time of grand Mass, or to suffer any Scenes to be Acted, or to sing profane Airs in the Churches. The Council of Basil.

In the twenty second Session, held the 15th of October, the Book of Austin of Rome Arch-bishop of Nazaret was condemn'd, (which is divided into three Treatises: The First, of the Sacrament of the Unity of Jesus Christ and the Church. The Second, of Jesus Christ as he was Head, and of his Dominion. The Third, of the Charity of Jesus Christ to his Elect, and his infinite Love) as containing a Doctrin erroneous; and particularly this scandalous Proposition, That Jesus Christ sinn'd every Day in his Members; and those other Propositions condemn'd in the Council of Constance, That the Elect only are the Members of Jesus Christ and his Church; That to make a Man a Member of Jesus Christ it was not sufficient to be united to him by Charity, but there must be another Union; That the Human Nature in Jesus Christ is the Person of Christ; That the Personality is not really distinguish'd from the Nature it self, and some other Propositions which are deduc'd from this.

In the twenty third Session held the 25th of March 1433. the Council publish'd their Regulations concerning the Election of the Pope, the Profession of Faith which he is bound to make, his Duty and his Conduct, the number of Cardinals which they reduc'd to twenty four, and their Titles, the manner of choosing them by the Votes of the College Cardinals, their Obligation and Duty, the restoring of Elections, and abolition of Reservations, and of all Promises of Benefices when they shall be vacant. Gratiæ expectativæ.

In the twenty fourth Session on the 16th of April, the Project between the Ambassadors of the Council and the Greeks was propos'd and approv'd, the safe conduct which the Council granted to them was read, and the Bulls of the Emperor and of the Patriarch of Constantinople to the Council, and the Decree wherein the Council granted Indulgences to all those that should labour for the Re-union of the Greeks.

These Instruments being carried to Constantinople, the Greek Emperor obtain'd Procurations of the Patriarch and Metropolitans of the Eastern Churches, for sending Persons in their Name to the Council in the West; and in the mean time the Council on their part put things in a readiness for performing what they had promis'd the Greeks, by treating with Nicolas de Montana, who lent the Sum of 30800 Ducats, and oblig'd himself to equip four Gallies and 300 Archers that were promis'd to the Greeks. All the difficulty was to agree upon the place where the Council should be held, which they consulted about in many Congregations, and at last in a general Congregation, it was decreed by the Votes of more than two thirds of the Prelats, that the Council should be held at Basil, if the Greeks would accept of this City; but if not, that all endeavours should be us'd to make them agree to the City of Avignon; or whatever happen'd, that they would confine themselves to Savoy, which was one of the Places which the Greeks had propos'd. The Council sent two Ambassadors to Pope Eugenius to communicate to him this Resolution, and observ'd to him that he himself had propos'd the City of Avignon, and conjur'd him to come in Person to the Council, that they might Labour by consent in expediting the Indulgences, and imposing the Tenths for furnishing the necessary Expences. Eugenius would not make a Bull about these Things, but he said, that he would signify his Intentions to the Council, by the Arch-bishop of Taranta, who was to be there present the first Day. At the same time two other Deputies of the Council concluded a Treaty with those of Avignon, who had already advanc'd 6000 Ducats to the Commander of the Gallies, and agreed with them, that before they furnish'd the other 70000. which they had promis'd, the Council should make a Decree for fixing the place where the Council was to be held at which the Greeks should be present, and that they should be permitted to name Receivers of the Profits that should arise as well from Indulgences as from the Imposition of Tenths, to whom they should be made over, until such time as they were wholly reimburs'd the Sums they should advance. The Negotiations of the Council and the Pope with the Greeks.

The Negotiation of the Council and the Pope with the Greeks.

The Greek Emperor being resolv'd to come into the West with the Patriarch of Constantinople and the Eastern Bishops, sent back his Ambassador John, to give the Pope and the Council assurance of his Intention, that they might get ready the Gallies. This Ambassador came to Basil at the beginning of February, 1437. and desir'd that the Council would agree of the place, and furnish the Gallies they had promis'd. The President of the Assembly answer'd him, That the Council had nam'd a Commander to conduct the Gallies, and that they had chosen for the place of the Assembly the City of Basil, or that of Avignon, or the Savoy. John made many Difficulties about this Choice, and said that when he propos'd the Savoy, he meant only those Places which the Duke of Savoy had in Italy; and insisted upon this, That the Pope must be present in Person at the Council. When they shew'd no regard to his Remonstrances, he made Protestation as well by writing as viva voce; notwithstanding which it was resolv'd, That Ambassadors should be sent into Greece, who should pass by Avignon, and that in case this City could furnish within 30 Days the Sums agreed upon, the Council should make a Decree 6 Days after for confirming the choice of the City of Basil, Avignon, or the Savoy; That the Council would authorize by a Decree the Imposition of Tenths for the Security of the Sums that should be sent; That Power should be given to the Ambassadors to agree upon a Port in Italy where the Greeks should land; and that in case the Greeks would not come into the West, those of Avignon should be reimburs'd the Sums they had advanc'd. This Instrument was agreed upon by Plurality of Voices, in spite of the opposition of the Pope's Legats.

Some Days after the Archbishop of Taranto being sent by Eugenius to the Council, declar'd, That the Pope intended not to grant Indulgences nor the Imposition of Tenths, until they had agreed upon a City in Italy, which started another Dispute in the Council; but the News being brought that the City of Avignon had furnish'd 30000 Ducats, and was ready to furnish the rest, more than two thirds of the Prelats remain'd firm in their first Resolution; insomuch that in the 23th Session held the 7th of May, the Decree was read by order of the Council in the place where Decrees were wont to be read; but at the same time the Legats and some other Prelats caus'd to be read in a lower place a private Decree, wherein Eugenius or Orsini were nam'd for holding of the Council, which was repeated with much Precipitation, and was not heard at all. When the Session rose, the Question was put concerning sealing the Decree, the Box in which the Seal was kept being in the Hands of the Cardinal of St. Angelo, and the Keys in the Hands of the four Deputies of the Council. These had a mind that the Decree should be seal'd, but the Cardinal of St. Angelo being unwilling, this rais'd a Contest, which by Agreement was referr'd to the Cardinal of St. Peter at Lyons, principal Legat to the Pope, Alfonsus Bishop of Burgos Ambassador to the King of Castile, and the Archbishop of Palermo Ambassador to the King of Arragon, who were entrusted to regulate what concern'd the Seal, and the sending of the Letters and Instruments in question. These Commissioners caus'd to be seal'd the Decree made by plurality of Voices, and refus'd to seal the private Conclusion, and the pretended Decree made by a small number. They caus'd to be seal'd also the Instrument of Security granted to the City of Avignon, and the Letter written to the Emperor and the Patriarch of Constantinople, and sent their Dispatches to Avignon. But some Days after a Secretary and another Domestick of the Cardinal of St. Angelo, having taken away the Lock of the Box where the Seals were kept, caus'd the other Decree to be seal'd, and other Letters for the Emperor and the Patriarch of Constantinople. The Council being inform'd of this Trick caus'd a Proces to be made against those who were the Authors of it, arrested Bishop John, one of the Pope's Legats, who was accused of being a Complice in it, who discover'd that this Accusation was not groundless, by making his Escape out of the City when he was to be try'd.

In the mean time the Pope, who minded nothing so much as to hinder the Council from continuing to sit at Basil, where it was held in a City out of Italy, confirm'd the Conclusion of those who would translate the Council to Florence or Udine, by the Confirmation obtain'd at Ferrara, May 10th; and to be before-hand with the Council, he caus'd 4 Gallies to be speedily equipp'd at Venice, on which the Ambassadors of the Greeks, who were entirely gain'd by the Pope, embark'd, with three Bishops whom the Pope sent into the East in the Quality of Legats. These Ambassadors being arriv'd before those of the Council, inform'd the Greeks, That the Prelats of the Council by concert with the Pope, had concluded that the Council for the Re-union should be held in Italy. Whereupon the Emperor, the Patriarch and the other Prelats, who were to go into the West, prepar'd to depart in the Pope's Gallies, when at the same time they were surpriz'd to hear, That other Gallies were arriv'd from the Council. The Captain Gondelmier, who commanded those of the Pope, had Orders to fight them, and he had done it if the Greek Emperor had not forbad him. But the Gallies of the Council being arriv'd, the Bishops who came on their behalf, presented to the Greek Emperor and the Patriarch, the Bulls and safe Conducts which they had brought, assuring them that they were come to execute the Treaty made with them, and importun'd them to embark in the Gallies of the Council. The Emperor, who was pre-engag'd on the Pope's behalf, answer'd them, That they came now too late, for he could not make use of their Gallies. They remonstrated to him, That it was not their fault but his Ambassador John's, who had told them it would be sufficient if they should arrive in the Month of October. When they saw that the Emperor persisted in his Resolution, they pray'd him to send, before his Departure, Ambassadors to the Pope and Council, assuring him they would continue there, until he could determine, according to the Answer they should bring him, whether he would depart or no.

At the ſame time a Courier came from Sigiſmund, to diſſuade John Palæologus from his Voyage into the Weſt: But this Prince perſiſted in his Reſolution, notwithſtanding this Diſcouragement, and having made choice of thoſe who were to accompany him and the Patriarch, he Embark'd November the 24th, 1437. The Departure of the Greeks for the Weſt.

i. e. Magnus Primicerius, as Biſhop Creighton tranſlates it in the Verſion of Scyropulus's Hiſtory of the Florentine Council; perhaps, the Principal Secretary.

While theſe Things were tranſacted in the Eaſt, the Council of Baſil in the Weſt proceeded againſt Pope Eugenius. He was accus'd of being refractory to the Decrees of the Council concerning Elections, Reſervations and Appeals, of uſing Simony, of having ruin'd the City of Paleſtrina, and that he had waſted many other places of the Patrimony of St. Peter, on purpoſe to hinder the Re-union of the Greeks; of breaking the Oath he had made at his promotion to the Papal Dignity, and abuſing his Authority many other ways; whereupon the Council thought fit to cite him to appear within Sixty Days, in Perſon or by a Proctor; and to declare to him, That if he did not appear there, they would proceed againſt him; and to order the Cardinals to be preſent there alſo at the ſame time. This was reſolv'd upon, and publiſh'd in the Twenty Sixth Seſſion, held the laſt Day of July, 1437.

The Council of Baſil.

In the Twenty Seventh, held the 27th of September, the Council declar'd the Promotion to be Null, which was made by Eugenius, of John, Patriarch of Alexandria, to the Dignity of a Cardinal; and all other Promotions which he might have made, or ſhould make againſt the Decrees of the Council. It was declar'd alſo at the ſame Seſſion, That the Decree by which Florence or Udine was appointed, was forg'd, and had been ſurreptitiouſly Seal'd. In fine, by a third Decree, the Alienation was prohibited, which the Pope had a mind to make of the City of Avignon and the Countſhip of Veneſſin, and the Council took them into their Protection.

The time allow'd the Pope by the Council for Appearing, being expir'd on the 1ſt of October, the Proctors of the Council demanded in the Twenty Eighth Seſſion, held the ſame Day, That he might be declar'd Contumacious. He was ſummon'd according to Cuſtom at the Church-gate, and afterwards declar'd Contumacious, and it was order'd that he ſhould be further proceeded againſt.

Eugenius, for his part, had publiſh'd Twelve Days before a Bull, whereby he tranſlated the Council of Baſil to Ferrara, in caſe the Biſhops ſhould continue to proceed againſt him, and as ſoon as the Greeks ſhould arrive, allowing them only the ſpace of Thirty Days for treating about the Affair of the Bohemians, and declaring any other Tranſlation to be Null, which was or ſhould be made but by his Authority. At the ſame time he ſent to all parts the Bulls for calling the Council at Ferrara.

The Council of Baſil oppos'd a Decree to this Bull, wherein they declar'd the Tranſlation of the Council to Ferrara to be Null; enjoin'd the Pope to recal it under the Penalties ordain'd in the Eleventh Seſſion, and confirm'd the Decrees they had made concerning the Collation of Benefices. This Decree was publiſh'd in the Twenty Ninth Seſſion, on the 2d of October. The Council did nothing more this Year, but only made a Decree in the Thirtieth Seſſion, held the 22d of December, concerning the Communion in both kinds, wherein they declar'd, That it was not neceſſary by a Divine Command. The 2d of the ſame Month the Emperor Sigiſmund Died.

Eugenius look'd upon the Decree of the Twenty Ninth Seſſion, as a Contradiction to the Prohibition he had made of proceeding againſt him, and by his Bull of the 1ſt of January, 1438. he declar'd the Council tranſlated to Ferrara, where it ſhould begin the 8th of January. And in effect, Nicolas, Cardinal of Santa Croix open'd it on this Day, with ſome Italian Biſhops, and held the Firſt Seſſion the 10th of this Month, wherein the Tranſlation of the Council to Ferrara was approv'd; and the Council of Baſil, and all that it had done ſince the Tranſlation,

The Council of Ferrara.

The Council of Ferrara. and all that it ſhould do for the future, was declar'd Null, except what they might have ordain'd concerning the Affair of the Bohemians. At the ſame time the Cardinal Julian, who had always continued till that time in the Office of Preſident to the Council, notwithſtanding the Tranſlation the Pope had made of it, retir'd from Baſil, and carry'd away with him only four Prelats of the Council, while all the other remain'd as well as the Ambaſſadors of Princes, and continu'd to Aſſemble, to make Orders, and to proceed againſt Eugenius; having for their Head Louis Allemand, Cardinal, by the Title of St. Cecil, commonly call'd the Cardinal of Arles, from the name of his Archbiſhoprick, who continu'd Preſident of the Council, and maintain'd it to the end with all poſſible Prudence and Vigour.

The Council of Baſil. In the Thirty Firſt Seſſion, held the 25th of January, 1438. they made at firſt a Decree about Cauſes, whereby they ordain'd, That they ſhall all be determin'd upon the place, except the great Cauſes, or thoſe about Elections for Cathedrals and Monaſteries; and ſince that their immediate Subjection made them devolve to the Holy See, they do therefore forbid them to appeal to the Pope, Omiſſo medio, or to appeal from any Interlocutory before the Definitive Sentence; at leaſt they ordain, That the Injury done by the Interlocutory Sentence cannot be repair'd in the Definitive Sentence; and that in caſe of Appeal to the Holy See, the Judges upon the place ſhall be commiſſion'd; and laſtly, That while the Council ſits, all Cauſes of the Members of the Council which ſhall be carried to the Pope, ſhall be try'd in the Council. After this, they revok'd by a ſecond Decree all Promiſes of Benefices before they were vacant, which were granted, or ſhould be granted for the future: Yet they left to the Popes a Power of providing for one Benefice in the Churches where there were ten Prebends, and for two in the Churches where there were fifty of them: And to the end, that Benefices may be fill'd with fit Perſons, they ordain'd, That there ſhall be a Profeſſor of Divinity in all Cathedral Churches, and that Collators ſhall be bound, ſo ſoon as occaſion offers, to name a Doctor or a Batchelor in Divinity for a Canon, who had ſtudied ten Years in ſome privileg'd Univerſity, that he may read Lectures twice a Week; That beſides this, in each Cathedral or Collegiat Church, the third part of the Prebends ſhall be given to the Graduates, Doctors, Licentiates, or Batchelors in any Faculty; ſo that the firſt vacant Benefice in each Church ſhall be given to a Graduate, and then that which ſhall be vaçant after the two next, and ſo onwards; That the ſame Method ſhall be obſerv'd with reſpect to Dignities; That the Curates of wall'd Cities ſhall at leaſt be Maſters of Arts; That all thoſe who have the requiſite Qualifications, ſhall be bound to give in their Names every Year, at Chriſtmas, to the Collators of Benefices, that thy may have a Right to them, otherwiſe their Promotion ſhall be Null; Laſtly, That the Benefices of Regulars ſhall be given to Regulars that are fit for them. The Council of Baſil having made theſe Decrees, declar'd Pope Eugenius ſuſpended from all kind of Adminiſtration of the Papal Power, as well in Spirituals as Temporals, which had now devolv'd to the Council; Decreed, That all he did ſhould be Null, and forbad all ſorts of Perſons to obey him under pain of Excommunication.

Gratiæ expectativæ.

The Council of Ferrara. The Pope Eugenius, who had been at Ferrara ever ſince the 24th of January, called a Meeting of the Prelats who were there preſent, on the 8th of February; and held a Seſſion, wherein nothing was concluded, but that the Pope ſhould remove theſe pretended Miſchiefs which the Continuation of the Council of Baſil occaſion'd. Afterwards they conſulted about ſome Preliminaries of the Council, and particularly as to what concern'd the Annulling of the Council of Baſil, and the Calling of this New Council at Ferrara; and it was reſolv'd, That not only all that had been done in the Council of Baſil ſince the Tranſlation ſhould be declar'd Null, but alſo that the Prelats ſhould be treated as Schiſmaticks, who had or ſhould attempt any thing to the prejudice of the Pope, and all their Benefices ſhould be declar'd vacant; That the City of Baſil ſhould be put under an Interdict, if it did not drive them away within a Month; That the ſame Penalty ſhall be enacted againſt all the places that ſhall receive or favour them; That Princes ſhall be inform'd of theſe things, and invited to ſend their Ambaſſadors, and the Prelats of their Dominions to the Council of Ferrara; That all the Sums ſhall be ſtopp'd which had been gather'd to contribute to the Union of the Greeks. This Reſolution paſt in the Congregations of the 11th and 14th of February, and was read and approv'd in the Seſſion, held on the 15th of the ſame Month, at which the Biſhop of Foro Julio read and publiſh'd the Decree made in the Name of Eugenius, with the Approbation of the Council; whereby he declar'd, That the Prelats which remain'd at Baſil had incurr'd the Penalties of Excommunication and Deprivation of their Dignities and Benefices enacted in the Bull of Tranſlation; Null'd and made Void all that they had done ſince the Tranſlation, or ſhould do for the future; enjoin'd the Prelats to depart from Baſil within Thirty Days, and the Magiſtrates and Inhabitants of the City to force them away under pain of Excommunication, and an Inderdict; and in caſe they ſhould not do it, he forbad all ſorts of Perſons to enter within that City, under the ſame pains, and enjoin'd all Merchants to withdraw from it. This is what was done at Ferrara before the Arrival of the Greeks.

The Council of Baſil. On the other ſide, the Council of Baſil underſtanding what had been decreed in the Second Seſſions of the Synod of Ferrara, oppos'd to this Decree a Synodal Anſwer, publiſh'd the 17th of March, and in the Thirty Second Seſſion, on the 25th of the ſame Month, they declar'd the Calling of the Council of Ferrara to be Null, and all that had been done there, or ſhould be done there for the future; enjoin'd all the Prelats who were at Ferrara, and all the Officers of the the Court of Eugenius, to come within 30 Days to Baſil, and excommunicated all thoſe who ſhould directly or indirectly hinder or moleſt thoſe that would come to Baſil.

The arrival of the Greeks.

The Greeks arriv'd at Venice on the 8th of February. The Emperor John Emmanuel Palæologus was there in Perſon, with Joſeph the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and the other Prelats whom they had brought with them. They conſulted for ſome time, whether they ſhould go and meet the Pope at Ferrara, or expect News from the Council at Baſil; but at laſt being reſolv'd to go right to the Pope, they parted from Venice the 28th of the ſame Month, and arriv'd at Ferrara the 7th of March. At firſt there was ſome Difficulty as to the manner how the Patriarch and the Greek Biſhops ſhould addreſs themſelves to the Pope. He had a mind to require of them that they ſhould proſtrate themſelves before him and kiſs his Feet; but they refus'd it with ſo much Reſolution, that the Pope was forc'd to recede from his Pretenſion, and to receive them without this Ceremony. The Patriarch and the other Greek Prelats enter'd ſix apiece into the Chamber where he was, and ſaluted him by embracing him. But he order'd none but the Patriarch to ſit down in the place of Cardinals, and ſuffer'd the reſt to ſtand; and he would not allow the Patriarch to carry his Croſs, and give the Benediction in the City. Some Days after they began to talk about Affairs, and the Emperor ſollicited the Pope to call an Oecumenical Council, and to invite to it the Kings and Princes of the Weſt, or their Ambaſſadors. The Pope anſwer'd him, That it could not be done at that time becauſe of the Wars: But they agreed to be ſatisfy'd with the opening of the Council at Ferrara, and to adjourn it for four Months; and that the Prelats might have time to come thither, they fix'd the Day of opening to the ninth of April.

The opening of the Council of Ferrara.

In the mean time there were ſeveral Diſputes concerning the Seats of the Pope, the Emperor, and the Patriarch: But at laſt it was agreed, That the Pope ſhould be ſeated on a high Chair in the firſt place on the right Hand; That a Step below him a vacant Throne ſhould be plac'd for the Emperor of the Latins; and below him, on the ſame ſide, ſhould be plac'd the Cardinals, Archbiſhops, and Biſhops of the Weſt: That the Greek Emperor ſhould have a Throne on the other ſide, oppoſite to that of the Emperor of the Latins; That below that ſhould be plac'd the Chair of the Patriarch, and then the Bench of the Vicars of the other Patriarchs; and next to them the Greek Archbiſhops and Biſhops; and that the Prince Demetrius, Brother of the Emperor, ſhould ſit on a Seat beſide him. The Goſpel was plac'd in the middle of the Church before the Altar. Theſe Things being thus order'd, the opening of the Council was made in the Church of St. George, on the 9th of April. The Patriarch of Conſtantinople could not be preſent becauſe of his Indiſpoſition; but there was read a Declaration which he made, wherein he approves the calling of the Council at Ferrara, and conſents they ſhould allow the ſpace of four Months; That the Biſhops who were ſtill at Baſil, and all others who ought to be preſent there, might come, as well as the Kings and Princes of the Weſt. After this the Decree of the Pope was read, by which he declares that the Oecumenical Synod ſhall be held at Ferrara. This Reſolution was approv'd by the Latins and the Greeks; and thus ended the firſt Seſſion of the Council of Ferrara.

The Conferences of the Greeks with the Latins, about Purgatory.

The Pope ſent this new Bull of Convocation into all Kingdoms, and ſollicited earneſtly the Princes to ſend to the Council of Ferrara; but not to loſe any time, he preſs'd the Greeks to enter upon a Conference with the Latins about the Differences between the two Churches. The Greeks had a mind to put it off till ſuch time as the Council ſhould be aſſembled. But at laſt after many Conteſts it was agreed, That on each ſide ten Perſons ſhould be appointed who ſhould meet three times a Week in the Church of the Monaſtery of St. Andrew, and confer together about the Controverſies. The Greeks, on their part, appointed Mark of Epheſus, the Biſhops of Monembaſe, Nice, Lacedemon and Anchiala, together with the Grand Maſter of the Rolls, the Grand Eccleſiarch, two Abbots and one Monk, to whom the Emperor join'd Jagaris. The Latins appointed on their ſide the Cardinal Julian, the Cardinal of Ferme, Andrew Biſhop of Rhodes, John a Doctor of Spain, and ſix others. Mark of Epheſus, and Beſſarian Biſhop of Nice, were entruſted to ſpeak in behalf of the Greeks, and to them it was recommended that they ſhould not enter upon the principal Controverſies, but reſerve them to the Council. The Conference began with ſeveral Diſcourſes on both ſides, concerning the Benefits of Peace and Union. The Cardinal Julian would have had the Greeks enter upon the principal Queſtion about the Union; but they ſhunn'd it in this firſt and the ſecond Conference. In the third the ſame Cardinal ſaid, That there were four Heads of Controverſy between the Greeks and the Latins; The 1. Concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit. The 2. About Unleaven'd or Leaven'd Bread in the Sacrifice. The 3. About Purgatory. And the 4. About the Primacy of the Pope; and he enquir'd of the Greeks with which of theſe Controverſies they thought it convenient to begin their Conferences. They refus'd to Treat about the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit; and gave no Anſwer about the other Articles until they conſulted the Emperor, without whoſe Orders they would do nothing. In the fourth Conference they offer'd to treat about Purgatory, or the Primacy, and left the Latins at liberty to chooſe which of them. The Cardinal Julian choſe the Article of Purgatory; but they did not begin to debate this Matter until the fifth Seſſion, held June the 5th. Upon the demand of the Greeks, That they would expound the Doctrin of the Church of Rome about this Point, Julian told them, It believ'd that the Souls of the Juſt, which were pure and without Stain, and free from mortal Sin, aſcended ſtreight into Heaven, and enjoy'd eternal Repoſe; but that the Souls of thoſe that had faln into Sins after Baptiſm, tho' they had done Penance for them, if they had not perfectly accompliſh'd the Penance impos'd upon them, nor brought forth Fruits worthy of Repentance to obtain an entire remiſſion of their Sins, paſs'd through the Fire of Purgatory; and that ſome are there a longer, and ſome a ſhorter time, according to the quality of their Sins; and that at laſt being purified, they enjoy'd perfect Happineſs; but that the Souls of thoſe who died in mortal Sins, or in original Sin, were ſent immediately to the place of Torments. Mark of Epheſus anſwer'd, That the Doctrin of the Greek Church was not different from this but in a very ſmall Matter, and that he hop'd 'twas eaſy to rectify it by an Explication. This Difference was expounded in the ſixth Conference, and the Greeks made it to conſiſt in this, That the Latins laid the Purification of Souls was made by Fire, whereas the Greeks believ'd that the Souls of Sinners went to a place of Darkneſs and Sadneſs, where they were for ſome time in Affliction, and depriv'd of the Light of God; but that they were purified and deliver'd from this place of Affliction, by Sacrifices and Alms; That they believ'd alſo that the Damn'd ſhould not be perfectly miſerable, nor the Saints enjoy a perfect Happineſs till after the Reſurrection of their Bodies. The Latins demanded, That this Declaration of the Greeks ſhould be put in writing. When they were about to do it, Mark of Epheſus, and Beſſarian of Nice, could not agree among themſelves, and each of them drew up a different Writing; the former being perſuaded that perfect Happineſs was delay'd until the Day of Judgment; and the other believing that they wanted nothing to perfect their Happineſs but to receive their Bodies. This Conteſt embroil'd them one with another, and from this time they acted no more by conſent, and there was no good underſtanding between them. After this the Conferences degenerated into Heats, and ended about the end of the Month of July, without treating upon any other Points but that of Purgatory, and even about that they could not agree.

When the time appointed for the ſitting of the Synod drew near, the Greeks began to be uneaſy, and the Peſt was then in Ferrara. All theſe Conſiderations ſhould have mov'd both of them to wiſh for a Concluſion of this Affair, but it was not eaſily to be compaſs'd. The Princes ſent neither Prelats nor Ambaſſadors to the Council; thoſe who were at Baſil remain'd there ſtill; the Greek Emperor would not have the Synod begin until there were a conſiderable number of Prelats. Nevertheleſs the Pope, by his Importunity, made him reſolve to hold the Council; telling him, That where the Pope, the Emperor and the Patriarch were, there was the Synod: But a new Difficulty happen'd; for the Greeks reflecting upon the ſmalneſs of their number, concluded, That if Things were carried in the Council by plurality of Votes, they muſt needs loſe their Cauſe, and therefore they remonſtrated, That the Caſe was different in this Council from what it had been in former Councils, wherein the Greek and Latin Church were at agreement; whereas in this the Difference which was to be determin'd was between them, ſo that the Judges themſelves were divided; and therefore they propos'd, That the Voices of each Party ſhould not be reckon'd by the Party, but in proportion to the number of which each Party conſiſted, ſo that if there were 20 on one ſide, and 200 on the other, the 20 Votes ſhould be reckon'd as equal to the 200. The Emperor took upon him to make the Pope agree to this Propoſal, and he agreed with him about ſome things; but he did not otherwiſe explain himſelf to the Biſhops, but by telling them, That they ſhould be content, and that the Pope had granted them what they deſir'd. After this a Reſolution was taken to begin quickly the Seſſions of the Council. The Emperor having ſent for the ſix principal Archbiſhops, the Grand Maſter of the Rolls, the Grand Eccleſiarch, with the two Abbots who had been preſent at the Conferences, and three Doctors, acquainted them that the time of the Synod was now approaching, that they muſt conſult where they ſhonld begin the Queſtion about the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit, which conſiſted in two Points: The firſt was, to underſtand whether the Doctrin of the Latin Church, upon this Subject, was Orthodox and agreeable to the Sentiments of the Greek Church. The ſecond, whether they had reaſon to add to the Creed, That He proceeded from the Son. They were divided in their Opinions, but the greater number thought that they muſt begin with this laſt Head. The Greeks and Latins appointed each of them ſix Perſons to maintain the Diſpute: Thoſe who ſpoke on Behalf of the Greeks were Mark of Epheſus, and Beſſarian of Nice; on the Latin's ſide, the Cardinal Julian, Andrew Biſhop of Rhodes, the Biſhop of Forio-Julio, and a Spaniſh Doctor nam'd John, were choſen with two others, to Anſwer the Greeks. The Emperor having the conſent of his Clergy, for beginning the Council, ſent Jagaris and Scyropulus the Grand Eccleſiarch, to advertiſe the Pope of three Things; 1. That the Greeks were ready to begin the Synod, and waited only for the Day which he would appoint. 2. That they deſir'd to be the Aggreſſors, and that the Latins would anſwer them. 3. That the Seſſions ſhould be held in the Cathedral, or at leaſt in ſome of the principal Churches. The Pope granted them the two firſt Articles, and fix'd the firſt Seſſion of the Council for the 8th of October: But he would never conſent to the third, and caus'd all the Seſſions to be held in the Chappel of his own Palace. The Places there were order'd very near after the ſame manner as they had been in the Church of St. George at the beginning of the Council.

Chartophylax.

The Conferences of the Greeks and Latins about the Addition to the Creed, held at Ferrara.

The Seſſion began with a long Diſcourſe made by Beſſarian about the Advantages of Peace; after which Mark of Epheſus having ſpoke of the Charity that was to be preſerv'd in Diſputes, gave them to underſtand that he would begin with diſcourſing about the Addition made to the Creed. Andrew of Rhodes anſwer'd on behalf of the Latins, by praiſing the Deſign of maintaining Charity, and would immediately have enter'd upon the Matter about the Addition: But Mark of Epheſus ſtopp'd him, and told him, That it was not yet time to anſwer about this Article; and having remark'd, That the Church of Rome had neglected in times paſt that Peace which ſhe deſir'd at preſent, he ſaid that ſhe could not obtain it but by removing altogether the Principles

Principles of Discord, and demanded, That before any thing was done, the Decrees of former Councils should be read.

The Conferences of the Greeks and Latins about the Addition to the Creed, held at Ferrara.

In the next Session held the 14th of October, Andrew of Rhodes having a mind to begin a Discourse about the Addition to the Creed, was interrupted by the Greeks; and this Session was spent in Contests about the manner in which they should proceed. The Greeks insisting always upon it, That it belong'd to them to propose, and that in the first place the Decrees of former Councils must be read.

After much Dispute the Greeks carried it so far, That in the third Session held the 17th of October, they read the Prohibition made by the Council of Ephesus, to add any thing to the Creed; upon which Mark of Ephesus made some Reflections, and confirm'd it by the Testimony of Saint Cyril and Pope Celestine. They reported also the Definition of the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th General Councils, which would have nothing added to the Creed. The Latins produc'd a Manuscript of the 7th Council, where they pretended it would be found, That the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Son; and alledg'd them that this Manuscript was very ancient. But the Greeks reply'd, That if this had been so, Thomas Aquinas and other Latins, who were Defenders of this Addition, would not have fail'd to relate this Testimony as decisive in the Case.

In the 4th Conference on the 20th of the same Month, after it was agreed, That nothing out of Synods should be alledg'd for or against Photius; that both Sides should be bounded by the 6th General Council. Andrew of Rhodes begun a long Discourse to shew, That what the Greeks pretended to be an Addition, was a meer Explication, which was not forbidden to be made. He founded this Proposition particularly upon the Example of the second Council, which had added Words to the Nicene Creed to explain more clearly its Doctrin; That there was the same Reason as to the word Filioque, added by the Latins, which was only an Explication of what was in the Nicene Creed; That the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Father, because the Son having all that is natural and essential to the Father, when 'tis said that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father, it must necessarily be understood that he proceeds also from the Son.

Andrew of Rhodes continu'd the same Discourse in the next Conference held the 23th of October, and undertook to answer the Authorities produc'd by Mark of Ephesus, grounding always upon the same Principle, That they did not forbid to add Explications or Declarations of the same Faith, but only such Things as were contrary to, or different from the Doctrin contain'd in the Creed. He related many Passages of the Greek Fathers, to prove that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Son as from the Father, and insisted particularly upon the Authority of St. Cyril and Maximus. But the Greeks maintain'd that the Passage in this latter was falsified. He alledg'd also the Authority of Tarasius the Patriarch of Constantinople, and an ancient Manuscrim of the 7th Council where the Addition was found. He laid some Stress upon the Silence of Photius, who had never objected this Addition to the Latins; and lastly he and the Cardinal Julian concluded this Conference with the Testimonies of St. Cyril and Agathon, who acknowledg'd that the Roman Church had Power to explain and establish the Doctrin of Faith.

[* But this is notoriously false, as appears from the charges the Holy Spirit

Encyclical Epistle of the Patriarchs of the East, which is inserted into the 10th Book of Baronius's Annals, wherein he charges the Latins with corrupting the Nicene Creed, that they might the more freely prove that the Doctrin of the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son.]

The Greeks having conferr'd among themselves about the Discourse of Andrew of Rhodes, appointed Bessarion of Nice to answer him: He made a long and learned Discourse in the Session held the first of November, wherein he undertook to prove, That all Additions to the Creed were forbidden, and so it was needless to examine whether that made by the Latins was an Explication or not. That there was sufficient ground to reject it, because it was an Addition. That it was not forbidden to explain the Faith, but to infert these Explications into the Creed. That until the time of the second Council this might have been allow'd, but the third had absolutely forbidden it. That this Prohibition had been needless, if they had only forbidden to add any thing contrary to the ancient Faith, since that was always forbidden. That the Fathers of this Council had judg'd it not convenient to add to the Creed the Term of Mother of God, tho' it seem'd necessary to do it; And that these Words were only an Explication of the Doctrin contain'd in the Creed; That the following Councils would not add their Definitions, tho' they were only an Explication of the Doctrin of the Creed.

Bessarion having not finish'd his Answer to Andrew of Rhodes in this Session, continued it in the next held the 4th of November, and maintain'd that St. Cyril and Agathon did not only forbid to add any thing contrary to the Creed, but also disallow'd of any kind of Addition. And as to what they had advanc'd in favour of the Church of Rome's Prerogatives, he said, That the Greeks knew very well the Rights and Privileges of that Church, but that they knew also the Bounds of them; and that when they deny'd the Universal Church and an Oecumenical Council a Right to add to the Creed, they had much more Reason to deny it to the Church of Rome, or rather they were perswaded that the Councils by their Decrees forbad it. When Bessarion had finish'd, Andrew of Rhodes undertook to reply, but being unprepared he wander'd from the Subject, and after he had said many impertinent Things, at last he came to the chief Points of the Doctrin.

John Bishop of Foro-Julio was made choice of by the Latins to answer Bessarion, in the Session held the 8th of November. After he had alledg'd many Reasons to prove that the word Filioque, was was not an Addition but a meer Explication, he maintain'd not only that there was no Law forbidding to add any Explication to the Creed, but also that none could make such a Prohibition to the Church, and that it could extend only to private Persons, who would make this Addition without Authority.

The Cardinal Julian finish'd this Dispute in the Session on November 11th, with many Remarks upon the Prohibition of the Council of Ephesus. 1. He observ'd, That this Law was to be understood with respect to the occasion on which it was made, which was the false Creed of the Nestorians, that the Council had condemn'd, and not that of Charisius, which was Orthodox. 2. That this Council did not only forbid to Add, but also to make any new Exposition of the Faith; and therefore if this Prohibition were extended to the Church or a Council, it would follow, That the Church could not make a new Exposition of the Faith; which the Greeks did own to be false. 3. That the Council of Ephesus having spoken only of the Nicene Creed, it would follow, That it must disapprove the Additions made to the Creed by the Council of Constantinople. 4. That the Councils of Ephesus and Chalcedon, St. Cyril and St. Leo, had no other design, but to hinder the teaching or introducing of any new Doctrin. When he had finish'd these Remarks, he said it was now time to come to the principal Question, viz. Whether it were true that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Son; and in case the Greeks should prove that he did not proceed, then it would follow that the Roman Church had made a prohibited Addition to the Creed; but if on the contrary it should be prov'd, That this was found and true Doctrin, then it must be confess'd that the Roman Church had Power to add this Explication to the Creed. Nevertheless Bessarion said, That he would answer in the next Conference, to what the Cardinal Julian had now advanc'd.

On the 15th of November, Mark of Ephesus and Cardinal Julian contested among themselves, concerning the Creed of Charisius, and the Explication of the Prohibition of the Council of Ephesus. Towards the conclusion the Cardinal Julian observ'd, That there were Manuscripts of the Creed of Constantinople, in which these Words are not to be found, Descendit de Cœlis, nor these, Secundum Scripturas; and that the Latins had added these, Deum de Deo, about which the Greeks made no opposition, as they did about the word Filioque. Andrew of Rhodes had also said in his Discourse, That the Phrase Descendit ad inferos, was no Addition. Mark of Ephesus would have enter'd upon the Question, viz. Whether the Roman Church and the Pope had Power to add to the Creed: But the Cardinal would not enter upon it, and persisted in demanding importunately, That they would come to the principal Question, concerning the Truth of the Doctrin.

The Ambassadors of the Duke of Burgundy were receiv'd in the 14th Session held the 27th of November, saluted the Pope, presented him a Letter from their Master, and made a Discourse in the Assembly: But because they had not shewn the Greek Emperor the Respect that was due to him, nor presented him with a Letter, he would not allow them to take their Seats until he had receiv'd Satisfaction; which they gave him in the next Session by presenting him with a Letter in their Master's Name, and doing him Reverence; but after such a manner as did not perfectly satisfy.

In the mean time the Conference continu'd, and was reduc'd to a private Contest between Mark of Ephesus, and the Cardinal Julian, about the Addition to the Creed.

Another also was held on the 8th of December, which dwindled also into Heats, upon the same Subject, without the Agreeing of the Parties in any thing. The Latins would have them to enter upon the principal Point in Question; and after that was explain'd, if they should find it true, That the Holy Spirit did proceed from the Person of the Son; then the Addition should continue in the Creed; but if they should find this Proposition false, then it should be rejected. The Greeks, on the contrary, asserted, That they must begin with cutting off the word Filioque, from the Creed, and after that examin the main Question; That if the Doctrin of the Latins should be found to be true, it should be decreed, but if it were false it should be condemn'd. This Contest was the Cause why the Conferences ceas'd for some time; but at last the Greek Emperor made the Greeks resolve to enter upon the Dispute about the Truth of the Doctrin. The Pope propos'd afterwards to translate the Council to Florence, because he could no longer conveniently furnish the necessary Expence for continuing it at Ferrara; and it was agreed with the Florentines, That they should raise him a considerable Sum, provided the Council were held at Florence. The Patriarch of Constantinople and the Greek Prelats oppos'd mightily this Proposal, but at last the Necessity to which they were reduc'd oblig'd them to accept of it, and to consent that the Synod might be translated to Florence; and this Translation was publish'd in the last Assembly held at Ferrara, January the 11th, 1439. The pretence that the Pope alledg'd in the Bull, was the Pestilence which had been at Ferrara, and it was to be fear'd it would break forth again in the Spring. One part of what was owing to the Greeks was paid them. Some Relief of Mony was sent to Constantinople, and the Greeks were promised, That the Expence of their Voyage and of their living at Florence should be defray'd, and that they should be carried home again, whether the Union were concluded or no. The Pope and Emperor, the Patriarch of Constantinople and the Latin and Greek Prelats, parted after this for Florence, and arriv'd there at the beginning of February. After they had repos'd themselves for some Days, they agreed upon certain Measures concerning the Method of continuing their Conferences: And the Emperor was of Opinion, That they should be held in private. The first was held the 26th of February. The Cardinal Julian and the Emperor who were the only Persons that spoke at it, came to an Agreement, That some Expedient should be search'd for by both sides, to unite them together. The Patriarch being grievously Sick, was not present at this, nor the following Sessions. The Emperor and Greek Prelats being present at his House, consulted about this Proposal which had been made, to search after some Means for uniting them together; but they all said, That they had none to offer, and that they were ready to answer the Latins; That they would meet in Privare the next Saturday, and then enter upon a Conference. The Pope seeing that they would not propose any Expedient, but Dispute on still, put off the Meeting to Munday next, being the 2d Day of March. The Conferences of the Greeks and Latins at Florence.

Expe-

In this Session, and the five following, John the Theologue for the Latins, and Mark of Ephesus for the Greeks, disputed earnestly concerning the Procession of the Holy Spirit; and after they had long contested concerning the Sense of divers Passages of the Greek Fathers, each remain'd of his own Opinion without agreeing in any thing. The Greek Emperor perceiving plainly, That these Disputes were so far from procuring Union, that they rather serv'd to exasperate their Spirits, call'd his Prelats together to engage them to find out some Temper, by means of which an Union might be concluded; and he believ'd that he had found out an Expedient, by remarking that John the Divine had said, That the Father was the sole Cause of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit. The Greeks having search'd for divers Expedients, thought at last they had found one in a Letter of St. Maximus, who says, That the Latins by affirming that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Son, do not pretend that the Son was the Cause of the Spirit, and that they know very well, that the Father is the sole Cause of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; of the Son by Generation, of the Holy Spirit by Procession; but they mean only that the Holy Spirit proceeds by the Son, because he is of one and the same Essence. All the Greeks, except Mark of Ephesus, and the Archbishop of Heraclea, agreed, That if the Latins would approve this Letter, the Union would easily be concluded. The News of this was carried to the Latins, who promis'd to give their Answer in the first Conference, which was to be held March the 24th. The Emperor would not have Mark of Ephesus, nor the Archbishop of Heraclea to be there present, so that John spoke alone in this Session, and in the next which was held the 24th of March. The Greeks were divided among themselves, some were Enemies to the Union, others on the contrary desir'd it, and sought out means to compass it. The Emperor supported the latter, and desir'd them earnestly to conclude an Union at any price whatsoever. He caus'd them therefore to resolve in the Assembly, that a Message should be sent to the Pope, to tell him, That Disputes were useless, and they must find out some other way for Union. The Pope made answer, That the Greeks must acknowledge, That the Latins had prov'd very well, That the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Son, or else they should have brought Testimonies of Scripture expressly contrary to this Doctrin. If they did not, That an Assembly must be held, wherein they must make Oath upon the Gospels, to speak the Truth. That after this, every one should give his Opinion, and that Doctrin should be embrac'd which had a Plurality of Voices. This Answer being reported to the Emperor, he caus'd tell the Pope, That this was not the way to procure an Union, That this would end in a Dispute, and then they must come to a Decision of it, which is what they would avoid; and therefore they must pray his Holiness to find out some other way. In the mean time, Bessarion made a Discourse concerning Union, wherein he justified the Doctrin of the Latins. The Emperor having a Mind to put an end to this Affair, held after Easter a Meeting in the Patriarch's House, where the Cardinal Julian was present, who endeavour'd to persuade the Greeks to resume their Conferences; but the Emperor would not hearken to this Proposal, and therefore went himself to meet the Pope, and agreed with him, That Ten Persons should be appointed on each side, who should meet, and give their Opinion, one after another, of the Means which they thought convenient for obtaining an Union. Bessarion propos'd in the first Conference, That the Latins and Greeks should approve the Letter of Maximus to Marinus, without any Explication; but the Latins gave it a Sense which was not agreeable to the Greeks. Mark of Ephesus, propos'd after this, That the Addition made to the Creed should be struck out; others offer'd for a Model, the Profession of Faith made by the Patriarch Tarasius, wherein 'tis said, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father by the Son: In fine, divers Expedients were propos'd in five Conferences, which were held on this Subject; but not one of them was agreed upon by both Parties. After this, the Latins drew up a Profession of Faith, wherein they declar'd, That they would not admit two Principles, or two Causes in the Trinity; but one only Principle, which is the Action of the Father and of the Son, and their Productive Power, and that the Holy Spirit did not proceed from the Son, as from another Principle, or another Cause, because there is but one Cause, one Root, and one Fountain of the Divinity which is the Father; That notwithstanding this, the Father and Son are two Persons, tho' they Act by one and the same Operation, and that the Person produc'd of the Substance and Subsistence of the Father and the Son is one; That those who say the Holy Spirit proceeds only from the Father, must acknowledge that there was a time when the Son was not, or else separate the Substance from the Subsistence, which is absurd. This Profession of Faith was sent to the Greeks by the Latins, April the 29th. The Greeks not being satisfy'd with it, the Latins sent them another, which contain'd also the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and from the Son; yet in such a manner that 'twas said, the Father was the sole Cause of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. The Greeks after, this gave one from their side, wherein they declar'd, That the Father was the Fountain and Root of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and that the Holy Spirit came forth from the Son, and was sent by the Son. The Latins desir'd they would explain these Terms, and that they would tell in what Sense they took them, if they meant them of the Eternal and Substantial Procession of the Holy Spirit, or only of a Temporal Mission. The Greeks made a Difficulty of doing this. At last, a Profession of Faith was drawn up, conceiv'd in these Words, "We the Latins on one side, do Affirm and make Profession, That when we "say, the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son, we intend not by this to deny "that the Father is the Principle and Fountain of all the Divinity of the Son, and of the Holy "Spirit, or that the Son proceeds from the Father, or to admit two Principles, and two Pro-"ductions of the Holy Spirit; but we assert and believe, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from "the Father and the Son, as one sole Principle, and by one sole Production. And we the "Greeks on the other side, do acknowledge, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father, "and that he appertains to the Son, that he came forth from him, and proceeds Substantially "from these two, viz. from the Father by the Son; and we are all united in this unanimous "Profession of Faith. This Profession of Faith being read in the Assembly of the Greeks, was approv'd by some of them, and rejected by others; But at last, having pass'd by Pluratity of Voices, it was sent to the Pope, who demanded still several Explications. The Greeks were divided among themselves. Bessarion of Nice, and the Archbishop of Russia maintain'd that it might be said, That the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Father and from the Son, as the Latins said; or from the Father by the Son, according to the Expression of the Greeks; provided it were acknowledg'd, That he proceeded from the Father and the Son, as one only Principle and Cause; That this was a means of reconciling the Sentiments of the Fathers which seem'd to contradict one another, and of coming quickly to an Union. Mark of Ephesus, the Archbishop of Heraclea, and many others were of a contrary Opinion, and maintain'd, That there was a great deal of difference, between saying that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Father by the Son, and that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Father and the Son. After they had for a long time disputed both on this Subject in the private Congregations, the Emperor call'd them all together to give their Opinion on the 2d of June. The Patriarch said, That Since the Fathers taught in some places, that the Holy Spirit proceeded from the Father and the Son; and in others, That he proceeded from the Father by the Son; and that these Terms, from the Son, or by the Son, were equivalent, without making use of this Expression, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Son; he said, That he proceeds from the Father by the Son Eternally and Substantially, as one sole Principle and one sole Cause, the Preposition, by, Signifying in this place, that the Son is the Cause in the Procession of the Holy Spirit. He added, That he would receive those of the West, who said, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and from the Son, provided they would not add it to the Creed, and that the Greeks would suffer them, without changing their Rites. The Emperor said only in general, That he did not believe this Council inferiour to other General Councils; That he would follow its Decision, being perswaded that the Church cannot Err; provided the Latins would not oblige the Greeks to add any thing to the Creed, nor change any thing in their Rites. After the Emperor, Isidore, Archbishop of Russia, who represented the Patriarch of Antioch, said, That he believ'd also we must approve the Doctrin of the Occidentals, That the Holy Spirit receiv'd his being from the Son, and that the Father and the Son were one sole Principle of the Holy Spirit. Bessarion was of the same Opinion, and made a long Discourse to prove it. But Anthony, Archbishop of Heraclea, one of the Vicars of the Patriarch of Alexandria, was of another Opinion, for he plainly rejected the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Son. But the * Protosyncelle, second Vicar of the same Patriarchat, was of a contrary Opinion to him, and approv'd the Union with the Latins, altho' some Days before he had maintain'd, That the Baptism of the Latins was of no validity, because it was done by Sprinkling. Mark of Ephesus, Dositheus Bishop of Monembase, Vicar of the Patriarch of Jerusalem, and Sophronius of Anchiala, would not acknowledge, That the Son was the Cause of the Holy Spirit in the Sense that the Greeks took the Word, Cause, for a Principle; and deny'd that it might be said, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son, as one only Principle. Scyropulus, Grand Ecclesiarch, was of the same Opinion, altho' he gave not his Vote for it. Dorotheus, Bishop of Mitylene, and the Bishops of Lacedemon, of Rhodes, of Nicomedia, Distra, Iverum, and Metanique, approv'd the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son, and concluded for the Union; and so did Gregory the Penitentiary, and the Abbot Pacomus. All the Ministers of the Emperor applauded the Union, except Prince Demetrius, the Emperor's Brother; who would not give his Opinion, because he was contrary to the Union. The Ambassadors of the Princes and People of Greece, who were then present, approv'd also the Union, except those of the Iberians. The Bishops of Cyzicum, Trebisonde, Heraclea and Monembase, came over at last to the Opinion of the others; so that there were not any among the Bishops who persisted in a contrary Opinion, but only Mark of Ephesus, and Sophronius of Anchiala.

* Magnus Primicerius.

The Archbishop of Trebizonde being Sick, would not send his Vote.

The Emperor having thus dispos'd Matters towards an Union, thought it now high time to treat with the Pope about the Succors he wanted. He sent to him the Archbishop of Russia, to enter upon the Negotiation, and this Archbishop brought to him three Cardinals, who agreed upon the following Articles. First, That the Pope should furnish to the Greeks the Expences of their Return; Secondly, That he should maintain every Year 300 Soldiers, and two Gal-lies to Guard the City of Constantinople; Thirdly, That the Gallies which carried the Pilgrims to Jerusalem, should go to Constantinople; Fourthly, That when the Emperor had occasion for 20 Gallies for six Months, or for 10 for a Year, the Pope should furnish him with them; Fifthly, That if there was occasion for Land-Forces, the Pope should earnestly sollicit the Christian Princes of the West to furnish him with them. The Conference of the Greeks and Latins at Florence.

The next Day, being the 3d of June, the Emperor caus'd all the Greeks to come to the Assembly, and to repeat their Suffrages: The Patriarch said, That since the Latins did not say of their own Heads, but according to the Scripture, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father by the Son; he was of their Opinion, and that he thought this Preposition, by, denoted, That the Son was the Cause of the Holy Spirit; and thus they would unite with them, and embrace their Communion. All the Greeks, except Mark of Ephesus, follow'd the Opinion of the Patriarch, and acknowledg'd, That the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and from the Son, as one Principle and one Substance; That he proceeds by the Son, being of the same Nature and the same Substance, and that he proceeds from the Father and the Son, by one and the same Spiration and Production.

On the 5th of the same Month, the Definition was put in Writing, and three Copies were made of it; the first which was carried to the Pope, the other to the Emperor, and the third to the Patriarch of Constantinople. The next Day it was carried to the Pope and Cardinals, who agreed to it, and there were Ten Persons appointed on each side, to put the last Hand to it: This being done on the 8th of the same Month, it was read in Greek and Latin, and approv'd by the Greeks and Latins.

The next Day, the Archbishops of Russia, Nice, Trebisonde and Mitylene, being deputed to wait upon the Pope, he said unto them, God be thanked we are now agreed about the Principal Doctrin in which we differ'd; Ye must presently treat of the Questions about Purgatory, the Primacy of the Pope, and the use of Leavened and Unleavened Bread in the Eucharist, and about the Divine Sacrifice; to the end, That all occasion of Discord may be remov'd, and after that an Union be immediately settled; for the Time is short. They begun with the Question of Unleavened Bread, and it was determin'd, That they might use indifferently either that which is Leaven'd or Unleaven'd, provided it were made of Bread-Corn; That the Minister had receiv'd Orders, and that the place of Celebration was consecrated. As to Purgatory, it was determin'd, That the Souls of Saints had obtain'd in Heaven a perfect Recompence, as they were Souls; That those of Sinners were punish'd to the highest degree, and that the Souls of those who were in a middle State between these two, were in a place where they endur'd Punishment; but it was not material, whether it be said, That this was done by Fire or by Darkness, by Tempest, or after any other manner. Concerning the Primacy of the Pope, it was decreed, That he should enjoy all the Privileges which he had at the beginning of, and before the Schism. In fine, the Latins demanded concerning the Sacrifice, why the Greeks, after they have pronounc'd these Words, This is my Body, This is my Blood, repeat this Prayer, Make this Bread the precious Body of your Christ, and what is in this Chalice his precious Blood, in changing them by your Holy Spirit. The Greeks answer'd, That they confess'd the Bread was consecrated, and made the Body of Jesus Christ, by these Words, This is my Body, &c. But that as the Latins, after they have pronounc'd them, say, Order, O Lord, that these Gifts may be carried by the Hands of your Holy Angel unto your sublime Altar, so likewise the Greeks do pray, That the Holy Spirit may descend upon them, that he may make this Bread, the Body of Jesus Christ; and that which is in the Chalice his Blood, to purifie the Souls of the Communicants, and forgive their Sins; and that it may never be the Cause of their Judgment and Condemnation. The Greeks were also ask'd, what they thought of the Essence and Operation of God; they answer'd, That their Sentiment about it was the same with that of all the East; That moreover they would go and give an account of all these Things to the Emperor. The same Deputies being return'd the next Day, the Pope told them, That they were at present agreed, and that there remain'd only some small Questions, about which they must explain themselves; That they were noted down in a Writing which he had, and which he gave them to read. It contain'd four Heads. First, That the Holy See, and the Pope Vicar of Christ should enjoy their Privileges, and that they should acknowledge, he could add to the Creed what he had added unto it. The Second, That there were three kinds of those that Die, the Saints, Sinners, and those who are in a middle State; i. e. Christians who had sinn'd, and done Penance, but had not perfectly made satisfaction, for whom Prayers were made, and Alms given; That the first did see immediately the Essence of God, that the second were in Eternal Torments, and that the third were in the Fire of Purgatory; That after they are purified, they are plac'd in the number of those who see the Essence of God. The Third, That they might indifferently make use of Bread Leaven'd or Unleaven'd, provided it were made of Corn, and were consecrated by a Priest, and in an Holy Place. The Fourth, That the Questions concerning the Essence and Operation of God should be examin'd in the Council. The Deputies replied, That they had no Power from the Emperor to answer these Questions; but that in their own Name, and as Private Persons, they would declare what they thought about them. As to the first Head, That it was altogether unreasonable; for how said they, can we acknowledge, That the Pope has Power to add to the Creed without consulting his Brethren the Patriarchs; and that therefore, tho' an Addition should be permitted, yet it could not be made without the conſent of a Council: And they agreed to the ſecond and third Head, but would give no anſwer to the laſt. It was propos'd that they ſhould take the Writing, but they would not charge themſelves with it, and only told by word of Mouth to the Emperor and Patriarch what had been propos'd to them. The ſame Night the Patriarch, who had been Sick for a long time, Died, having written ſome Moments before his Death a Profeſſion of Faith, wherein he declar'd, That he died in the Sentiments of the Roman Church. The next Day he was Interr'd, and the Greeks pray'd the Pope to conclude quickly the Union, becauſe they could continue there no longer, having no Patriarch. The next Day, the Pope ſent for the Archbiſhops of Ruſſia, Nice and Mitylene; and having made them his Complements of Condoleance, he propos'd a-new the Queſtions of Unleavened Bread, of Purgatory, of the Pope's Supremacy, of the Addition to the Creed, and the Words of Conſecration. The Greek Prelats anſwer'd, That they had no Power from a Synod of the Eaſt, but as Private Perſons they ſaid, That it was indifferent to make uſe of Bread Leaven'd or Unleaven'd: That it was needleſs to ſpeak of Purgatory, ſince the Greeks had not divided upon this Subject, and that the Queſtion between them and the Latins about it was not material: That as to the Supremacy, the Pope ſhould enjoy all that of Right belong'd to him: That as to the Addition to the Creed the Eaſtern Churches would never admit it: That they would only permit thoſe of the Weſt to make uſe of it, and acknowledge that this was not another Faith, but an Explication of the Creed. Laſtly, as to Conſecration, they confeſs'd that it was made by the Words of Jeſus Chriſt, tho' they added after them a Prayer, wherein they deſir'd that the Euchariſt might be made the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe Things being reported to the Emperor, he held an Aſſembly, wherein it was reſolv'd, That in the Treaty of Union, they ſhould ſpeak of Unleavened Bread, the Supremacy of the Pope, and the Addition to the Creed; without ſaying any thing of Purgatory or the Conſecration; but the Latins inſiſted upon Purgatory. Three Days after, the Emperor and Greek Prelats went to wait upon the Pope, who having exhorted them to admit the Article of Purgatory, caus'd two Diſcourſes to be ſpoken before them, one concerning the Pope's Supremacy, and the other concerning the Unleavened Bread. The Emperor requeſted, That they ſhould preſently make an end, becauſe he muſt return home, and pray'd the Pope to cauſe prepare what was neceſſary for their Voyage.

He ſaid, That he had already taken care, and that he had ſent a Captain to Venice, to take up ſome Gallies there. After he had ſaid this, he would have given a Writing to the Emperor, who refus'd to receive it. The Pope being angry at this Refuſal, withdrew; but he caus'd tell the Emperor by the Cardinal Julian, that after the Affair was concluded he might return; that he would defray his Charges as far as Venice, and give him aſſiſtance to go to Conſtantinople. The Greek Prelats having examin'd a-new the Articles propos'd by the Latins, found them reaſonable, and paſs'd even the Article of Purgatory.

On the 17th of June, the Emperor call'd together the Greek Prelats, who were all found to be of the ſame Opinion about the Union, except Mark of Epheſus, who remain'd unmoveable. The next Sunday, they examin'd the Privileges of the Pope, and approv'd them all, adding to them two Conditions: Firſt, That the Pope could not Call an Oecumenical Council without the Emperor and the Patriarchs; Secondly, That in Caſe of an Appeal from the Judgment of the Patriarchs, the Pope could not call the Cauſe to Rome, but he muſt ſend Judges to ſit in the Places where the Fact is committed. The Pope being unwilling to paſs theſe two Articles, the Emperor was ready to break off the whole Negotiation; but the Greek Prelats ſome Days after drew up the Article concerning the Pope, in theſe Words: As to the Pope's Supremacy, we confeſs, That he is the High-Prieſt and the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt, the Paſtor and Teacher of all Chriſtians, who governs the Church of God, ſaving the Privileges and Rights of the Eaſtern Patriarchs, viz. of Conſtantinople, who is next after the Pope, and then of Alexandria, of Antioch; and laſtly, of Jeruſalem. This Project was agreed to by the Pope and Cardinals, and all Parties conſented to labour from the next Day in compoſing the Decree of Union. The firſt Difficulty which preſented it ſelf was to fix upon the Name that ſhould be put at the Head; the Latins would have it to be that of the Pope, and the Emperor pretended to the contrary that it ſhould be his. At laſt, it was order'd, That the Pope's Name ſhould be put there, but then it ſhould be added, with the Conſent of the Emperor, the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and the other Patriarchs. There was another Difficulty about the manner of expreſſing the Pope's Privileges. The Latins would have it put thus, that he ſhould enjoy them as was determin'd in Scripture, and the Writings of the Saints. This Expreſſion pleas'd not the Emperor, for, ſays he, If any Saint has made honorary Complements in a Letter to the Pope, ſhall this be taken for a Privilege? And therefore he ſaid, That he would not paſs this Article as it was thus expreſs'd. The Pope conſented, but with Difficulty, that it ſhould be amended, and that in ſtead of ſaying, according to the Writings of the Saints, it ſhould be put, according as was contain'd in the Canons. The Archbiſhop of Ruſſia and Beſſarion, would have an Anathema pronounc'd againſt thoſe who did not approve this Decree; but the Archbiſhop of Trebizonde, and the Protoſyncelle oppos'd it, and the Emperor was of their Opinion. At laſt, all the Words of the Decree having been for a long time weigh'd and examin'd on both ſides, it was fairly written out in Greek and Latin; and a Day was ſet for Signing it, and then concluding ſolemnly the Union.

The

The manner of expressing this Decree is as follows. The Title of it is, " The Definition " of the Holy Oecumenical Council celebrated at Florence, of Eugenius the Servant of the Ser- " vants of God, to serve for a perpetual Monument, with the Consent of our dear Son John " Palæologus, the Illustrious Emperor of the Greeks; and of those who supply the place of our " most venerable Brethren the Patriarchs, and of the other Prelats representing the Greek " Church. The Preface is a kind of an Hymn which contains the joyful Thoughts and Thanksgivings for the Union of the two Churches; after which the Definition is express'd in these Words.

The Decree of Union between the Greeks and the Latins.

" The Greeks and Latins being Assembled in this Holy Oecumenical Council, have us'd all " Care to examine with the greatest exactness possible the Article which concerns the Holy " Spirit; and after the Testimonies of Holy Scripture, and the Passages of Greek and Latin " Fathers were related, whereof some import that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father " and the Son; and others, that he proceeds from the Father by the Son; it was acknowledg'd, " That they had all the same Sense, tho' they make use of divers Expressions; That the Greeks, " by saying that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father, did not intend to exclude the Son; " but in regard the Greeks thought, that the Latins by affirming, The Holy Spirit proceeds " from the Father and the Son, admitted of two Principles, and two Spirations; therefore " they abstain from saying that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son: The " Latins on the contrary affirm'd, That by saying the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father " and the Son, they had no design to deny that the Father was the Fountain and Principle of " the whole Divinity, viz. of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; nor to pretend that the Son " does not receive from the Father, that wherein the Holy Spirit proceeds from him; nor lastly, " to admit two Principles or two Spirations; but that they did acknowledge, there was one " only Principle, and one only Procession of the Holy Spirit, as they had always held: And " forasmuch as these Expressions came all to one and the same true Sense, they did at last agree, " and conclude the following Union with unanimous consent. Therefore in the Name of the " Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, by the Advice of this Holy Oecumenical Coun- " cil Assembled at Florence, we Define that the truth of this Faith be believ'd and receiv'd of " all Christians; and that all profess, that the Holy Spirit is eternally from the Father and the " Son; that he receives his Substance and his Subsisting Being from the Father and from the " Son; and that he proceeds from these two eternally as one only Principle, and by one " only Procession; declaring, That the Holy Doctors and Fathers, who say, That the Holy " Spirit proceeds from the Father by the Son, have no other Sense; which they discover by this, " That the Son is as the Father, according to the Greeks, the Cause; and, according to the " Latins, the Principle of the Subsistence of the Holy Spirit; and by this, That the Father " has Communicated to the Son in his Generation all that he has, except that he is the Father, " and also has given him from all Eternity, that wherein the Holy Spirit proceedeth from him. " We define also, That this Explication, and of the Son, was added lawfully and justly to the " Creed, to clear up the Truth, and not without necessity. We declare also, That the Body " of Jesus Christ, is truly consecrated in Bread-Corn, whether it be Leaven'd or Unleaven'd, " and that the Priests ought to make use of one and the other according to the usage of each " Church: That the Souls of true Penitents, dying in the Love of God, before they have " brought forth Fruits worthy of the Repentance of their Sins, are purified after their Death " by the Pains of Purgatory, and that they are delivered from these Pains by the Suffrages of " the Faithful that are Living, such as Holy Sacrifices, Prayers, Alms, and other Works of " Piety, which the Faithful do for the other Faithful, according to the Orders of the Church; " and that the Souls of those who have never Sinn'd since their Baptism, or of those who hav- " ing fal'n into Sins, have been purified from them in their Bodies, or after their departure " out of them, as we were just now saying, enter immediately into Heaven, and see purely " the Trinity, some more perfectly than others, according to the difference of their Merits. " Lastly, That the Souls of those who Die in actual Mortal Sin, or only in Original Sin, " descend immediately into Hell, to be there punish'd with Torments tho' unequal. We define " also, That the Holy Apostolick See, and the Pope of Rome hath the Supremacy over all the " Earth; That he is the Successor of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, and the Vicar of " Jesus Christ, the Head of the Church, the Father and Teacher of all Christians; and that " Jesus Christ hath given him in the Person of St. Peter, the Power to Feed, to Rule and Govern " the Catholick Church, as it is explain'd in the Acts of Oecumenical Councils, and in the Holy " Canons: Renewing on the other Hand the Rank and Order of the Holy Patriarchs appointed " in the Canons, so that he of Constantinople is next after the Holy Pope of Rome, he of Alex- " andria the third, he of Antioch the fourth, and he of Jerusalem the fifth, without infringing " any of their Privileges and Rights.

This Definition was Sign'd July the 5th. The Emperor subscrib'd first, and after him the Archbishop of Heraclea, and the Protosyncelle, Vicars of the Patriarch of Alexandria; the Arch- bishop of Russia, Vicar of the Patriarch of Antioch; of Monembase, Vicar of the Patriarch of Jerusalem; of Cyzicum in his own Name, and in the Name of the Archbishop of Ancyra; of Trebizonde in his own Name, and the Name of the Archbishop of Cæsarea; Bessarion of Nice in his own Name, and the Name of the Bishop of Sardes; of Nicomedia in his own Name; of Tornobe in his own Name, and the Name of the Bishop of Nicomedia; of Mitylene in his own Name,

The Decree of Union between the Greeks and the Latins.

Name, and the Name of the Archbishop of Sida; of Muldoblach in his own Name, and the Name of the Bishop of Sebasta, of Amasia and Rhodes; and lastly of Distres, Ganne, Malensee, Drame and Anchiala; together with the Grand Sacrist, the Grand Keeper of Records, the Grand Ecclesiarch, the Grand Protector, and the Arch-Priest of the Church of Constantinople, the Ecclesiarch of the Royal Monastery of the Holy Mount, and four Abbots. When the Greeks had Sign'd in the presence of the Cardinals, Ten Greek Archbishops went to wait upon the Pope; and Bessarion having made a Discourse to him, wherein he declar'd, That the Greeks were of the same Judgment with the Latins, concerning the Words of Consecration, the Pope Sign'd it, and after him Eight Cardinals, and about Sixty Bishops, and many Generals of Orders as well as Abbots.

The next Day, the Ceremony was perform'd of publishing this Definition, and the Union in the Grand Church of Florence. The Pope, the Emperor, and the Greek and Latin Prelats were there present: After the Singing-men of the Greeks and Latins had sung some Hymns of Thanksgiving, the Cardinal Julian, and the Archbishop of Nice ascended into the Pulpit, and read the Definition of Faith, the one in Latin, and the other in Greek; and demanded, the one of the Latins, and the other of the Greeks, whether they approv'd it? Having all answer'd, Yes, they embrac'd one another. After this, Mass was solemnly celebrated, and the Ceremony being ended, every one retir'd.

The next Day, the Emperor caus'd to be demanded of the Pope, That the Greeks might celebrate in the same Church, and that the Pope, Cardinals, and other Latin Prelats might be there present. The Pope made them answer, That he must know before-hand the Order of the Liturgy. The Archbishop of Russia having explain'd it to the two Cardinals, who spoke to him in the Pope's Name, they gave an account of it to him: But the Pope thought, That before he was present at their Ceremonies, it was necessary, That he should see them perform'd in private by some Greek Priest; or that the Cardinals should be present at a Mass of the Greeks, that he might be assur'd there was nothing in their Rites but what he could approve of. The Deputies having brought this Answer to the Emperor, he demanded this no more of the Pope. But the Pope continu'd still to put several Questions to him: As, Why do the Greeks divide the Bread into parts before the Oblation, and unite them into the Divine Bread of the Lord? Why do they bow the Head when they carry the Oblation before it is consecrated? Why do they mix warm Water in the Chalice? Why do not the Bishops, but the Priests confer the Unction of the Holy Chrism, it being reserv'd as peculiar to the former? Why do they anoint the Dead before they Bury them? Why do not the Bishops and Priests confess themselves before they say Mass? Why do they add after the Words of Consecration this Prayer, Make this Bread the precious Body of Jesus Christ, by changing it with the Holy Spirit? Why do they separate Married Persons? And lastly, why do they not choose a Patriarch, but will return home without a Head? The Archbishop of Mitylene satisfy'd all these Demands, except those which concern the Dissolution of Marriage, and the Election of a Patriarch. The Pope desir'd of the Emperor, That he would send him some able Prelats to answer these Questions. He sent him some that were very Ignorant, who gave him only this Answer, That they would propose them to the Emperor, that he might answer them. On the 14th of July, the Pope call'd together the Greek Prelats, and made the following Propolals to them: First, That all the World complains of them, that they separate Married Persons, which is a thing that needs Reformation. Secondly, That they must call Mark of Ephesus to an Account for separating from the Synod, and punish him for his Disobedience. Thirdly, That they should choose a Patriarch before they departed. The Prelats said, That they could not give an Answer about these Articles without consulting the Emperor and the other Prelats; That as Private Persons they answer'd, They never order'd the Dissolution of Marriages but for just Causes; That Mark of Ephesus should be judg'd by the Greeks upon the place, if he continu'd to be refractory; but that the Patriarch should not be chosen except at Constantinople, because this was the Order of their Church. The Pope insisted upon the last Article, but he gain'd nothing; for the Emperor made him the same Answer. Nevertheless to satisfie the Pope in another way, they caus'd his Name to be recited in the Dyptichs, altho' this had not been demanded. These Things being thus concluded, the Greek Prelats desir'd to return home; but before their departure, the Emperor made them demand of the Pope the Restitution of the Churches which formerly depended upon them, as those of Crete, of Corfu, and the other Isles, which the Latin Archbishops were now Possess'd of; and that he would make some other Provision for the Latin Prelats who had these Churches, that the Greeks might place there some of their Country-men. The Pope made answer, That it was not just to turn out the Latins from the Churches they were in Possession of, but that things must continue in the same Condition wherein they were; Yet he granted, That in these Churches where there were two Bishops, one Greek, and the other Latin; if the Latin Bishop should Die first, that the Greek should remain the sole Possessor, and those who succeeded him should be Greeks; but if the Greek Bishop should Die first, the Latin Bishop should enjoy the Church alone, and after his Death the Pope of Rome should provide for that Church for ever. The Pope had a mind to see Mark of Ephesus, and to speak with him; and this Bishop went boldly to wait upon him, and was no ways dash'd with his Menaces.

Conferences after the Publication of the Decree of Union.

The Departure of the Greeks.

At last, the Greek Prelats demanded importunately their Liberty to return, and the Payment of the Months that were due to them; but they were oblig'd before their departure to Sign yet four four Copies. After they had done this, the five Months that were due were paid them, and they went with speed for Venice, whither the Emperor followed them some time after, and arriv'd there the 6th of September. The Greeks did solemnly Celebrate the Divine Service in a Church of the Latins, and Embark'd the 11th of October, in order to their return to Constantinople, where they arriv'd the 1st of February, 1440. The Emperor and his Brother found after their arrival, that the Princesses their Spouses were dead. The Departure of the Greeks.

The Clergy which remain'd at Constantinople being prejudic'd against the Union, would not admit those who return'd from the West after they had sign'd it, to perform the Ecclesiastical Functions. The Emperor having a mind that they should do it, the others retir'd and left them alone. In fine, things were put on with so great heat, that the Emperor's Name was struck out of the Dyptichs in the greatest part of the Churches. This Prince having a mind to put an end to this trouble which lasted for three Months, refus'd to give order for the Election of a Patriarch. In the Assembly which was held upon this occasion, the Archbishop of Heraclea declar'd, That he was troubled for having consented to, and subscribed the Union, to that the other Prelates who had sign'd it, durst not propose him to be their Patriarch; the three whom they made choice of, were the Archbishops of Trebizonde, and of Cyprian, and the Abbot Gennadius; the Names of these being carried to the Emperor, he sounded the Archbishop of Trebizonde, but finding him an enemy to the Union, he made the Lot fall upon Metrophanes Archbishop of Cyzicum, who was engaged by a Writing to maintain the Union. He was enthron'd the Eve of Assumption-day, but the greatest part of the Clergy and People of Constantinople continued to declare against the Union, and upon that account divided from the Patriarch, who for his part, us'd all his endeavours to make them receive the Union, not only in the City of Constantinople, but also thro' all Greece. He punish'd the Disobedient; He drove some away from their Bishopricks, and Substituted others in their room who subscribed to him. The Emperor also had a mind to maintain his own Work, but his grief for the death of the Empress his Wife rebated his heat at the beginning, and the Troubles he had afterwards with his Brother Demetrius, who raised a Civil War, hindred him from taking care of this matter. The Divisions of the Greeks about the Decree of Union.

In the mean time Mark of Ephesus, the Archbishop of Heraclea, the Philosopher Gemistius, the Recorder of the Church of Constantinople, Scuropulus the Grand Ecclesiarch, and many others, who had been present at the Council of Florence and sign'd the Union, set themselves to declaim against it by word of mouth and by writing, and drew into their Party most of the Greeks. At last the Archbishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia having gone to Jerusalem, complain'd of the troubles and scandal which he pretended were caused by the Union of Florence, which approv'd the Doctrin of the Latins concerning the Procession of the Holy Spirit, the Addition to the Creed, and the usage of unleaven'd Bread in the Celebration of the Holy Mysteries; and of Metrophanes; That he had usurp'd the See of Constantinople, and had embrac'd the Doctrin of the Latins; That he joyn'd with the Emperor in persecuting those who retain'd the ancient Doctrin of the Greeks; That he advanc'd to Ecclesiastical Dignities those who were of his sentiments, and had already fill'd the Archbishopricks and Bishopricks depending upon the Church of Constantinople with persons devoted to the Latins, and had also Ordain'd four Metropolitans in Asia; Philotheus Patriarch of Alexandria, Dorotheus Patriarch of Antioch, and Joasaph Patriarch of Jerusalem; whereupon they published a Synodical Letter, wherein they pronounce a Sentence of Deposition against all those whom Metrophanes had Ordain'd, and of Excommunication if they should continue to discharge the Ecclesiastical Functions contrary to their Prohibition, and gave the Archbishop of Cæsarea Power to put it in execution. This Letter was dated in the Month of April, 1443. At the same time they wrote another to the Emperor, wherein they threaten to Excommunicate him, if he continu'd to protect Metrophanes and adhere to the Latins. The Emperor being provok'd by these Menaces, and by the Remonstrances of Metrophanes, took up a Resolution to hold a Synod at Constantinople, that he might make the Union be received there; but the death of Metrophanes happening the first of August, 1443, broke all his measures. After his death Gregory the Protonotaire and Confessor to the Emperor was chosen Patriarch. John Palæologus died in the Year 1445. without being able to establish among the Greeks the Union which he labour'd so much for. Thus God permits sometimes for reasons unknown to Men, that the Projects which are most just and legal should fail of that success, which one would think might be expected. It is reported, That his Successor Constantine held a Council in the Church of Sancta Sophia at Constantinople, wherein Gregory was deposed from the Patriarchat, and Athanasius put in his room; That the Greeks who sign'd the Decree of Union at Florence retracted there; That this Council condemn'd all that had been done by this Decree, rejected the Doctrin of the Latins, concerning the Procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and from the Son, the Addition made to the Creed, and the other Points about which the Latins differ'd from the Greeks; That he accused also the Latins of many abuses, which he pretended they were guilty of in the Ecclesiastical Discipline. The Acts of this Council were sent from Greece to Allatius, of which he published an Abridgment in an Appendix to his Book about the Consent of the Greek and Latin Churches; but he proves by good reasons that these Acts could not be true, and that they contain divers Things contrary to the History of that Time. However this were, 'tis certain that the Greeks continue still firm in their Adherence to the ancient Doctrin, and in their Schism from the Latins. The Union rejected by the Patriarchs.

To

The Council of Basil.

To return now into the West, The Council of Basil had all this while continu'd with the consent of the Emperor, the King of France, and other Princes, who had not approv'd its Translation to Ferrara, nor sent Ambassadors to Eugenius (except the Duke of Burgundy) also they had not receiv'd the Decrees of the Council against Pope Eugenius, but continu'd still to acknowledge him for Pope, and so observ'd a kind of Neutrality. From the Twenty third of January, 1438. Charles the seventh King of France caused to be publish'd an Edict, wherein he forbids the Prelats of his Kingdom to go to Ferrara; but at the same time he declares that he would not depart from his Obedience to the Holy See. In Germany the Electors of the Empire Assembled at Frankfurt after the death of Sigismund to choose an Emperor, and there made a Decree the Eighteenth of March, wherein they declare, That they do equally acknowledge Eugenius and the Council, and that they do not receive the Decrees made by the Council against Eugenius, or by Eugenius against the Council, and took six Months time to consult what they should do, during which time they Ordain'd, That the Church should be Govern'd according to the usual Laws. At the same time they sent Deputies to the Council of Basil, to perswade the Fathers to stop the Prosecution of their Process against Eugenius; which was also demanded by the Ambassador of the Duke of Milan, and maintain'd by the Italian and Spanish Prelates. But Louis Cardinal of Arles, President of the Council, and the greatest part of the Fathers, would have the Process go on without any stop. Hereupon a general Congregation was held the Twenty eighth of May; at which, in spight of the opposition they met with from the Ambassadors of the Kings of Castile, Arragon, and of the Duke of Milan, they receiv'd the Accusations that were fram'd against Eugenius, and it was order'd that proof of them should be made by witnesses. Albert of Austria, who had been chosen Emperor in the Assembly of Frankfurt the Twentieth of March, appointed for his Ambassadors to the Council, the Bishop of Lubeck, and George Wetchel, the same that had been in Sigismund's time; approv'd the Council, and renew'd the Securities his Predecessor had given to the Prelats there Assembled: And they in requital for this, granted him the Sums that had been gather'd in Austria for the Voyage of the Greeks: But being prest'd by the Legats of the Council to cause the Decrees made against Eugenius to be observ'd in Germany, he refer'd this Affair to the Assembly of the Princes of Germany, which was to be held the Twentieth of July. In the mean time the Electors having a mind to cure the Division that was between the Council and the Pope, sent Ambassadors to Eugenius, to perswade him, that he would appoint a third Place in Germany for the holding of a General Council. Eugenius made them answer, that he waited for the Ambassadors of the new Emperor, and that in the mean time, he thought it convenient, That an Assembly should be held in Germany to which he would send his Legats, wherein an Accommodation might be treated of, and declared to them, That if any other place should be thought more expedient for the good of the Church, wherein to hold the Council, he would consent to it. The Princes of Germany having obtain'd this promise from Eugenius, sent their Ambassadors to Basil, to pray the Fathers of the Council to delay the Process against Eugenius until the time of that Assembly. Fifty Persons were made choice of to examine the Proposal, and to consider what was fit to be done; Some were of opinion, That they should wholly supersede all kind of Prosecution against Eugenius for the space of three Months; the Cardinal of Arles on the contrary thought, That tho they might stop the Sentence of Deposition for three Months, yet in the mean time they must receive the Depositions of Witnesses against Eugenius, That he might no longer glory of his Innocence, and that he did not believe the Council had accus'd him falsly; That this would Facilitate even the Accomodation, because Eugenius would be more pliable, when he knew that his Crimes were prov'd.

Regulations made in France and Germany, concerning the Council.

In the Month of July the Cardinal of Tarragona, and the Ambassadors of the King of France, arriv'd at the Council of Basil. The latter brought thither the Pragmatick Sanction drawn up a little while before, and received the Seventh of the same Month in the Assembly held at Bourges, and compos'd of Twenty three Articles drawn from the Decrees of the Council of Basil, and chiefly from those concerning the Authority of a General Council, about Collations, Elections, Promises of Benefices when they shall be vacant, Appeals, Annates and other Exactions, about the Celebration of Divine Service, Interdicts, &c. whereof some are nevertheless modified or explain'd. They were commanded to desire the Confirmation of it from the Fathers of the Council, and at the same time to pray them to stop their Proceedings against Eugenius, upon assurance which the King gave them that he would labour for Peace. The Council thought not fit to delay, and therefore in the next Month of August declar'd in a General Congregation, That all those who were in the Retinue of Eugenius, or at Ferrara, under pretence of a Council, and all those who opposed the Council of Basil in any manner whatsoever, had incurr'd the Penalties Enacted by the Council.

The Resolutions of the Assemblies held in Germany about the Neutrality.

The Assembly of the German Princes being held at Nuremberg about the end of July, the Council sent thither its Deputies, those from the Emperor and the Princes propos'd to them, That they should appoint Mediators of the difference between the Council and the Pope, which they refus'd. Some time after, the Proceedings against Eugenius were renew'd; and notwithstanding the Opposition of the Ambassadors, and the Prelats of Spain, Navar and Milan, it was resolved in a General Congregation held the 16th of October, That Eugenius should be cited to answer what had been pretended against him.

Another Assembly was held towards the end of the year at Nuremberg, to which the Pope sent the Cardinal of Santa Cruze, the Archbishop of Tarentz, John de Turrecremata, and Nicholas Cusanus sand to act there on his behalf; the Council of Basil sent thither also, the Patriarch of Aquileia, and other Deputies. There it was propos'd, That a third place might be made choice of, where the Prelats of Basil and Ferrara might Assemble. The Deputies of the Council having maintain'd, That this Proposal was not reasonable, made answer; That they had no Commands about this from the Council. They desired on behalf of the Council, That the Princes of Germany would receive its Decrees, and provide for its Security. To which it was answer'd, That the Emperor and Princes would make known their thoughts to the Council by their Ambassadors; while those from France advis'd the Fathers of the Council to hold to the three places they had made choice of, Basil, Avignon and the Savoy, if they could make the Pope and the Greeks agree to them; if not, to name many Cities, among which there should be some which the Pope could not reasonably refuse. The Ambassadors of the Emperor and the Princes of Germany being arriv'd at Basil, declar'd to the Fathers of the Council, That the Germans did acknowledge the Council for General; That the Emperor meant that all those who were Assembled should have security in that place; but that the Neutrality had been accepted by all the Prelats, Princes and People; That they honour'd the Council and Eugenius both together; That they were of Opinion it was necessary for promoting Peace that the Fathers of Basil and Ferrara should meet in a third Place. The Ambassadors of the other Princes joyn'd with those of Germany, and desired the same thing: At last after much Dispute, a Project was set on foot, whereby the Fathers of the Council were to name the Cities of Strasburgh, Constance, or Mayence; That the Emperor should communicate this choice to the Pope and the Greeks within a Month, and that a Month after he should be bound to accept one of these Cities; That the Pope should confirm the Decrees of the Council, and the Council should take off the Suspension enacted against the Pope. This Project was neither acceptable to the Council of Basil, nor to Pope Eugenius; and so these matters remain'd in the same state in which they were.

The Resolutions of the Assemblies held in Germany, about the Neutrality.

In the year 1439, the Council sent Deputies to the Assembly which was held at Mayence in the Month of March. The Ambassadors of the Princes who were at Basil came thither also, and some persons came thither secretly on behalf of the Pope, among whom was Nicholas Cusanus. The Deputies of the Council urg'd earnestly, That he should be oblig'd to receive its Decrees; and the Ambassadors of the Princes; That they would surcease the Decison of the Process against Eugenius. After much contest the Assembly receiv'd the Decrees of the Council, except those that were made against the Pope; and the Deputies of the Council promised that it would consent to the desire of the Emperor, the Kings and Princes, on condition that they would engage to continue the Council after its Translation upon the same foot, according to the same Laws, the same Order and Customs which were observ'd at Basil, and that in case Eugenius did not acknowledge the Truths establish'd by the Council within the time that should be prefix'd, nor execute what the Council had Ordain'd, they would abandon him and assist the Council, and adhere to its Decision. The Bishop of Quenza said, That the Pope could not accept these Conditions, and that the Princes would never consent to them: And thus the Deputies of the Council retir'd without making any agreement. After their departure two Deputies of the Pope's Legats arriv'd at Mayence, and would have them revoke the Resolution of the Assembly about the Decrees of the Council of Basil; which not being able to Compass, they oppos'd them, and made great Complaints, That the Princes maintain'd the Fathers of Basil to the prejudice of the Pope's Autority

During this Negotiation at Mayence, the Divines which were at Basil disputed this Question, viz. Whether Eugenius could be declar'd a Heretick, upon the account of his Disobedience, and the Contempt he had shewn to the Orders of the Church? Some held the Affirmative, and others the Negative, and among them who maintain'd the Affirmative, some held him simply Heretical, and others an Apostate; at last after much Dispute, they drew up eight Theological Propositions or Conclusions express'd in these words. First, It is a Truth of the Catholick Faith, That the Holy General Council has Power over the Pope, and every other Person. Secondly, The General Council being lawfully Assembled, cannot be Dissolv'd, Translated, or Adjourn'd, by the Authority of the Pope without its own consent: This is a Truth of the same nature with the former. Thirdly, He that does obstinately resist these Truths ought to be accounted Heretical. These three Propositions are about Law; the other five concern the Facts and Person of Eugenius, and are as follows. Fourthly, The Pope Eugenius the 4th has opposed these Truths, when he attempted to Dissolve, or Translate, the first time, the Council of Basil, by the plenitude of his Power. Fifthly, Being admonished by the Holy Council, he hath revok'd the Errors contrary to these Truths. Sixthly, The Dissolution, or Translation of the Council, attempted the second time by Eugenius, is contrary to these Truths, and contains an inexcusable Error in the Faith. Seventhly, Eugenius renewing his attempt to Dissolve, or Translate the Council, has relaps'd into the Errors which he had revok'd. Eighthly, Being admonish'd by the Council to revoke the second Dissolution, or Translation which he attempted, and persisting in his Disobedience after he had been Contumacious, and holding a Conventicle at Ferrara, he has discover'd his Obstinacy.

The Disputes of the Divines at Basil about the Autority of a Council.

These eight Conclusions, being read in the Assembly, rais'd great Disputes among the Fathers of the Council, some meaning to approve, and others to reject them. The Archbishop of Palerma, who had formerly been one of the great Adversaries to Eugenius, having receiv'd Orders from the King of Arragon, was at the Head of those who would have them rejected.

The Disputes of the Divines at Basil about the Authority of a Council.

He acknowledg'd this Truth, That the Council is above the Pope, but he maintaind, That this Doctrin ought not to pass for an Article of Faith; He confess'd, That Eugenius had done wrong, but he did not believe that he ought to be look'd upon and treated as a Heretick.

Dr. John of Segovia maintain'd on the contrary, That this Truth was a matter of Faith, and that Eugenius by opposing it had fall'n into Heresy. Amedæus Archbishop of Lyons Ambassador from the King of France, accused also Eugenius of Heresy; on the contrary the Bishop of Burgos Ambassador from the King of Spain endeavour'd to excuse him. An Abbot of Scotland and Thomas of Curcellis maintain'd what the Archbishop of Lyons had advanc'd, and defended the Conclusions. The Grand Almoner of the King of Arragon oppos'd to them divers Difficulties. At last after many Deliberations, the eight Conclusions, were approv'd by the three first Deputations. The 4th would receive only the three first; and to hinder the matter from passing by plurality of Voices, they delay'd to give their Opinion. On the day of the General Congregation, the Contests were renew'd; the Italians and Spaniards opposed stoutly the reception of these Articles, and made Protestations. The Cardinal of Arles President of the Council, was of opinion, That the three first Articles should be receiv'd which concern the Doctrin, and that the Publication of the last which concern the Person of Eugenius should be put off. The Archbishop of Aquileia, the Archbishop of Lyons, and John of Segovia supported his Opinion. At last, notwithstanding the noise made by the Italians, and Spaniards, the Cardinal of Arles concluded for the reception of the three first Articles. After these Transactions the Ambassadors return'd from the Assembly of Mayence, and were to oppose this Conclusion: The Cardinal of Arles caused it to be read in the Congregation before they entred upon it. This reading rais'd new Complaints and Contests; but the Cardinal of Arles being no ways terrified, caused it to be read a second time at the end of the Assembly, and appointed in the next Congregation, the Session to be held on the 16th of May.

The Council of Basil.

This was the 33d Session of the Council of Basil, wherein the three first Conclusions which establish'd the Doctrin of the Authority of the Council above the Pope, as a matter of Faith, were publish'd. The Ambassadors of the Princes demanded, That the Deposition of Eugenius should be put off for four Months, which was granted them; but when they demanded also that nothing should be Decreed but the first Conclusion, this was refus'd; upon which refusal they withdrew. None of the Prelats of the Kingdom of Spain and Arragon were present at this Session, and there were but two Bishops of Italy; but the Doctors of these Nations were present, with 20 Bishops from the Nations of France and Germany. The Decree was read by the Bishop of Marseilles, and the Bishop of Albenga read a Protestation against it. At last the Ambassadors of the Princes, and particularly those of Germany and France, in the General Congregation May the 22d, approv'd the Decree made in this Session. All the Bishops almost came over also to the same Opinion, and many more of them came to the Council, chiefly from the Dominions of the Duke of Savoy. The Ambassadors of the Princes demanded in the Congregation held May the 23d, That they should delay to make any Process against Eugenius, and that the Council should agree in the choice of a third Place. Both the one and the other were refus'd by the Assembly, which confirm'd the five other Conclusions, and cited Eugenius to appear at the Session held the 26th of the same Month, which the Ambassadors could not hinder.

The Deposition of Fugenius.

In pursuance of this Citation which was affix'd upon the Gates of the Church, the Council consisting of 39 Prelats, and almost 300 Ecclesiasticks of the second Order, pronounc'd in the 34th Session held the 26th of May, the Deposition of Eugenius, by declaring him notoriously Contumacious, and Disobedient to the Commands of the Universal Church, one that persists in his Rebellion, a violator and contemner of the Holy Synodical Canons, a Disturber of the Peace and Unity, one that gives open Scandal to the whole Church, Simoniacal, Perjur'd, Incorrigible, Schismatical, Heretical, Obstinate, a Destroyer of the Rights and Revenues of the Church, a bad Administrator of the Roman Papacy, and Unworthy of all Title, degree of Honour and Dignity; They forbad him for the future to take upon him the Title of the Bishop of Rome, or to execute the Functions belonging to it, and prohibited all Christians, of whatsoever Quality or Condition they were, to obey him, declaring all that he might have done or ordain'd contrary to this Decision to be Null and Void. The Fathers of the Council resolv'd after this to send Deputies to all the Princes of Christendom, to acquaint them with the Deposition of Eugenius, and perswade them to execute this Decree. Sometime after they received Letters from the King of France, who complain'd that the Council had not delay'd, upon his Request, the Proceedings against Eugenius, whereby they seem'd to refuse that Peace which the Princes so ardently desir'd. They answer'd him, That his Majesty should know by the Deputies of the Council the Reasons they had, and that they doubted not but he would approve them, and so much the rather, because they could not give Peace to the Church to any good purpose, but by restoring it to Liberty, and that they would pray him to send the Prelats of his Kingdom to the Council, to consult about the Ecclesiastical Affairs.

The Council of Basil.

The Fathers of the Council deliberated for some time after this, whether they should proceed immediately to the Election of a new Pope, upon the account of the Pestilence which was then very violent in the City of Basil, or whether they should wait 60 days longer, as the Council it self had order'd. It was thought to be more convenient to wait the ordinary time. In the mean time a Session was held on the 13th of July, wherein it was resolv'd, That they should remain in the Council until the matters for which they were assembled should be finish'd, and that the Council could not be Dissolv'd upon any pretence whatsoever, but by the advice of two Thirds of those who had a Vote in it; That in the mean time they should consider of the Election of a Pope, which should be made 60 days after the Deposition of Eugenius; That until that time all those who had adher'd to the Party of Eugenius and the Council of Ferrara might have liberty to come over and joyn with those at Basil. The Council of Basil.

The Pestilence continuing carried off many Members of the Council, and among the rest the Patriarch of Aquileia, the Bishop of Lubeck, the Apostolical Protonotary, the grand Almoner of Arragon, and many others of the first and second Order, insomuch that the Cardinal of Arles propos'd on the 22d of August to Adjourn the Assemblies until the end of September, and to put off the Election of a new Pope until the 1st of November: When they had consulted about this Matter, they were of Opinion to continue the Sessions without interruption. This resolution being taken, the Council chose Deputies to be sent to an Assembly, which was to be held at Frankfurt on the 1st day of August, and others for the Provincial Council which was to be held at Mayence on the 15th of the same Month, and others for the Assembly appointed at Bourges by the King of France, and others to be sent to the Emperor and the King of Spain. On the last day of August the Council revok'd all the Grants of vacant Benefices, and the Nominations to Benefices made by Eugenius. On the same day a Physitian coming in the Habit of a Hermit to Basil, brought thither some Propositions extracted from a Book, Of the simple Soul, accusing Eugenius of maintaining them, and of hindring any person to oppose them.

The Deputies of the Council of Basil who went into Germany, caused the Decree of the Deposition of Eugenius to be fix'd upon the Gates of the Churches of Strasburgh, Spire and Worms; but having done the same at Mayence, the Decrees fix'd up were torn in pieces, and they were forbidden to set up any more. They could not after this cause the Decree of the Council against Eugenius to be receiv'd in the Assemblies of Frankfurt and Mayence; and tho they spoke against the Neutrality, yet they had no other Answer, but that for the present nothing could be chang'd; and those who made up this Assembly, fearing lest they should make use of the Censures Enacted by the Council against them, declar'd, That they Appeal'd to a more General Council, to Pope Eugenius, to the Holy See, or to those to whom of Right it belong'd.

On the 17th of September the 36th Session was held, wherein it was declar'd, That the Opinion of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary was a pious Opinion, agreeable to the Worship of the Church, to the Catholick Faith, to Right Reason, and to the Holy Scripture; That all Catholicks ought to approve it; That no Person shall be permitted to Teach or Preach the contrary, and that the Feast of the Conception shall be Celebrated on the 8th of December.

While these things were a-doing at Basil, the Pope who remain'd all this while with his Cardinals and some Prelats at Florence, renew'd the Decree which he had published at Ferrara against the Assembly at Basil; declar'd all those who had been present there after his Prohibition, to be Depriv'd of all Dignities, Honours and Benefices; treated them as Schismaticks and Rebels, and Null'd all that they had Ordain'd and defin'd in the two last Sessions. The Fathers of Basil made an Apology against this Decree which they call an Invective, wherein they shew, That the Propositions which they have defin'd are true, and that they had Reason to depose Eugenius. It was also proposed, That they should condemn his Decree as Heretical; but this was put off to another time. The Decree of the Council of Florence against that of Basil.

In the Month of October, some Prelats came to Basil, and the Emperor caused it to be demanded of the Council, That the Election of a new Pope should be stop'd; but notwithstanding his desire, the Cardinal of Arles caused three Persons to be appointed on the 14th of October, to make choice of those who should give their Votes in the Election of a Pope; these three Persons were an Abbot of Scotland, John of Segovia, and Thomas of Curcellis; and because the Germans had made a scruple of approving this choice, these three Persons joyn'd to themselves a German Doctor according to the permission that was given them. They took an Oath that they should choose no persons but such as were capable of making this Election, and engaged themselves not to declare to any person whatsoever, those that had been chosen, until they were oblig'd to make publication of them in the Conclave, and they made choice of 28 Persons who were to proceed to the Election together with themselves, on condition, That there must be two Thirds of the Voices to make a Pope. The Council of Basil.

In the 37th Session held the 24th of October, divers Orders were made about the future Election of a Pope.

In the 38th held the 30th of the same Month, a Decree was made against the Invective of Eugenius, forbidding to publish or approve it, and in it the choice of the Electors of a future Pope appointed by the four Deputies was confirm'd. The Cardinal of Arles was one by Law, and was not comprehended in this number; which consisted of 11 Bishops, 7 Abbots, and 14 Beneficed men or Doctors, drawn forth equally from the Nations, besides the Officers of the Conclave, the Nomination of which was also approv'd in this Session.

These Electors entred the same day into the Conclave, on which it was built for them in the City of Basil, after they had taken the usual Oaths, and chose for Pope 6 days after Amedæus Duke of Savoy, who had retir'd into the solitude of Ripaille in the Diocess of Geneva, where he liv'd as an Hermit, and had the Title of Dean of the Militia of St. Maurice. The Fathers of the The Election of Felix V.

The Election of Felix V.

the Council confirm'd their Election in the Thirty Ninth Session, held the 17th of November, and ordain'd, That he should be acknowledg'd for Pope. They sent to him a Deputation of Twenty five Persons, and the Cardinal of Arles at the head of them, to acquaint him with his Election, and to pray him to consent to it. They arriv'd at Ripaille the 20th of December, and having laid open before him their Commission, he made some scruple of taking the Oath that was requir'd of him, of leaving off his Habit, and changing his Name; yet he did not long demurr upon it, but took upon him the Name of Felix V. receiv'd the Pontifical Robes, and wrote about his Election to the Council of Basil, and the Christian Princes.

The Council of Basil.

In the mean time, the Emperor Albertus of Austria dying on the 27th of October, the Electors of the Empire promis'd their Protection to the Council, but they would not approve of their Decrees against Eugenius, and continu'd still in the Neutrality. These assembling afterwards at Frankfurt, chose for Emperor on the 2d of February, Frederick Duke of Austria. The Deputies of the Council of Basil, who were present at that Assembly, desir'd that they would acknowledge Felix for Pope; but the new Emperor and the Princes would alter nothing of their Resolution, and said only that they would so manage Things as to procure the Peace of the Church. Felix, that he might come to Basil with the greater State, created four Cardinals, who were approv'd by the Council, and the consent which they had given to his Election was read and confirm'd in the Fortieth Session, held on the 26th of February, in the Year 1440. whereby all those were Excommunicated which would not acknowledge him for Lawful Pope; the Decrees made against Eugenius were renew'd, and all the Acts by him were declar'd Null. It was propos'd in the Council, That some Provision should be granted the Pope and the Court of Rome in lieu of Annates, but the French oppos'd this Proposal. The Letters wherein Felix continu'd the Legathip and the Presidency of the Council to the Cardinal of Arles were read, and because they did not please the Assembly others were drawn up. At last, Felix came in Person to the Council, and arriv'd at Basil the 24th of June.

The Constitutions of Eugenius for the Armenians, Jacobites, &c.

Eugenius, to advance his own Party, and set up such Creatures as might oppose Felix and the Council, created Seventeen Cardinals; among whom there were many worthy of Commendation for their Learning. At the same time, there arriv'd at Florence Deputies on behalf of Constantine, Patriarch of the Armenians, whom the Pope had sollicited by the Consul of Caffa to send, to make a Re-union of the Churches of Armenia. These Deputies presented their Credential Letters to the Pope, on the Month of November; and after some private Conferences with three Cardinals, and some Doctors, they receiv'd the Instruction; Entitled, the Decree for the Armenians, which was publish'd in the Assembly of Prelats, held on the 22d of November: It contain'd the Creed of Constantinople with the Addition, the Definition of the Council of Chalcedon, and of the sixth Council; an acknowledgment of the Oecumenical Councils celebrated since that of Ephesus; an Explication of the seven Sacraments, which treated of their Matter, their Form, their Minister, their Necessity, and their Effects; the Creed attributed to St. Athanasius, the Decree of the Union made with the Greeks, and an Order to celebrate the Feast of the Annunciation of the Virgin, on the 25th of March; the Nativity of St. John, on the 24th of June; the Feast of Christmas, on the 25th of December; the Circumcision on the 1st of January, the Epiphany on the 6th of the same Month, and the Purification on the 2d of February; and in fine, an Approbation of all that was held and taught by the Holy Apostolick See, the Roman Church, the Doctors and Fathers whom it Honoured, and a Condemnation of the Doctrins and Persons which it rejected. There came also the next Year a Deputy on behalf of the Patriarch of the Jacobites, to Alexandria, whom Eugenius caus'd to be invited to the Council; at which he gave a long Exposition of Faith, wherein is inserted a Catalogue of the Canonical Books, which includes such as the Jews do not acknowledge; an Explication of the Doctrin of Oecumenical Councils, and the Decrees for the Greeks and Armenians. This Instrument was not finish'd and publish'd till the 4th of February, 1441. There appear'd also at Florence in this Year, a Man who call'd himself Abbot of the Ethiopians of Jerusalem, entrusted with Letters from the King of Ethiopia, call'd Prester-John, who gave hopes, That he would come in Person into Italy; but it does not appear what Issue this Negotiation had. When Eugenius return'd to Rome, he made also Constitutions in the Year 1444. for the Syrians, the Caldeans of Cyprus, for the Nestorians and the Maronites, who follow'd the Doctrin of the Monothelites, which he gave to some Persons who call'd themselves Deputies on their behalf; insomuch that he would have re-united all the Sects of the East to the Church of Rome, if these Decrees had been receiv'd in these places; but by Misfortune they had not that Effect, and all these Sects remain still no less addicted to their own Errors, nor less contrary to the Roman Church than they were before.

The Censures of Eugenius against Felix.

To return now to what concerns the Affairs of the West: Assoon as Pope Eugenius understood the Election of Amedeus, he did not fail on his part to proceed against him; to declare him Heretical and Schismatical, and to Excommunicate his Electors, Favourers or Partizans, if they did not forsake his Faction, within fifty Days, by a Decree dated the 23d of April; but the Fathers of the Council of Basil gave him a Rowland for his Oliver, by nulling this Decree, and forbidding to bring it there, by another Decree publish'd in the 41st Session, held the 23d of July. The next Day, Felix was Consecrated and Crown'd Pope, and to the end, he might have where-withal to maintain his Dignity, while he could not yet touch any of St. Peter's Peter's Patrimony; it was resolv'd in the 42d Session, held the 6th of August, that for five Years, the Tenth Penny of the Revenues of Benefices should be granted him.

The Council of Basil.

It was not enough to create a Pope, but he must be acknowledg'd by the Princes, for without that he was but a vain Phantom without Authority; and therefore the Fathers of the Council bestirr'd themselves very vigorously to this purpose; and Eugenius on his part forgot nothing which might divert this Storm: Both the one and the other sent Deputies to the Assembly which Charles the 7th, King of France, had appointed at Bourges. The Legats of Eugenius, who were the Archbishop of Crete, the Bishop of Digna, of Grenada, and the Abbot of Cernai desir'd four things of the King: First, That he would reject the Council of Basil, since its Translation to Ferrara, and that he would approve the Council of Ferrara, and what was done in it. Secondly, That he would not approve the Deposition of Eugenius, nor the Election the Council had made of the Duke of Savoy, but on the contrary reject it. Thirdly, That he would send no Ambassador to the Assembly which was to be held at Mayence, without the consent of Eugenius. Fourthly, That he would suspend and abrogate the Pragmatick, and then Eugenius would provide for the Benefices of the Kingdom as he should desire. The next Day, the Envoys of Felix, and the Council of Basil, who were Gerard, Bishop of St. Pons, the Abbot of Vezelai, Hugo Archdeacon of Metz, and Thomas of Curcellis, Doctor and Canon of Paris, were heard. The last made a long Discourse to prove, First, That the Doctrin of the Council of Basil, about the Authority of General Councils is true and certain; Secondly, That it was just to condemn Eugenius, who oppos'd this Doctrin, and that the Sentence given against him is well-grounded and legal: Thirdly, That they had duly proceeded to the Election of another Pope, that it was made after a Canonical manner, and that there was just and sufficient Cause for chusing him to this Dignity. He concludes his Discourse with shewing, of what Consequence it would be to maintain what had been done by the General Council, and how beneficial to the Church, the Union and good Understanding of Felix and the Council would be; and that the only Means to put an end to the Schism, and procure the Peace of the Church, was to acknowledge the New Pope.

The Assembly of Bourges.

The Assembly having consulted for six Days about this Affair, made Answer: First, The Most Christian King Protested, That he following the Foot-steps of his Ancestors, was always ready to hear the Church being lawfully Assembled: Secondly, He had always held the Council of Basil to be lawful; That he had sent his Ambassadors to it; That this Council had made many good Constitutions which he approv'd; and that he never had own'd, nor did own the Assembly of Ferrara for a Council: That as to the Deposition of Eugenius, and the Election of Felix, because many Persons of Probity and Authority, doubted whether his Suspension and Deposition, and the Election which follow'd upon it, had been done justly, canonically and lawfully; and whether at such time as this was done, the Congregation did sufficiently represent the Universal Church, to do so considerable Acts as these, which concern the whole Church; therefore the King not being sufficiently inform'd about these things, did still persevere and remain in the Obedience of Eugenius; but if he should be inform'd of the Truth of this Cause by the Oecumenical Council, or by another General Council, or even by a more numerous Assembly of the Gallican Church with its Dukes, Barons and other Lords, or in an Assembly of all the Christian Princes, that then having known and examin'd the Truth, he would adhere to it; and therefore he pray'd, That Pope Eugenius would call together and celebrate a Council, and that he would be there himself in Person: Thirdly, That he would consider what was to be done at a convenient time and place about the Embassy of Mayence: Fourthly, That as to the Pragmatick Sanction he would have it to be inviolably observ'd. That if any thing in it appear'd too rigid to the Council of Basil, it might be moderated. He advis'd also the Ambassadors of the Council of Basil, That they would endeavour the Celebration of another future Council. This Answer was given in the Assembly of Bourges, in the presence of the King, assisted by Charles, Duke of Anjou, and the other Princes of the Blood, on the 2d of September, 1440. and accompanied with a Discourse which the Bishop of Clermont made, wherein the King testifies his Displeasure against the Heats and Animosities which were between the Pope and the Council; That he should have been glad, if it were in his Power, to favour the Duke of Savoy, who was his Kinsman; but that he could do nothing against Justice; that he exhorted the Fathers of the Council to seek after Peace, and not to trouble his Subjects with Censures; Lastly, That he hop'd the Duke of Savoy would accommodate this Affair by his ordinary Prudence.

How Christendom stood affected towards Eugenius and Felix.

The Deputies of Basil were not well satisfy'd with this Answer, which lower'd the Expectations of Felix's Party; but they were rais'd again by the Letter they receiv'd in October, from the King of Arragon, wherein he gave the Title of General Council to the Council of Basil; by the Letter from the Queen of Hungary, Sigismund's Widow, to Pope Felix; and yet more by the acknowledgment of Albert, Duke of Bavaria, and Albert, Duke of Austria, Kinsmen to Frederick, Felix, to make himself more Creatures depending upon him, created Eight Cardinals in the Month of October, and Six others that were French-Men in November, among whom was John of Segovia, and Nicolas Archbishop of Palerma.

The Resolutions of divers Assemblies of States about the Difference between Felix and Eugenius.

The University of Paris, the Universities of Germany, and that of Cracovia, wrote in Defence of the Authority of the Council above the Pope, and acknowledg'd Felix. He was also own'd by the Carthusians, and by a Party of the Order of Friars Minors,

The Resolutions of divers Assemblies of States about the Difference between Felix and Eugenius.

Many Prelats and Princes of Germany favour'd also his Party; but in the Assembly which was held at Mayence, in April 1441. the Deputies on both sides being heard, no other Resolution was taken, but that a General Council should meet the next Year in the Month of August, in another place than Basil and Florence, and in a City of Germany or France, and that the Emperor should invite the Competitors to be there present. But this Propolal had no Effect, for the Emperor referr'd the Affair to the Assembly of Frankfurt, which was held in the Month of May, the next Year, where the Emperor was present in Person; and having heard the Deputies of the Council, and Eugenius, confirm'd the Resolution that was taken to call a Council, and in the mean time to remain in the Neutrality. In pursuance of this, he sent Ambassadors to Eugenius, and the Council, to persuade them to yield to the Celebration of a Council, and he himself came to Basil. The Fathers of the Council agreed upon the Translation of the Council, and to name many Cities, whereof the Emperor should choose one. But Eugenius, after he had consulted a long time, made answer, in the Year 1445; That it was no ways necessary to call a New Council, since there was one already call'd; That in the mean time, to satisfie the Emperor, assoon as he should come to Rome, he would call together in the Palace of the Lateran, whither he had translated the Council, a great number of Prelats, with whom he would consult whether it were expedient to call another. The Emperor Frederick, seeing that neither the Fathers of Basil, nor Eugenius would consent to what he desir'd, wrote a Letter to all Christian Princes in June, 1443. wherein he desires their Consent for a General Council which he would appoint, and prays them to send their Ambassadors to the Diet, which was to be held at Nuremburg, at the St. Martin, that they might there consult together of the Means for putting an end to the Schism. This Assembly was not numerous; Felix sent thither his Legats; but there was no treating about this Affair, which was put off to another time. In the mean time, Alphonsus, King of Arragon, the Venetians, the Florentines, the Siennese, and the other People of Italy sollicited the Emperor to consent, That a General Council should be held in the Church of St. John of Lateran; and some time after, the Emperor also sent Æneas Sylvius to Pope Eugenius, to promise him to take off the Neutrality. England had no great share in the Transactions at the Council of Basil, there being no Prelats in the Council from that Nation. The Council had sent Deputies into this Kingdom before the Election of Felix, to whom the English gave almost the same Answer with the French, That they honoured the Council, and approv'd its Decrees, except those which had been made against Eugenius, whom they acknowledg'd for lawful Pope. The Fathers of the Council sent thither also other Deputies after the Election of Felix; to whom some hopes were given, but they had no positive Answer. Scotland, except some Lords, declar'd for Eugenius, and the Prelats of this Kingdom being Assembled in a Provincial Council, Excommunicated Felix, and the Fathers of the Council of Basil. Poland promis'd to acknowledge Felix, if he would give to their King the Title of King of Hungary, and remit to the Lords the Mony which had been gather'd by Indulgences granted for the Union of the Greeks. No Body thought that he had Power to grant these Desires; yet this prov'd favourable to Felix, and the King of Poland forbad any to obey Eugenius. Italy continu'd firm to Eugenius, except Piemont and Savoy. The Duke of Milan begun a Treaty with Felix, and seem'd to have agreed with him upon Conditions; but it was not concluded. Ferdinand, Duke of Calabria, sent an Ambassador to the Council, who was order'd to promise Obedience to Felix. Francis Sforza caus'd great Promises to be made, which came to no Effect. Alphonsus, King of Arragon, perceiving that Eugenius would favour Charles of Anjou, in the Pretensions he made to the Kingdom of Naples, declar'd for Felix in the Year 1441. and promis'd by a Letter written in October to the Council, That he would cause him to be own'd in his six Kingdoms, and gave hopes also of doing something more if a Legat were sent unto him. But he made these Offers for no other reason, but only to engage Eugenius in his Interest; for after he had treated with the two Competitors, he declar'd himself for the latter, who gave him more advantageous Conditions, and was better able to perform them; and when the Treaty was Sign'd, he caus'd to be published a Declaration, June the 20th, 1443. importing, That after he had been a long time doubtful about the Affairs of the Church, God at last had discover'd to him that Eugenius was the true Pope, and that he revok'd the Declarations he had made in favour of Felix, and the Council of Basil. At the same time he gave Order to the Archbishop of Palermo, the Bishops of Tarcase and Vic, who had been promoted to the Dignity of Cardinals by Felix, and to the other Bishops of his Dominions, to retire from Basil, and go into Italy, or to their own Dioceses.

The Council of Basil.

While the Deputies of the Council being sent to all Christian Princes, us'd their utmost Endeavours to make them acknowledge him for Pope, whom the Council had chosen, which was the grand and principal Affair; the Prelats that remain'd at Basil, continu'd their Meetings, and held their Sessions from time to time, tho' they were less frequented than before. Felix presided in the private Congregations held in 1441. in the absence of the Cardinal of Arles, who was sent into Germany, and there made the following Orders: First, That the President of the Assembly should always be the most ancient Prelat: Secondly, That no regard be had to the Collations of Ordinaries, unless it be evident, That there was Time enough from the Death of the last Incumbent unto the Date of the Collation, wherein the Collator might be inform'd of his Death, and that the Acts of Collation were not pass'd before by a Notary: Thirdly, That the Doctors or Nobles who have a Benefice of 300 Livres or more in Revenue, cannot obtain obtain a Dispensation to possess two incompatible Benefices; and that those who are not of this Quality, and have a Benefice of 200 Livres, cannot have two Cures, two Dignities, or two Canonries. Fourthly, That the Doctors or Nobles can have but two Prebendaries in the Metropolitan Churches, three in the Cathedral, or four in the Collegiate; and that those who are not of that Quality, can have but one in the Metropolitan Churches, two in the Cathedral, and three in the Collegiate; that the former can have but eight simple Benefices, and the latter but three. Fifthly, That the Cardinals who have 6000 Livres of Rent can have no Benefices in Commendam, nor the Patriarchs who have 4000 Livres, nor the Archbishops who have 3000, nor the Bishops and Protonotaries who have 2000, and the Abbots who have 1000. Sixthly, That Ordinations shall not be made too lightly in the Council, but Persons shall be chosen to examine those who present themselves to be Ordain'd. Felix having desir'd that the Reservations of the Benefices of Savoy might be granted him, was deny'd. The Council of Basil.

There was a long Consultation about the Celebration of the Feast of the Visitation of the Virgin, which was Instituted by Boniface IX. in the time of the Schism: At last, a Decree was drawn up, and publish'd in the Name of the Council, and not in the Name of the Pope, as some would have it, in the Forty Third Session, held the 1st of July 1441.

In the Year 1442. the Pope Eugenius translated the Council from Florence to Rome, in the Church of St. John of Lateran, by his Bull dated May the 3d. The Council of Basil on its part publish'd a long Decree in the Forty Fourth Session, held the 10th of August, for securing the Instruments and Persons of the Council, and voiding and nulling all that might be done against them, or to their prejudice. Towards the end of the Year Felix retir'd to Lausane, with a part of his Cardinals; In the mean time, the Council continu'd to make Congregations at Basil, and in them to regulate several private Affairs: It condemn'd many Propositions advanc'd by the Friars Mendicants against the Rights of Curates, and particularly this, That those who die in the Habit of St. Francis, remain in Purgatory but one Year, because St. Francis descends thither once every Year, and brings forth all those of his Order. The Council invited Felix to return to Basil, but whatever importunity they us'd, he would not return; and he created four New Cardinals. At last, the Wars of Germany, the departure of the Bishops subject to King Alphonsus, the Importunity of the Emperor for holding of another Council, the Absence of Felix, and the small assistance the Prelats could expect while they stay'd at Basil, oblig'd them to break up after they had appointed the future General Council to be held three Years after in the City of Lyons; and they continu'd this of Basil, if it could be done, in that City, or the City of Lausane, by the Decree publish'd in the Forty Fifth Session, the 16th of May 1143. The Translations of the Councils of Basil and Florence.

Thus ended the Councils of Basil and Florence, rather weary'd with the Struggle than overcome, for neither the one nor the other would yield; and they found a way to put an end to their Disputes without making Peace or any Accomodation, by translating themselves in appearance to another place, where scarce any thing more was done: Nevertheless the Schism continued still until upon the Death of Eugenius IV. (which happen'd February the 23d, in 1447) Nicholas V. was chosen in his room March the 6th, who was a meek Man, and of a peaceable Temper; and readily comply'd with the Proposals of Accommodation which were made to him by the Christian Princes, and chiefly by the French King, who did with great Vigor promote the Peace of the Church, by making application both to this Pope and Felix, and the Prelats Assembled at Lausane: For altho' Savoy had been given to Nicholas V. who had granted Indulgences to those who would assist him to conquer it, and upon this account Politick Reasons should have prevail'd with him to push Things to extremity against Felix; yet he preferr'd Justice and the Peace of the Church before his own Interest, concluded an Accommodation upon Conditions very advantageous to both Parties, which were, That Felix should renounce the Papal Dignity, but he should be the first of the Cardinals, and Perpetual Legat to the Holy See in Germany; That they should revoke on both sides all the Excommunications, Censures and other Penalties, enacted by the Councils, or by the Contending Popes, against those of the opposite Party; That all those on both sides should be maintain'd, who were in Possession of Dignities, Benefices and Ecclesiastical Offices, and that to this purpose all the Collations, Provisions, Postulations, Elections, &c. made in each Obedience should be confirm'd; That likewise the Dispensations, Indulgences, and other Graces granted by the Councils, or the Popes of the two Obediences, as also the Decrees, Dispositions, and Regulations they had made should be confirm'd; That the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, and other Beneficiaries, should remain peaceable Possessors of the Benefices they were in Possession of, and all Sentences, Judgments and Processes to the contrary should be made Null and Revok'd; That the Cardinals of both Obediences shall remain in their Dignities, and Provision should be made for those who had one and the same Title, as was done at the time of the Council of Constance; That the Officers of both Courts shall remain in their Offices, and where there shall be found two promoted to the same Office, he shall be recompens'd who shall be oblig'd to Resign; Lastly, That Nicholas V. shall engage to Call a General Council in France seven Months after the Accommodation.

All these Conditions, except the last, were granted and executed; and Felix after he had confirm'd the Collations, and other Acts he had done during his Pontificat, and revok'd by his Bulls dated April the 5th, 1449. the Censures past against Eugenius, Nicholas and their Adherents, The end of the Schism under the Pontificat of Nicolas V.

The end of the Schism under the Pontificat of Nicolas V.

rents, Renounc'd on the 9th of the same Month the Papal Dignity, and all the Right which he could pretend to it: The Fathers of the Council of Lausane approv'd of his Demission, revok'd also the Excommunications and other Censures enacted by the Council of Basil against Eugenius, elected and acknowledg'd Nicholas V. for Pope: And after this, Nicholas V. on his part revok'd by his Bulls publish'd the 18th of June, all the Censures, Excommunications, and other Penalties enacted against the Fathers of the Council of Basil and Lausane, against Felix and their Adherents, confirm'd all the Collations and Dispositions made by these Councils, and by Felix, maintain'd in their Dignities, Prelacies and Benefices all those that Possess'd them in that Obedience, and appointed Felix to be the first Cardinal, and perpetual Legat to the Holy See in Germany. Thus a full end was put to the Schism, and Nicholas V. was acknowledg'd by all for Lawful Pope. He spent the rest of his Pontificat in allaying the Commotions in Italy, and died the 25th of March, in the Year 1453.

From this time to the end of this Century, nothing considerable was transacted about Ecclesiastical Matters in the Church of Rome; and the Popes were more taken up with the Wars of Italy, the Projects of Designs against the Turks, the Cares of aggrandizing their Temporal Power, and Settling their Families than with Ecclesiastical Affairs. Nevertheless, many Letters and Bulls were written in their Name, about the Affairs which are commonly carried to the Court of Rome, as the Canonizations of Saints, the Privileges of Monasteries, the Affairs of Religious Orders, of Dispensations, Processes between Churches, &c. the greatest part of which has been collected by Raynaldus, and the other Annalists, and in the Bullarium. I shall only add the Names of the Popes, who succeeded Nicholas V. together with the time of their Advancement to the Pontificat, and of their Death.

Callistus III. Alphonsus Borgia of Catalonia, a Cardinal of the Promotion of Eugenius IV. in 1440. was chosen in the room of Nicholas V. on the 8th of April, in the Year 1453. and was call'd Callistus III. He declar'd War against the Turks, and establish'd the Festival of the Transfiguration of our Lord. Being very old when he was advanc'd to the Papal Dignity, he did not govern long the Holy See, but died August the 6th, in the Year 1458.

Pius II. To him succeeded Æneas Sylvius Cardinal, of the Family of the Picolomini, who was chosen the 19th of August, in the same Year, and nam'd Pius II. We shall have occasion to speak of him among the Writers of this Century, among whom he holds a considerable Rank. He died August the 14th, 1464.

Paul II. Paul II. a Venetian, Nephew by his Mother's side to Eugenius IV. who was nam'd before Peter Barbo, succeeded Pius II. and govern'd the Church of Rome, from the beginning of September in the Year 1464. till the 25th of July, 1471. and then died of an Apoplexy. Some hold that he was the first Author of that Institution, that the Cardinals should wear Red Hats. In the Year 1467. he created Cardinal Francis of Rovere, a Monk of the Order of Friars Minors, and Vicar-general of his Order in Italy, descended of an Illustrious Family in Savoy, who succeeded him under the Name of Sixtus IV. This Pope made two Decrees about the Conception of the Virgin, one wherein he grants Indulgences to those who shall celebrate the Feast of the Conception, and lay the Office compos'd by Nogarol, a Canon of Verona: The other wherein he forbids under pain of Excommunication, the Sentence being reserv'd to the Pope, to treat with Heretics, or accuse those of Mortal Sin, who believ'd or maintain'd, That the Virgin was conceiv'd without Sin. He ordain'd, That for the future a Jubilee should be granted every Twenty five Years. Before he was made Pope, he had written some Treatises, viz. a Book of the Blood of Jesus Christ, a Treatise of the Power of God, printed at Rome in 1471. an Explication of the Treatise of Nicholas Richard, about the Indulgences granted for the Souls of Purgatory, printed with the Treatise it self in 1487. He died the 12th of August, in the Year 1484.

Sixtus IV.

Innocent VIII. His Successor was Innocent VIII. a Genoese, who had been made Cardinal in 1473. and died the 25th of July, 1492. Theodorick Borgia, Nephew to Callistus III. procur'd his own Election in the room of Innocent VIII. by his Canvassing, his Mony and the Promises he made to the Cardinals, to give them Benefices and Lands, and took upon him the Name of Alexander VI. He disgrac'd his Dignity by his Ambition, his Avarice, his Cruelties, and his Debaucheries, and died on the 18th of August, in the Year 1503. having taken by a mistake that Poison which he had prepar'd for poysoning the Cardinals whom he had invited.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers that flouriſh'd in the Weſt in the Fifteenth Century.

A Judgment of the Writers of the Fifteenth Century.

IN the Fifteenth Century, the love and reliſh of that true and uſeful Learning, which had been a long time baniſh'd, begun to revive in the World, and produce in it ſome good Effects. That Theology, which is founded upon the Principles of Scripture and Tradition, begun to be cultivated by the moſt able Divines, who applied themſelves to uſeful Queſtions about Doctrin and Morality, and handled them after a clear and ſolid manner, without entangling them with Philoſophical terms, and the thorny Queſtions of Metaphyſicks. Peter of Ailly, John Gerſon, and Nicholas Clemangis led the way, and ſhew'd an Example, clear'd their Writings of that Barbariſm and Obſcurity, which reign'd before them in the Sums, and the ordinary Commentaries of Theologues; and without inſiſting upon Queſtions purely Scholaſtical, handled divers Matters of Doctrin, of Morality and Diſcipline. In the Diſputes which the Latin Church had againſt the Greeks, and againſt the Wicleſites and Huſſites, they had recourſe to Scripture, and the Tradition of the Church for oppoſing them, which occaſion'd the Writers of Controverſie to ſtudy the Greek and Latin Fathers in their Originals. There were alſo able Men in the Hebrew and Greek Tongues, ſuch as Paul of Burges, Jerome of St. Faith, and Anthony Lebrixa, who applied themſelves to explain the Literal Senſe of Holy Scripture; and to reſolve the chief Difficulties that might be rais'd about thoſe Paſſages that were more obſcure. Great pains alſo was taken for reforming the Manners and Diſcipline of the Church; and many Authors ſignaliz'd themſelves by publiſhing excellent Works upon this Subject, wherein they did freely expoſe the Abuſes, and ſhew'd the Remedies that might be applied unto them. The Doctors of the Canon-Law did no longer ſlaviſhly tie themſelves to the Decrees and Decretals, but begun to look higher to the Original Canons, and to inform themſelves of the Ancient Diſcipline. Devotion was advanc'd to the higheſt degree, and by ſome even to thoſe Exceſſes which are not tolerable. In thoſe times indeed there was no perfect Hiſtorian, but there were many moderately good, whoſe Style was tolerable. The Caſuiſts had their Riſe almoſt about that time, and from their firſt beginning they introduc'd ſome looſe Opinions, and debated uſeleſs Queſtions; beſides, That the meanneſs of their Style renders them contemptible. Yet there were ſome Authors who wrote upon theſe Subjects with all the Elegance and Sublimity of Style that was poſſible: But the Eloquence of the Pulpit had not the good fortune to be ſo eaſily reſtor'd; all that can be ſaid in honour of the Preachers of this Age, is this, That among many whoſe Sermons were mean, childiſh, and unworthy of bearing the Name of the Word of God, there were ſome that deliver'd ſound Morality and uſeful Inſtructions, but without Eloquence and Loftineſs of Style. The Study of Greek, Latin, Poetry and Polite Learning flouriſh'd towards the end of this Century, which has furniſh'd us with moſt valuable Writers of this kind. This is in general the Idea which may be form'd of the Writers in the Fifteenth Century: We ſhall now ſay ſomething of each in particular, and inſiſt upon the Works of thoſe who deſerve to have Extracts taken out of them, paſſing ſlightly over the reſt of them. We ſhall begin with three famous Theologues of the Univerſity of Paris.

Peter of Ailly, (Petrus de Aliaco) Cardinal.

The firſt is Peter of Ailly, born at Compiegne, in the Year 1350. of a very obſcure Family, who roſe by his Merits to the Dignity of Cardinal. He owes this Advancement to the College of Navar, which receiv'd him into the number of its Burſars, about the Year 1372. From that time he begun to make himſelf known by his Writings of Philoſophy, wherein he follows the Principles of the Nominals. Afterwards, in the ſame place, he explain'd the Maſter of the Sentences towards the Year 1375. His Reputation procur'd him to be choſen to aſſiſt at a Synod in Amiens, where he made a Diſcourſe to the Prieſts of that Dioceſs, tho' he himſelf was yet but Sub-deacon. He receiv'd the Doctor's Bonnet at Paris, the 11th of April 1380; and the next Year made a Diſcourſe before the Duke of Anjou, in the name of the Univerſity, wherein he prov'd that it was neceſſary to Call a General Council to put an end to the Schiſm. The ſame Year he was made Canon of Noyon, and ſtay'd there till the Year 1384. when he was call'd back to Paris to be the Superior of the College of Navar; he diſcharg'd the Duty of the Place with Honour, and deſerv'd Commendation for his Leſſons and Sermons. Out of his School came John Gerſon, Nicholas Clemangis, and Giles of Champs, the moſt celebrated Theologues of this Time. The Univerſity of Paris could find no Perſon more fit than this Doctor, to maintain their Cauſe againſt John Monteſon, at the Tribunal of Pope Clement VII; whom therefore they deputed to the Court of Avignon, where he pleaded himſelf the Cauſe of the Univerſity againſt Monteſon, with ſo much Vigor, That the Pope and Cardinals confirm'd the Judgment of the Univerſity. Being return'd from this Deputation, in the Year 1389. he was honoured with three conſiderable Dignities, viz. of Chancellor of the Univerſity, Almoner and Confeſſor to King Charles VI. In the Year 1394. he was appointed Treaſurer of the

Peter of Ailly Cardinal.

Holy Chappel, and ſent by the King to Benedict XIII. to labour for the Peace of the Church. After this, he was choſen ſucceſſively to two Biſhopricks, in the Year 1395. to that of Puy in Velay; and in the Year 1396. to that of Cambray; he took Poſſeſſion of the latter, and laid down his Office of Chancellor of the Univerſity in favour of John Gerſon. He took great pains afterwards to extirpate the Schiſm, and aſſiſted at the Council of Piſa. In fine, John XXIII. made him Cardinal by the Title of St. Chryſogone, in the Year 1411; and in this Quality he was preſent at the General Council of Conſtance, and was one of thoſe that had a great Hand in all that was done there. There he compos'd ſome Treatiſes, and made many Sermons about the Matters which were handled in the Council; and afterwards he return'd to Cambray, where he died in the Year 1425.

There are many Works of Peter of Ailly, Printed and in Manuſcript. The Printed are as follows. Short Commentaries upon the four Books of the Sentences, Printed a-part in the Year 1500, and at Stratsburgh in 1490, together with the following Treatiſes, Queſtions or Principles upon the four Books of the Sentences, a Recommendation of the Holy Scripture, Principles upon the Courſe of the Bible, and chiefly upon the Goſpel of St. Mark. Quæſtio Veſperiarum, Whether the Church of Jeſus Chriſt is govern'd by the Law? The Queſtion de Reſumpta, Whether the Church of St. Peter is govern'd by a King, regulated by a Law, confirm'd by the Faith, and has a Right to Dominion. In the ſame year, and at the ſame place there were alſo Printed many Treatiſes of Piety, by the ſame Author, which have been alſo Re-printed at Douay, in 1634, viz. the Mirror of Conſideration which contains twelve Chapters; A Compend of Contemplation divided into three Treatiſes, whereof the 1ſt conſiſts of 12 Chapters of the 2d of the 2d of St. Thomas; the 2d is of the Spiritual Genealogy of Jacob, and the Figures which ſerve for Contemplation; the 3d of the Spiritual Senſes of a Man elevated to Contemplation; A work of the four ſteps of a Spiritual Ladder taken from St. Bernard; A ſhort Diſcourſe upon the Book of Pſalms; Meditations upon the thirtieth Pſalm, upon the Pſalm, Judica me Deus, upon the ſeven Penitential Pſalms, upon the Canticles, upon the Ave Maria, upon the Songs of the Virgin, Zachary and Simeon; together with an Epilogue of the four Spiritual Exerciſes; A Treatiſe of the Lord's Prayer, a Tract of the twelve Honours of St. Joſeph: The Treatiſe of the Soul, Re-printed at Paris, in 1505. Twenty Sermons, among which is a Sermon of the Trinity, Preach'd in the year 1405. at Geneva, before Benedict XIII. wherein he perſuades him to cauſe the Feaſt of the Holy Trinity to be celebrated in every Church, with a Conſtitution of this Pope upon this Subject, and a Treatiſe of the form and manner of chooſing a Pope, which was made in the time of the Council of Conſtance, as alſo his Treatiſe of the Reformation of the Church, preſented to the Fathers of this Council in the year 1415, Printed in the Collection Entituled, Faſciculus rerum expetendarum, and a Treatiſe of the Authority of the Church and Cardinals among the Works of Gerſon. There is alſo a Sacramental, which goes under the Name of Peter of Ailly, printed at Lovain in 1487. and the Life of St. Peter of Moron, or Celeſtine, printed at Paris in 1539. A Treatiſe of Eccleſiaſtical Power; A Treatiſe of the Interdict; A Treatiſe of the Permutation of Benefices, of Laws, and of a General Council; Some Queſtions about the Creation; An Anſwer to the Concluſions of Friar Matthew, for the Sect of Whippers, together with the Book of the Agreement of Aſtrology and Theology: Theſe two laſt are among the Works of Gerſon, the other have been printed at Collen, with ſome other Treatiſes of Aſtronomy: A Treatiſe of the Sphere printed at Paris in 1494. and at Venice in 1508; A Treatiſe upon the Meteors of Ariſtotle, and the Impreſſions of the Air, printed at Strasburg in 1504. and at Vienna in 1509. He had a great eſteem of Judicial Aſtrology, and refers to the Stars not only Civil Events, but alſo Changes of Religion, and the Birth of Hereſies; and he believ'd, That by the Principles of this Science, a Man might even foretel, the Birth of Hereticks, Prophets, and of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf.

The Manuſcript Works of Peter of Ailly, which are to be found in the Bibliotheque of the College of Navar, according to Monſieur Launoy, who has made a Catalogue of them, are as follows; A Queſtion decided in the Schools of Navar, viz. Whether it be Heretical to ſay, That 'tis lawful to give or receive Mony for obtaining a Right to Preach; A Propoſition made before the Pope againſt the Chancellor of the Univerſity of Paris, which begins with theſe Words, Lord, I ſuffer Violence; A Queſtion upon the Reprimand which St. Paul gave St. Peter; An Anſwer made in the Sorbon upon this Queſtion, viz. Whether it be a Perfection to be three Subſiſtences in one and the ſame Nature; Another Queſtion to which he anſwer'd in the Sorbon, viz. Whether the erroneous Conſcience of a reaſonable Creature can excuſe its Action; An Anſwer made in the Hall of the Biſhoprick, viz. Whether he that has a Power which Jeſus Chriſt has given him can be juſtly damn'd; Another Queſtion, viz. Whether the Liberty of reaſonable Creatures is equal before and after the Fall; An Invective of Ezechiel againſt Falſe Preachers; A Sermon made in the Chapter of the College of Navar upon this Text, Truth is gone out of the Earth; A Sermon upon St. Bernard; A Sermon upon theſe Words, The Kingdom of Heaven belongeth to them; A Sermon preach'd in the Synod of Amiens, when he was yet but Subdeacon, upon this Text, Let your Prieſts be cloth'd with Righteouſneſs; Another Sermon preach'd in the Synod of Paris; A Treatiſe upon Boetius's Book of Conſolation; Two Treatiſes upon the Falſe Prophets, in the latter of which he treats of Hypocriſie, of Knowledge, of the Diſcourſe of good and bad Angels, and of Judicial Aſtrology; A Diſcourſe of the Viſion of the Garden of Scripture, which ſerves as a Preface to his Commentary upon the the Canticles; Two Diſcourſes ſpoke before the Pope and the Conſiſtory of Cardinals, againſt Friar John of Monteſon; A Treatiſe made in the Name of the Univerſity of Paris, againſt the Errors of the ſame Friar, whereof the greateſt part is printed at the end of the Maſter of the Sentences.

Peter of Ailly Car. dinal.

The moſt conſiderable Work of Peter of Ailly, is his Treatiſe of the Reformation of the Church, which is nothing but an Abridgment of many other Works which he wrote upon the ſame Subject. He ſhews in the Preface the neceſſity of Reforming the Church, becauſe of the Diſorders which abound in the greateſt part of its Members, which will ſtill encreaſe unleſs a ſpeedy Remedy be applied. The Body of the Work is divided into ſix Chapters, the firſt is, about the neceſſity of Reformation in the Univerſal Church; for which end he ſhews, That General Councils muſt be celebrated oftner than they have been in Times paſt, and that Provincial Councils muſt be held every two Years: The ſecond concerns what muſt be reform'd in the Head of the Church, i. e. in the Pope and the Court of Rome, wherein there are many Things to be reform'd: Firſt, That Abuſe which has been the Origin of Schiſm, that one Nation ſhould detain the Pope in their Country for a conſiderable time to the prejudice of the reſt of Chriſtendom; and to prevent this, he thought it would be convenient, That no more Cardinals ſhould be made of one Nation than Another. Secondly, That to hinder the Cardinals from alledging, they had made the Election of a Pope thro' fear or violence; a Time muſt be fix'd, after which this Exception ſhall be no more receiv'd; and that the Council muſt judge to whom it belongs to take cognizance of it. Thirdly, That a Remedy muſt be applied to the three principal Grievances that the other Churches object againſt the Church of Rome; and which conſiſt in the great number of Exactions, of Excommunications and Conſtitutions. Fourthly, That care muſt be taken as to Collations and Elections of Benefices, to retrench many Exemptions which the Court of Rome had granted to Abbots, Convents and Chapters; and to aboliſh many Rights which the Officers of the Court of Rome had uſurp'd. The third Chapter is concerning the Reformation of the Church in its Principal Parts, i. e. the Prelats of the firſt Order; there he explains the Qualities which Biſhops ought to have, after what manner they ſhould live; he proves the Obligation they lie under to Reſide in their Dioceſs, and ſhews what care they ought to have to avoid all appearance of Simony, and to take nothing for Orders, nor for the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; He adds, That it would be expedient to declare, That many things which paſs for Commands of the Church are only Counſels, to moderate the Laws of the Church, to abridge and purge the Divine Offices, to retrench a part of the Images and Feſtivals, and not to Canonize ſo many new Saints. The fourth Chapter is about the Reformation of the Religious Orders: He thinks it would be convenient that there ſhould not be ſo great a Number of them, nor ſo many different Orders, particularly of the Mendicants, whoſe great Number is burdenſome and prejudicial to the other States of the Church: That the begging of Preachers ſhould be ſuppreſs'd, which renders the Word of God contemptible, and the Monks muſt be hindred from going out of their Houſes, under pretence of Study: That it was alſo neceſſary to reform the Military Orders, and to bring them back to their ancient Inſtitution: That as to the Nuns no Monaſteries ſhould be ſuffer'd, which have not ſufficient Revenues to maintain the Nuns that are ſhut up in them, for want of which they are forc'd to go abroad. The fifth Chapter is about the Reformation of mere Eccleſiaſticks; he deſires that Benefices ſhould be fill'd with Perſons capable and worthy to poſſeſs them, That Dignities ſhould not be given but only to thoſe who are Doctors in Divinity or Law: He believ'd alſo, That the Univerſities wanted Reformation, and that they ſhould retrench the uſeleſs Studies that were in uſe there. He wiſh'd that the Manners of Eccleſiaſticks were reform'd, which were very diſorderly; That Archdeacons were oblig'd to do their Duty; That the Order of Prieſthood ſhould not be given but only to thoſe who were Qualified, and of good Morals. That for the Inſtruction of thoſe who are already Ordain'd, Lectures ſhould be made in Latin and French, about thoſe things of Religion which are moſt neceſſary, as about Vertues and Vices, about the Articles of Faith, the Sacraments, the manner of Confeſſing, and that they ſhould be publiſh'd in the Synods; That there ſhould be in each Church a Reader in Divinity, and a number of ſufficient Books. The ſixth Chapter is about the Reformation of Lay-men, and chiefly of Chriſtian Princes, where he gives them excellent Inſtructions concerning their Behaviour towards the Church and the General Council.

John Charlier Gerſon.

John Charlier ſirnam'd Gerſon, from the name of a Village in the Dioceſs of Rhemes, near Rhetel, in which he was born December the 14th, 1363. was Educated in Piety by his Father Arnulphus, and his Mother Elizabeth. When he arriv'd at the Age of Fourteen Years at Paris, he was receiv'd into the Society of Artiſts of the College of Navar, and after he had ſtudied there Humanity and Philoſophy he was receiv'd in the Year 1382. into the Society of Divines: And having ſtudied Divinity for Ten Years under Peter of Ailly, and Giles Deſchamps, he took his Degrees in the Faculty of Theology, and receiv'd the Doctors Cap in the Year 1392. Some time after, he ſucceeded Peter of Ailly in the Dignity of Chancellor and Canon of the Church of Paris. The Murder of Louis, Duke of Orleans, who was Maſſacred in the Year 1407. by Order of the Duke of Burgundy, ſtirr'd up the Zeal of Gerſon againſt John Petit a Divine; who, by a baſe Compliance had undertaken to juſtifie this Action. Gerſon made many Sermons againſt this Sanguinary Doctrine, caus'd it to be Cenſur'd by the Faculty of Theology, and the Bishop of Paris: He bestirr'd himself vigorously for the Extirpation of the Schism before the Council of Pisa, but chiefly in the Council of Constance; at which he assisted in the Quality of Ambassador from the King of France, and of Deputy from the University of Paris, and the Province of Sens. He wrote several things, and spoke many Discourses during the time of the Council, and was there look'd upon as the most able of all the Divines. There he oppos'd stoutly the Error of John Petit, and caus'd him to be condemn'd by the Council, which brought upon him the Indignation of the Duke of Burgundy; insomuch that he durst not return to Paris, and was forc'd to retire into Germany Disguis'd in the Habit of a Pilgrim. There he stay'd for some time, but at last he return'd to Lyons, where he ended his Days on the 12th of July 1439. at the Age of 76 Years.

Gerson wrote many Books which have been Printed many times in Germany, at Colen in 1483. at Strasburg in 1488. and in 1444. at Basil in 1489. and in 1518; by Martin Flacius, in 1502. by John Knobauch in 1514; and twice at Paris, in 1521. in the Gothic Letter, and in 1606. These Editions were divided into four Parts.

The first contains the Treatises concerning Faith and the Ecclesiastical Power. Before it there is plac'd an Encomium of the Works of Gerson, after which follows a Concordance of the four Evangelists. The first of the Treatises about Ecclesiastical Power, is the Work which he compos'd upon this Subject at Constance while the Council was held, Entitled, Of the Ecclesiastical Power, and the Origin of Right and Laws. It contains Thirteen Considerations: In the first he gives the Definition of Ecclesiastical Power express'd in these Words: The Ecclesiastical Power is a Power that was conferr'd supernaturally and specially by Jesus Christ to his Apostles, and their Disciples, to pass to their Lawful Successors to the end of the World, for the Edification of the Church Militant according to the Laws of the Gospel, and for obtaining Eternal Life. He distinguishes in the second Consideration two sorts of Ecclesiastical Power, the Power of Order, and the Power of Jurisdiction; and divides the former into two, the Power of Order as to the Mystical and true Body of Jesus Christ and its Consecration, and the Power of Order as to the Mystical Body of Jesus Christ in its Members, i. e. the Church. The Power of Jurisdiction is also divided into two, that which concerns the External Court, and that which concerns the Internal; and the former is either such as Jesus Christ did immediately appoint, or such as Human Constitutions have ordain'd. The Power of Order which concerns the Consecration of the Body of Jesus Christ is equal in the Priests and the Bishops; but as to the Power of Confirmation and the Ordination of Ministers, that belongs to the Bishops, at least in its Plenitude and Perfection, and is equal in them and in the Pope, as Gerson proves in the third Consideration. He treats in the fourth of the Power of Jurisdiction in the External Court, which is Exercis'd over Christians whether they will or no, but with respect to Eternal Happiness; such is the Power of Excommunicating and Interdicting. He says, That this Power was given by Jesus Christ to his Church to be Exercis'd by a General Council; That altho' it was conferr'd upon St. Peter and his Successors, yet it was chiefly given to the Church: First, Because the Church is infallible, which cannot be said of the Pope: Secondly, Because the Church can set Bounds to the Power of the Pope, which the Pope cannot do to the Power of the Church: Thirdly, Because the Church comprehends all the Ecclesiastical Powers, even that of the Pope: Fourthly, Because the Church can make Laws to oblige the Pope and reform him, whereas the Pope cannot judge the whole Church, nor set any Bounds to its Power. As to the Effects of the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, Gerson says, That the last Penalty that the Church can inflict is Penal Excommunication, and that it has no Right to make use of any Corporal Punishment, but by the Concession of Princes; wherefore he does not approve that so many Censures have been us'd for maintaining this Jurisdiction. He treats in the fifth Consideration of the Power of Jurisdiction in the Internal Court, which is Exercis'd over those that voluntarily submit to it; by enlightening and perfecting them with Instructions, and the Administration of Sacraments, and Purifying them by Baptism and by Penance. After he has Establish'd these Principles, he applies them in the following Considerations. The Ecclesiastical Power consider'd in it self is unvariable, and continues the same from the beginning of the Church unto the end, and comprehends all the different Powers, even the Authority of the Pope: The same Power consider'd respectively in its particular Subjects is variable, since the Subjects are chang'd by Natural or Civil Deaths, by Deposition, Renunciation, &c. The Pope himself may voluntarily resign the Pontificat, or be Depos'd. The Power which respects the Institution of Ministers has very much varied in the Church, and the Ambitious Desires of Men has caus'd so great Confusions about it, that 'tis difficult to distinguish what is in it of Jesus Christ's Institution from that which is of Human appointment: The History of the Popes, of General Councils, and the Decretals of the Pope plainly discover this variety. But we ought to consider the many Processes about Benefices which buse the Court of Rome, the Collations and Seals of the Pope, the Annates, and an infinite number of Practices, by which the Pope would usurp the Institutions, the Rights, the Offices and the Benefices of all the Churches; they ought to remember, That God has not given them a Power but to Edification; they have a Right to reform Abuses, to watch over the whole Church, to turn out Intruders, to advance the Humble and Poor without Prayers or Presents. The Ecclesiastical Power consider'd according to its Usage and Exercise is variable, for tho' it be the Institution of Jesus Christ, yet the Use and Exercise of it is convey'd from some Men to others, according according to the various Neceſſities of the Church. The Plenitude of this Power is ſubjectively in the Pope only, ſuppoſing that he be Ordain'd, which was given by Jeſus Chriſt to St. Peter, for him and his Succeſſors: But the Church and Princes have granted them Rights which they had not by the Inſtitution of Jeſus Chriſt, and the General Councils could make Laws which the Pope could not deſtroy, but only by diſpenſing in caſe of neceſſity or apparent advantage, becauſe Human Laws can never be made ſo general, but they will admit of ſome Exception and Interpretation; Gerſon there gives Excellent Rules about Diſpenſation. John Charlier surnam'd Gerſon.

After this, he proceeds to the Authority of the Church, and a General Council, which he proves to be the Sovereign Authority in the Church, and to have Right to exerciſe the Pontifical Juriſdiction; and alſo to take care of it for a time, tho' they cannot aboliſh it for ever. The twelfth Conſideration is about the Power of the Pope with reſpect to Temporal Revenues. He ſays, That he has no Power to diſpoſe of the Revenues of Clergy-men, and much leſs of thoſe of Lay-men, altho' the Government, Direction and Regulation of theſe Revenus belong to him. He owns, That theſe Doctrins are contrary to two oppoſite Errors, whereof one is, That the Eccleſiaſticks ought not to have Temporal Revenues, that if they have any they are only Alms which are not due, and which they ought not to enjoy, but to live in the Poverty of Jeſus Chriſt; the other is, That the Pope is the Sovereign Lord of Temporals as well as Spirituals; That all Kings receive their Power from him, or at leaſt that he is abſolute Lord of the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, and that he can diſpoſe of them according to his Will without being guilty of Simony, and without admitting any Appeal from his Judgment. He concludes from all theſe Conſiderations, That the Power of the Pope is much Superior to all other Power Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal; but that the Power of the Church and a General Council is more extenſive and large, not only for its Infallibility, but for the Right it has to Reform the Church in its Head and Members, and to decide as the laſt reſort the Cauſes of Faith. He defines a General Council a Congregation made in any place by a Lawful Authority, of all the Hierarchical Orders of the Catholick Church, from which none of the Faithful are excluded, who has a mind to be heard in order to the Management of what concerns the Government of the Church in Faith and Manners. It belongs to the Pope to call them together except in three Caſes, in which the Congregation of a Council may be made without the Pope: The firſt is, If the Pope be naturally dead, civilly or canonically, if he be Depos'd, Diſtracted, or a Priſoner in any place where he cannot be addreſs'd unto; The ſecond is, If being requir'd to call a Council, he does obſtinately refuſe to do it; The third is, If a General Council being Lawfully Aſſembled appoint the time and place of a ſubſequent Council. The Prelats that ought to be preſent at a Council are thoſe of the firſt Order, viz. Archbiſhops and Biſhops who ſucceed the Apoſtles; and Prelats of the ſecond Order who are Succeſſors to the 72 Diſciples: Both the one and the other have a Definitive Voice in the Council, other Perſons have only a Conſultative Voice. By the Prelats of the ſecond Order are underſtood the Pariſh-Prieſts; but this cannot be extended to the Regulars, who Exerciſe no Hierarchical Functions but by Privilege. The thirteenth Conſideration contains the Definition and Diviſion of the differen ſorts of Laws of Juriſdiction and Government. This Treatiſe of Gerſon was written and repeated in the Council of Conſtance 1417.

The ſecond Work of the ſame firſt Part is a Diſcourſe ſpoken at the ſame Council in 1415. upon occaſion of the Proceſſions that were made for the happy Voyage of the King of the Romans to Peter de Luna; wherein he explains the Progreſs which the Council made towards Peace, by removing the Obſtacles which hindred the Extirpation of the Schiſm and Hereſie, and the Reformation of Manners. In it he confirms the Authority of the Council above the Pope in Matters of Faith, and as to the Reformation of Manners.

The third Treatiſe is Entitled, de Auferibilitate Papæ ab Eccleſia, the Subject whereof is not as ſome imagine, That the Church can take away the Pope for ever; but that there are many Caſes wherein the Church may be for a time without the Pope, and that there are ſome Caſes wherein he may be Depos'd. He takes for the Text of his Diſcourſe the Words of Jeſus Chriſt in St. Mark Ch. 2. The time will come when the Bridegroom ſhall be taken away from you, whereupon he enquires; Firſt, Whether Jeſus Chriſt who is the Bridegroom of the Church can be taken from the Church and its Members. And firſt, he lays it down for certain, That he cannot be taken away from the whole Church according to the Ordinary Law; Secondly, That tho' he may ceaſe to be the Spouſe of particular Believers in the Church Militant, yet he cannot ceaſe to be the Spouſe of the whole Church Collectively; Thirdly, That he cannot ceaſe to diſpenſe continually his Graces to the whole Church, and every one of its Living Members; Fourthly, That it was not poſſible, That Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be taken away from the far greateſt part of his Spouſe, ſo that the Church ſhould ſubſiſt in one Woman only, or in the Sex of Women only, or in Lay-men only. This is what concerns Jeſus Chriſt. Now follow the Propoſitions which concern the Pope his Vicar; Firſt, The Monarchical State of the Church Eſtabliſh'd by Jeſus Chriſt cannot be chang'd. Secondly, A Pope may ceaſe to be the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt by Ceſſion or Reſignation of the Pontificat. Thirdly, He may be remov'd by a General Council, even againſt his Will in ſome Caſes; and tho' the Council cannot take from him the Power of Order, yet it may Deprive him of the lawful Execution of the Power of Order, and of his Juriſdiction. Fourthly, The Council has Power to do this legally and with Authority. Fifthly, The Pope may be Depos'd as a Heretick and Schiſmatick, tho' he be only mentally ſo, in ſuch Caſes as he may be preſum'd and judg'd to be ſuch. Sixthly, He may in ſome Caſes be depriv'd of the Pontificate without any Fault of his, though not without cauſe, as if he become incapable of doing his Duty, if he do not prove that his Election was Canonical; if his Deprivation be a means to procure the Peace of the Church, or the Re-union of a great many People; or if he has promis'd to reſign. Seventhly, The Church cannot take away the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt unto the end of the World, ſuppoſing that it ſhall laſt yet for ſome time: From whence he concludes, That thoſe who contribute to maintain a Schiſm, oppoſe the Order of Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe they hinder the Church from having a lawful Head.

The 4th Treatiſe of Gerſon, is about the manner of our Behaviour during a Schiſm; where he ſhews, That when it is doubtful which of the Competitors is the true Pope, we ought to abſtain from Condemning one another, and endeavour to procure the Peace of the Church, either by obliging the Competitors to reſign their pretended Rights, or by withdrawing our Obedience to them; but above all things, we ought not to divide the Communion of one from the other. At the end of this Treatiſe, he has added an Appendix, wherein he gives a Catalogue of the Schiſms of the Church of Rome.

The 5th Work, is a Treatiſe of the Unity of the Church, wherein he ſhews with what Zeal we ought to ſeek after Union with one ſole Head the Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt; and of what importance it is to procure it.

After this follows a Treatiſe of the different States of the Eccleſiaſticks, of their Duties and Privileges; Firſt, With reſpect to the Pope, who hath the Supremacy in the Church, tho' he be ſubject to the Laws of General Councils; and ought alſo to pay a Deference to other poſitive Laws. Secondly, With reſpect to the Biſhops, who are of Divine Inſtitution, and exerciſe their Power in Subordination to the Pope, yet ſo that he cannot deſtroy it, nor deprive the Biſhops of it without Reaſon, or reſtrain their Rights or Juriſdictions beyond reaſonable Bounds. Thirdly, With reſpect to Pariſh-Prieſts, who ſucceed the 72 Diſciples, and who are alſo inſtituted by Jeſus Chriſt, who, although they be inferiour to Biſhops, yet are ſuperiour to the Regulars, having a Right to Preach and Adminiſter the Sacraments. Fourthly, With reſpect to the Regulars, who are privileg'd, and have been choſen to Preach, and hear Confeſſions a long time after the Eſtabliſhment of the Church; a Privilege which they ought to uſe Charitably, and not from a Principle of Intereſt, Emulation or Ambition, and to the Prejudice of the Pariſh-Prieſts, and not at all but when they are approv'd by the Biſhop.

The next Treatiſe is a Work purely of Morality, wherein Gerſon collects many Chriſtian Maxims for all Eſtates; after which follows a Sermon preach'd at Conſtance, wherein he relates divers Signs of the approaching Deſtruction of this World; among which he places the Pomp, Pride and Tyranny of the Prelats of his time, and the Novelty of Opinions.

After this we find a Catalogue of the Faults of Eccleſiaſticks, which are many: The plurality of Benefices is not forgotten there, nor the Tricks and Sollicitations that are us'd to obtain them, the Abſence of Biſhops from their Dioceſſes, the Negligence of Eccleſiaſticks in performing their Office, and reading Divine Service; their Ignorance, the worldly Life which they lead, the Pomp and Pride of Cardinals and other Prelats, and an infinite number of Diſorders both in the Manners and Behaviour of the Eccleſiaſticks.

The three following Treatiſes were Compos'd before the Council of Conſtance, at ſuch time as Benedict XIII. was yet acknowledg'd by France; wherein he proves the Right that Benedict had to the Pontificat, and would have him put an end to the Schiſm, by way of Com-promiſe or Ceſſion, rather than by a General Council.

Gerſon being ſent to Pope Benedict by the Univerſity of Paris, preach'd before him two Sermons at Taraſcon, in the Year 1404. one on the day of our Lord's Circumciſion, and the other about the Peace of the Church; wherein he undertakes to perſuade the Pope that he ought to embrace all ways for procuring it, even by reſigning, if need were, his Right to his Adverſary. This Diſcourſe was ill taken, wherefore Gerſon was forc'd to juſtify himſelf by two Letters which he wrote; whereof one is addreſs'd to the Duke of Orleans, and the other to the Biſhop of Cambray. In theſe Letters he ſpeaks of another preceding Sermon, deliver'd before the ſame Pope at Marſeilles; wherein he declares the Occaſion of his Embaſſy, which is printed after the other two, whereof we have now ſpoken, although it ſhould be before them; and there is alſo among them a Diſcourſe which was not preach'd by Gerſon till a long time after, in the preſence of Alexander V.

The other Pieces of Gerſon about the Schiſm, are a Diſcourſe ſpoken in the Name of the Univerſity of Paris, in 1408. in the preſence of the Embaſſadors from England, who were going to the Council of Piſa, wherein he congratulates them, that they were going to this Council to endeavour after the Peace of the Church, exhorts them to make a Peace, and ſhews them the means of procuring it. There is a Trialogue of his about the matter of the Schiſm; wherein he introduces Zeal, Good-will and Diſcretion, diſputing together, about the means of putting an end to Contention; a Letter in the Name of the Univerſity of Paris, againſt the Letter in the Name of the Univerſity of Tholouſe; and a Letter in the Name of the King of France, to juſtify his Subſtraction of Obedience from Peter de Luna.

After

After theſe Works follow many Sermons preach'd at Conſtance during the time of the Council. In the ſecond he ſets himſelf againſt the Partizans of the Duke of Burgundy, who would hinder the Council from Examining and Condemning the Errors of John Petit; and ſhews by many Reaſons that 'tis very neceſſary to be done. At the end of this Sermon there is a ſmall piece wherein he recollects divers Errors, chiefly about this Precept of the Decalogue, Thou ſhalt not kill; againſt which ſome had advanc'd many cruel and ſanguinary Propoſitions, prejudicial to the Security of Princes; and about the Validity of Confeſſions made to Friars Mendicants. The Duke of Burgundy having caus'd the Propoſition of John Petit to be maintain'd by Peter Biſhop of Arras, That it was lawful to kill Tyrants; Gerſon reply'd to him in the Name of the King of France, in a long Diſcourſe ſpoken in an Aſſembly of the Fathers of the Council, on the 5th of May 1416. and made two other Sermons, wherein he ſearches this Matter to the bottom, and refutes at large the Propoſitions of John Petit, and relates the Cenſure of it, made at Paris, both by the Biſhop and the Doctors. John Charlier ſirnam'd Gerſon.

The three following Treatiſes are not concerning the Affair of the Schiſm, but the Principles of Faith: The firſt is entitled a Declaration of the Truths which muſt be believ'd, and according to him they are as follow; Firſt, All that is contain'd literally in the Canonical Books; Secondly, All that is determin'd by the Church, and receiv'd by Tradition from the Apoſtles; not all that it tolerates, or permits to be read publickly, but only what it defines by a Judgment, condemning the contrary; Thirdly, The Truths which are certainly reveal'd to ſome private Perſons; Fourthly, The neceſſary Concluſions of Truth which are eſtabliſh'd upon the preceding Principles; Fifthly, The Propoſitions which follow from theſe Truths by a probable Conſequence, or which are deduc'd from a Propoſition of Faith, or any other ſuppos'd to be true; Sixthly, The Truths which ſerve to cheriſh and maintain Devotion, though they be not perfectly certain, provided they be not known to be falſe. From theſe Propoſitions he draws the following Corollaries; Firſt, That 'tis falſe and heretical to affirm, That the literal Senſe of Scripture is ſometimes falſe; Secondly, That 'tis Blaſphemy and Hereſie to maintain, That nothing that is evidently known can be of Faith; Thirdly, That 'tis alſo Heretical and Blaſphemous to ſay, That the Precepts of the Decalogue are not of Faith, and that the contrary Propoſitions are not Heretical; Fourthly, That the Learned are obliged to believe with an explicite Faith many Propoſitions that are the Conſequences of the prime Truths, which the common People are not oblig'd to believe; Fifthly, That the Paſtors, Doctors, and other Perſons plac'd in Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, are oblig'd to believe explicitly the Precepts of the Decalogue, and many other Points of Faith, which other Chriſtians are oblig'd to believe only implicitly. The ſecond Treatiſe is entitled, Of Proteſtation or Confeſſion in Matters of Faith againſt Hereſies; where he treats of Proteſtations both general and particular, and of Revocations and Retractations which we are oblig'd to make in Matters of Faith; and ſhews, that a general Proteſtation is not ſufficient to juſtifie a Man when he is guilty of particular Errors; that a particular Proteſtation which is conditional, and expreſs'd in theſe Words, I would believe this Truth if it were known to me to be ſo, does not juſtifie neither before God nor Men. He that revokes an Error which he hath held, ought not to ſatisfie himſelf with making a particular Proteſtation of the contrary Truth; but ought to mention, that he retracts the Error which he maintain'd; and this Revocation does not hinder him from being an Heretick before: Yet this is not neceſſary with reſpect to thoſe who have been in Error, but did not know it, nor maintain it obſtinately. Laſtly, A Retractation does not hinder but he who has made it may ſtill be ſuſpected of Hereſie, if he diſcovers by external Signs that his Revocation is not ſincere. The third Treatiſe contains the Characters of Obſtinacy in Matters of Hereſie. In it he defines Obſtinacy, a Depravation of the Will caus'd by Pride or ſome other Vice, which hinders him that is in Error from ſeeking carefully after the Truth, or embracing it when it is made known to him. The Signs of Obſtinacy are theſe, when he who is in Error ſuffers Excommunication; when being Cited he does not appear; when he defends an Error contrary to the Truth, which he is oblig'd to believe with an explicit Faith; when he hinders the explaining and defining of the Truth; when he declares himſelf an Enemy to thoſe who would have the Matter decided; when he denies a Truth which he had formerly taught; when being requir'd to explain the Truth to the Doctors or Judges, he will not follow their Advice; when he ſtirs up Wars and Seditions, becauſe the Truth has been explain'd; when he declares, That he would rather die than change his Opinion; when he defends or maintains a Heretick, knowing that he is in an Error; laſtly, when one does not oppoſe an Error as he may, or ought, either by his Office, if he be a Judge, or from brotherly Charity. Theſe, according to Gerſon, are the 12 Signs of Obſtinacy.

The Treatiſe upon that Queſtion, Whether it be lawful to appeal from the Judgment of the Pope in Matters of Faith? was compos'd by Gerſon, after the Election of Martin V. upon occaſion of that Pope's refuſal to condemn the Propoſitions, of which the Polanders deſired the Condemnation. There he maintains the Affirmative, becauſe the Judgment of the Pope is not infallible, as that of a General Council is; wherefore in Matters of Faith, no judicial Determination of any Biſhop, or even of the Pope himſelf, does oblige the Faithful to believe a Truth as of Faith; although it oblige them under pain of Excommunication not to be Dogmatical in affirming the contrary, unleſs they have evident Reaſon to oppoſe againſt the Determination founded on the Holy Scripture, or Revelation, or the Determination of the Church and a General

John Charlier ſirnam'd Gerſon.

General Council; but in every Caſe, as we may appeal from the Judgment of a Biſhop to the Pope, ſo we may appeal from the Judgment of a Pope to a General Council.

The following Pieces are concerning the Proceſſes made againſt Peter de Luna in the Council, to ſhew that he is Perjur'd, Schiſmatical, one that gives Scandal to the Church of God, and is ſuſpected of Hereſie, and that as ſuch he ought to be depos'd.

In the laſt Piece he examins this Propoſition, Whether the Sentence of a Paſtor, tho' it be unjuſt, ought to be obſerv'd; and he maintains, That it is falſe, erroneous, ſuſpected in Matter of Faith. He explains alſo this other Propoſition, Unjuſt Sentences are to be fear'd, that is, that they may ſometimes be the occaſion of fear, with reſpect to timerous Conſciences, but not that they are in themſelves formidable.

The Treatiſe of the Incarnation, which follows, conſiſts of two Parts; in the firſt, he treats of the Natural Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt; and in the ſecond, of the Euchariſt. In the former he ſpeaks of the immaculate Conception of the Virgin, of the Perfections and Graces which ſhe receiv'd from Jeſus Chriſt, who gave her all thoſe, which he in his Wiſdom thought convenient, but not all thoſe which he could have given her. As, for inſtance, he gave her not the perfect uſe of her Reaſon immediately after her Conception or Birth, which would be a raſh Aſſertion. In the ſecond Part he treats of the actual Reception of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt; he examines what we ought to think of the Spiritual Sentiments of Love, and the Tenderneſs which ſome of the Faithful feel; and ſhews, that they are not neceſſary, that often times they are Illuſions, that when one gives himſelf up to them, he is liable to fall into Extravagances and Errors.

John Ruſbroek had fallen into this Exceſs, in the third part of his Book about the Ornament of the Spiritual Marriage; where he advances many Propoſitions about the Union of the Contemplative Soul with God. Gerſon refutes him in the Letter which he wrote to a Carthuſian; wherein he ſhews how dangerous it was to make uſe of new Terms to expreſs the more ſublime Truths of Divinity; and that thoſe who have not ſtudied the Doctrins of Religion, how contemplative ſoever they may be, ought not to meddle with Teaching, or talking of ſpeculative Truths, becauſe they are liable to fall into dangerous Errors, or at leaſt to advance many Propoſitions that are falſe and ill-expreſs'd, which give occaſion to the common People to fall into Error. John Schonhow wrote a Piece to defend the Treatiſe of Ruſbroek; to which Gerſon anſwer'd in a ſecond Letter, wherein he ſhews, that theſe Novelties cannot be excus'd, nor maintain'd. This Piece of John Schonhow, and the Anſwer of Gerſon follow the firſt Letter whereof we now ſpeak.

The two Lectures upon St. Mark are Diſcourſes, wherein he handles divers Queſtions of Morality and Diſcipline; as, about the Validity of Confeſſions made to Friars Mendicants, the Reiteration of Confeſſion, the literal Senſe of the Scripture, the Cauſes of Errors, &c.

He ſhews in a Piece about the Communion of the Laity under both kinds, that though the Scripture is the Rule of Faith, yet it may admit ſome Interpretations; and that it belongs to the Church to explain it. In the ſecond Part of this Piece he oppoſes the Error of thoſe who maintain'd, That it was neceſſary to Salvation for the Laity to communicate under both kinds; and relates the Reaſons for juſtifying the taking away the Cup from them.

The two next Treatiſes are very uſeful for eſtabliſhing ſuch genuine Principles, whereby we may diſtinguiſh true Doctrin from that which is falſe. The former is entitled, The Tryal of Spirits; and the latter, The Examination of Doctrins: In the former, he gives Rules for diſtinguiſhing falſe Revelations from true; in the latter, he lays down the Maxims by which we may know, to whom it belongs to examine a Doctrin, and what Rules they are to follow in this Examination. A General Council is the Sovereign Judge of Doctrins of Faith; after it the Pope, whoſe Authority nevertheleſs is not infallible, and each Biſhop in his own Dioceſs, whoſe Deciſion is different from that of the Pope; ſo that the Authority of the firſt extends to the whole Church, whereas the two laſt can oblige only thoſe that are ſubject to their Juriſdiction. The Doctors alſo have an Authentick Judgment in Matters of Doctrin; and each Perſon inſtructed in Scripture and Tradition may alſo give his Judgment, and teach even the Pope and Prelats thoſe Truths which he knows. The ſame is to be ſaid of thoſe who have the Spirit of Diſcretion and Underſtanding. The Rules which we are to follow in judging of a Doctrin, whether it be ſound or no, are theſe: Firſt, That it be agreeable to Scripture and Tradition: Secondly, That he who Teaches have Authority to do it, and be worthy of Credit; upon which account the Viſions and Revelations of Women are commonly ſuſpected, becauſe they may be eaſily ſeduc'd: Thirdly, That we ought to examine the Deſign of him that publiſhes a Doctrin, whether he be acted by Pride, Intereſt or Pleaſure. In the end of this Treatiſe he relates the Example of a Woman in a Town of Breſſe, who perſuaded many Perſons that ſhe had deliver'd Souls out of Hell, by feigning Extaſies and wonderful Things, and by uſing extraordinary Abſtinence; and who being taken, confeſs'd that ſhe feign'd all theſe things to get a Livelihood. He adds afterwards other Rules very uſeful to preſerve us from theſe ways of Seducing.

He makes an Encomium of St. Bonaventure, in a Letter written 1426, to a Friar Minor at Lyons, and in another Letter written 1424. to Oſwald a Carthuſian.

In

In the Letter addreſs'd to the Students of the College of Navar, he gives his Opinion about the Studies a Divine ought to follow. As to the Schoolmen, he adviſes them to read William Auxerres, St. Bonaventure, Durand, Henry of Gandavo, and St. Thomas, chiefly in his 2d of the 2d. He blames theſe Authors and the like, only for one thing, That they have handled Queſtions purely Phyſical, Metaphyſical, or even Logical, in Theological terms. As to Morality, he adviſes them to read Matters of Hiſtory, the Dialogues of St. Gregory, the Conferences and Lives of the Fathers, the Confeſſions of St. Auſtin, and the Legends of the Saints: As to Preaching, the Myſtical Expoſitions of the Fathers; ſuch as the Morals and Paſtoral care of St. Gregory, the Commentary of St. Bernard upon the Canticles, and ſome Works of Richard of St. Victor, and of William of Paris. As to the Works of Prophane Authors, he would not have a Chriſtian give his Mind wholly to them; but only look into them, and curiouſly run them over, like a Traveller, to pick up their moral Sentences, to form a Style, and to render himſelf moderately skill'd in Hiſtory and Poetry. John Charlier ſirnam'd Gerſon.

In a Letter written to the ſame, he gives them Inſtructions, and exhorts them not to oppoſe the Re-eſtabliſhment of the French Preachers in the Univerſity of Paris, but to favour it.

Gerſon being conſulted by a Carthuſian, if he might quit his Convent, or forbear to repeat ſome part of his Office, that he might have more time to read and ſtudy, and about the Books which he ſhould read; anſwers this Regular in Eighteen Propoſitions, whereof the Twelve firſt tend to ſhew that the Deſign of this Regular is dangerous and irregular, and the Six laſt to inform him in the Studies he ſhould follow. Upon this occaſion he refers him to his Book about the Examination of Doctrins, adviſes him to read Spiritual Books, as moſt agreeable to his Profeſſion; among the reſt, the Works of St. Bernard, the Morals of St. Gregory, the Spiritual Works of Richard, and Hugo of St. Victor, and of Bonaventure.

In another Tract he notes the Books which muſt be read with Precaution; among which are the Works of the Abbot Joachim, of 'Ubertin of Caſal, of Raimund Lully, and among the Ancients the Ladder of John Climacus.

In another Treatiſe he gives the Signs for diſcerning between true and falſe Viſions; the Firſt is Humility; the Second, Submiſſion; the Third, Patience; the Fourth, the Truth of all the Predictions and Things which are ſaid to be reveal'd; and the Fifth, Charity.

The Trilogue of Aſtrology Theologiz'd, is a Dogmatical Work, wherein he treats of the Heaven, the Stars, their Influences, of the Angels; and eſtabliſhes Principles for confuting Judicial Aſtrology.

In the next Treatiſe he oppoſes the ſuperſtitious Opinions of thoſe who believ'd certain Days to be happy or unhappy; and in two other Treatiſes, the Superſtition of two Phyſicians of Montpelier; whereof one made uſe of a Medal, whereon was engraven the Figure of a Lyon, for curing Diſeaſes; and the other would not make uſe of his Remedies but on certain days.

In a fourth Treatiſe about this Matter, he confutes the Errors of the Magical Art by very ſolid Principles; and proves that this Art is equally falſe and criminal. He relates at the end of this Treatiſe, a Cenſure of the Theological Faculty at Paris, made the 19th of September, 1398. againſt 27 Propoſitions which tend to juſtifie the Practice of Magick.

A Regular of the Order of Friars Preachers, nam'd Matthew Grabon, of the Convent of Weimar, in the Dioceſe of Mersbourg in Saxony, having aſſerted ſome Propoſitions, which advanc'd the State of the Regulars ſo far above that of the Seculars, that he affirm'd there could be no Perfection out of the Religious Orders; and that the Evangelical Counſels, and the Vertue of Poverty could not be practis'd in the World: This Doctrin was condemn'd by the Cardinal of Cambray, about which Gerſon relates his own Opinion, and founds it upon ſix Propoſitions: Firſt, That the Chriſtian Religion can only be properly call'd a Religion: Secondly, That it does not oblige Men to the Obſervation of the Evangelical Counſels: Thirdly, That it may be perfectly obſerv'd without a Vow, which obliges to the practice of theſe Counſels: Fourthly, That particular Rules are not neceſſary for the more perfect Obſervation of the Chriſtian Religion: Fifthly, That 'tis an improper Speech to ſay, That Religious Orders inſtituted by Men, are a State of Perfection: Sixthly, That the Pope, Cardinals and Prelats, ought to obſerve the Chriſtian Religion more perfectly than the Regulars. From theſe Principles he draws Concluſions contrary to the Propoſitions of Friar Matthew Grabon. This Affair being examin'd in the time of the Council of Conſtance, this Regular was forc'd to Retract; and his Retractation follows afterwards in the Treatiſe of Gerſon againſt theſe Errors.

The next Treatiſe is againſt the Sect of Whippers, and the publick Whippings. He obſerves at firſt, that the Law of Jeſus Chriſt ought not to be burden'd with ſervile Works, nor mingled with Superſtitions; that its Vertue proceeded from Mercy and the Grace which is produc'd by the Sacraments; from whence he concludes, that the Whippers who maintain, that Whipping is of more Vertue for Remiſſion of Sin, than Confeſſion, and who equal it to Martyrdom, are in an Error: He ſays, 'tis to be fear'd leſt this Effuſion of the Blood of Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and in holy Places, ſhould make the former fall into Excommunication or ſome Irregularity, and profane the latter; that when it is forbidden to impoſe publick Penance upon Clergy-men, it is much leſs lawful to chaſtiſe them publickly with Whippings, which are contrary to Modeſty and Decency; that to make theſe Whippings lawful, they ſhould be impos'd as a Penance by ſome Superiour; that 'tis convenient they ſhould be us'd by the hand of another ther with Moderation, without Scandal, without Oſtentation and Effuſion of Blood, as it is practis'd in ſome approv'd Convents, and by devout Perſons; that publick Whippings are a dangerous Novelty condemn'd by the Church, and are the cauſe of infinite Miſchiefs, as the contempt of Prieſts and Sacraments, the Idleneſs, the Robbery, the Lewdneſs, &c. From whence he concludes, That a ſtop muſt be put to this Practice leſt it ſhould revive and prevail, by oppoſing it with Preaching, with Laws, and by Chaſtiſing the Diſobedient; and beſides, as it is not lawful to cut off any Member unleſs it is for the Health of the Body, ſo neither does it ſeem to be lawful to draw Blood out of the Body by Violence, unleſs it be by the way of Medicine. After this Treatiſe, follows a Letter addreſs'd to St. Vincent Ferrier of the Order of Friars Predicants, which does not ſo vigorouſly oppoſe this Uſage, but rather recommends the Care of it to him; and deſires him to come to Conſtance, there to procure the Condemnation of this Sect of Whippers. Theſe things were written in the Year 1417.

The next Treatiſe, againſt the Proprietors, who make Profeſſion of the Rule of St. Auſtin, is falſely attributed to Gerſon. This is the laſt Piece of the firſt part of his Works.

The ſecond part conſiſts of Moral Writings: The firſt is entitled, Moral Rules, and is a Collection of many Axioms and Maxims upon different Subjects, which appear not to have Gerſon's Style, as neither has the next Treatiſe, which is an Abridgment of Speculative and Moral Theology.

The Tripartite Work, wherein he treats of the Precepts of the Decalogue, of Confeſſion, and the Art of dying well, was found ſo uſeful, that the Biſhops of France made choice of it in their Synods, to ſerve for an Inſtruction to Prieſts, and to the Faithful of their Dioceſſes; recommended it to the Curates to be read in their Exhortation, and inſerted into the Rituals. The firſt part contains an eaſie Expoſition of the Articles of Faith, and a very uſeful Explication of the Precepts of the Decalogue; the ſecond, the different Sins of which one may accuſe himſelf in Confeſſion; and the third, Exhortations and Prayers to aſſiſt a Man at the time of Death. Theſe things are handled in this Piece, after a plain, but ſolid and inſtructive manner.

The Treatiſe of the Difference between Venial and Mortal Sins, was written in French by Gerſon, and tranſlated into Latin by ſome Perſon at the ſame time. To diſtinguiſh between theſe two Sins, he lays down as a Principle, That among the Commands of God, there are ſome which we are oblig'd to practiſe, under pain of forfeiting his Grace, and incurring eternal Damnation, viz. thoſe which bind us to the Obedience we owe to God, and thoſe which maintain Society among Men, as the Commands of loving God, of not Killing, not Stealing, &c. There are other Commands which have only a temporal Penalty annex'd to them; to violate the former is a mortal Sin, and to tranſgreſs, the latter is only a venial Sin. But a Command may be violated either upon mature Deliberation, with certain Knowledge and an expreſs Conſent, or through Ignorance from a firſt Motion, and without a formal Conſent; and in this Caſe they do not always Sin mortally by tranſgreſſing one of the former Commands, becauſe it is the Conſent that makes the Sin: And thus theſe Sins which are call'd Mortal, are not always ſo. Vain-glory of it ſelf is only a Venial Sin; but it becomes a Mortal Sin, upon the account of the end, or the Action wherein the Vain-glory is ſought for. He diſtinguiſhes the Caſes wherein it is a Mortal Sin, and wherein it is not. He runs over alſo the other Capital Sins, and examines what Circumſtances render them Mortal or Venial. He ſhews alſo on what occaſion Ignorance or Sincerity excuſes from Sin. He gives many Inſtructions about Confeſſion, and the Sins which are committed in the way of Traffick, about the Obligation to take off the Excommunication which is incurr'd, and having no Commerce with thoſe who are excommunicated. Laſtly, he proves that we ſhould avoid all kind of Sins, and explains by a Compariſon which are Mortal, and which Venial.

The following Treatiſes are concerning the Sacrament of Penance. In the firſt, entitled, Of the Art of hearing Confeſſion, he gives divers Rules to Confeſſors concerning their Office. In the ſecond, he teaches them after what manner they ought to behave themſelves, to make their Penitents confeſs the Sin of Debauchery. In the third, he teaches them divers Remedies which they may apply to hinder a Relapſe. In the fourth, he reprimands a Cuſtom of the Order of the Carthuſians, whereby the Confeſſors of that Order did not grant Abſolution, but only for Venial Sins; and as to Mortal Sins, referr'd them to their Superiours. In the fifth, he treats of the different kinds of Excommunication, and of Irregularities, and of the manner of granting Abſolution. In the ſixth, he treats of the form of Sacramental Abſolution, of the other Abſolution, of Excommunication, of Indulgencies and their Effect. In the next Piece he enquires whether a dead Man may be abſolv'd. In the eighth and ninth, he ſpeaks of reſerv'd Caſes. In the tenth, he explains wherein conſiſts the Power of binding and looſing. In the following Treatiſes he decides divers Caſes about Irregularities and Abſolutions. Laſtly, he treats of Indulgencies in two particular Tracts, wherein he has very uſeful Diſcourſes about Indulgencies and their Effects. After all he concludes, that a Man ought not to be Prodigal of them, leſt they ſhould become contemptible; that he ought to give them only for the publick Good, and that he ought to take heed leſt he appear to grant them out of Intereſt.

In another Treatiſe he reſolves four Queſtions, viz. Firſt, If it be always a Sin to ſpeak Evil of another in his Abſence; Secondly, If he that has made a feign'd Confeſſion be oblig'd to confeſs all his Sins anew; Thirdly, Whether the Perſon Confeſſing being ſuſpected of not examining Comments.

For we ought to consider the end which he has who speaks Evil of his Neighbour; which may be, First, The Instruction or Information of those to whom he speaks Evil, or that they may not be deceived by those of whom he speaks Evil: Secondly, The profit of those who are absent, that those to whom it is spoken, may provide for them: Thirdly, Certainty, as an effect of reason: Fourthly, Charity. One may speak Evil of his Neighbour without Sin, nay, and deserve well, as when he does it for a just cause. Marriages; the third is seldom free from Sin, and some-times is Meritorious, the last is always a Sin. For resolving the second he distinguishes four sorts of Confessors; The first, which is made by a pernicious Eye; the second, by Ignorance or Confession; The first, because he has not a true Resolution to forsake his Sin; the third, because he has not duly examin'd himself. The first of these Fathers renders the Confessor Inexcusable, the second also, if it be done with a design of Fraud, and he deceive the Confessor; but if he does it out of Ignorance, which the Penitent endeavours he ought not to be denied Absolution for certain good Reasons. The third renders also the Confession Invalid, does not always render the Confession void. As to the third Question, he says, that if the Confessor be not a Governor, he may delay the Confession, or refer the Penitent to another Confessor; but if he be a Curate, and he oblig'd to grant him Absolution, and the Penitent will not answer his Questions, he ought to grant it him with a tacit Condition, That he answer him if he commands any Sin; but if the Penitens be willing to be examin'd and to answer to the Questions, he ought so to do in with Prudence. Lastly, as to the fourth he answers, that he must follow the Customs of the place.

Then he resolves other Questions in the next Tenth, whereof the principal are these. First, Whether one does Sin mortally with respect to the Vow of Obedience? To which he answers, Not, because it is not credible, That those who command others, would oblige them under the pain of Mortal Sin; and so at least when there is no formal Consent of the Confessor there is no Sin. Secondly, If any can be certain that God has remitted his Sins at least as to the Guilt, and if he cannot, how long time he ought to bewail his Sin? He answers, That no body can be certain of this, but that we are to believe that he who confesses his Sins, and is truly resolv'd to Sin no more, is in a State of Grace; and that when he has completed the Penance imposed upon him, he ought no more to reflect upon his past Sins, but go on to practise Vertue, except when he is tempted with Pride. Thirdly, Whether a Priest who has finished his Mass, can celebrate it for all the People? And if he do celebrate it for the People, whether the Sacrifice is more for all the People, than for those to whom he is specially oblig'd? He answers, That the Priest ought not to trouble himself about these things, but to go to God to make Application of the Sacrifice, as if he should say, Lord, here you have a Sacrifice, which is very much acceptable to you, and as much desired by me, be willing, O Lord, to grant it to whom you please. Besides, That Mass ought not to be celebrated but when we pray for all those that are in the Communion of the Church; and if any would restrain the Efficacy of it to some Persons, this ought to be done without prejudice to the whole Church; and lastly, That although it were better to make a General Prayer to God, than to restrain your self to particular Persons, it is not convenient during Mass to think particularly of this or that Man, because it may be the cause of Distraction; That we ought to think of them before Mass, and that it is sufficient when we say it, to recommend in General those for whom we ought to pray, but if we be oblig'd to pray for one that is Dead. After this, he resolves divers other Cases among which are, what may happen during the Celebration of the Mass; and then proceeds to the Sacrament of Penance, as to which he answers many Questions, about the Power of an Abbot in Confessions, about the secrecy of Confession, that he would not have it exercis'd in any Case, or for any Reason, about Imposing of Penance, the Circumstances of the Sins wherein he is accused, and Absolution into a Convent, &c. After this Treatise here follow two small Tracts, one about Venial and Mortal Sin, and the other about the Rebuke of our Neighbour.

The Treatise of the manner of conducting Children by Jesus Christ, contains several Precepts very useful for their Education.

The Treatise about Contracts contains certain Rules for judging of the Justice and Injustice of Contracts, founded upon the Principles of Nature and Reason; where he treats also of difficult Questions, about different kinds of Contracts.

The Treatise of Simony is about another Matter which is yet more nice, where he handles divers Cases about Simony, and the means which a Council ought to use for the Extirpation of it. There he condemns the Annates of Simony, because it is an Exaction which the Pope exacts for granting the Provisions of a Benefice; and tho' he believes that the Money may be demanded from absolute Simony, which is given or receiv'd for things which have a certain Price, as the Dispatches of Letters, Men's Care and Pains; yet he does not approve that any thing should be given or exacted upon this Pretence: Nevertheless he does not condemn the Custom of giving or receiving something from those to whom the Sacraments are Administred; provided it be not the Principal Motive of Administring them, and that it be done without Scandal, and without appearance of Covetousness.

John Charlier surnam'd Gerson.

In the next Treatise, Entitled, Of the Cure of Ecclesiastics, he addresses it to the Cardinals, he resolves fifteen Questions about the Institution of Prayer and Divine Service, the Application of Masses to those who give a Recompence to the Priest, the Intention we ought to have in Prayer for Founders or Benefactors.

The next pieces are Tracts of Piety, viz. Twelve Considerations on make a Christian Sacrament, a Letter about disposing of the Books after his Death, another Letter to the Carthusians to desire their Prayers, the Establishment of an Anniversary in the Church of St. Paul at Lyons, framed by Gerson by the Archbishop, the daily Tenour of a Pilgrim in Prose and Verse; a Letter of Consolation in Verse to his Brother John a Monk of St. Denis at Rheims, upon the Death of Nicholas one of their Brothers who was a Canon, and a Treatise of Preparation for the Mass.

The Works which follow are concerning Discipline; A Treatise of Celibacy, and the Chastity of Ecclesiasticks; An Apology of the Order of Carmelites against those who attack'd it; A Letter to justifie that Order, as to what was objected, That there are never permitted to eat Victuals; Many Decisions of a Case propos'd about a Married Soldier in Dean who was made a Carthusian; A Treatise of the Moderation that Ecclesiasticks ought to observe in their Table and Habit; A Sermon about the Life and Behaviour of Clergy-men; Many Sermons Preach'd on Holy-Thursday, viz. A Sermon of Humility, A Sermon of Penance, A Sermon of Evangelical Dominion, A Sermon against the Covetousness of Clergy-men; A Sermon about the Resurrection Preach'd on Easter-Day, A Discourse of the Office of Pastors spoken in the Council of Rheims, in the Year 1408. A Treatise of the Visitation of Prelates, and the Care they ought to take of their Curates, A Sermon upon the Dedication of a Church, Many Sermons upon the Feast of All-Saints, A Sermon for the Day of Our Lord's Nativity, Two Sermons Preach'd on the Day of Septuagesima; Panegyricks of St. Bernard and St. Louis, A Sermon upon Prayer Preach'd to the Council of Constance, A Sermon of the Holy Spirit, A Treatise upon the Words of Our Lord, Come unto me all ye that are in Pain and affliction, A piece containing the Reasons why he would quit the Dignity of Chancellor, A Discourse to the Licentiates of Law, A Treatise of Humility, and an Instruction for Princes.

There are also in this part three Books which are not Gerson's, viz. A Treatise of the Conception of the Virgin Mary, A Dialogue between an English-man and a French-man, and some Reflections upon the Victory at Pucelle in Orleans.

The third Part of the Works of Gerson begins with a Book, which is Entitled, The Imitation of Boethius, Concerning the Consolation of Divinity, which he compos'd during his Exile in Germany, partly in Verse, partly in Prose, by way of Dialogue; wherein he collects many Principles of Christian Philosophy, to serve him for Meditation and Consolation.

The second is an Apology, or rather Complaint by way of Dialogue, That the Doctrin of John Petit, who affirm'd it to be lawful to kill Tyrants, was not condemn'd in the Council.

After these Treatises there follow some Poetical Pieces, and among the rest a Poem of the Life of St. Joseph, after which there is a Discourse of the Nativity of the Virgin.

The Centilogium of Idea's is a Work purely Philosophical. The Treatise of the Spiritual Life of the Soul, is not so much Mystical, but rather a Work of Morality and Discipline; wherein he handles many important Questions, about the nature and distinction of Mortal and Venial Sin, the different kinds of Laws and their Obligation. There he maintains, That Laws purely Human, and which have no foundation in the Divine Law, cannot oblige under pain of Sin, unless in case of Scandal or Contempt.

In the next Work he treats of the different kinds of Impressions which Men receive either from God, or Angels, or Evil Spirits.

In the Treatise of Mystical Theology, he handles this Science Methodically, and by way of Principles, and afterwards gives Rules as to what concerns the Practice: To these are joyn'd some Explications upon the same Subject. In this Treatise he avoids the Excesses of Mystical Divines, and advances nothing but what is rational; and there he lays down very useful Maxims to hinder Men from falling into these Follies and Errors, into which the Mystical Authors are many times led by an indiscreet Devotion.

In the next Treatise addressed to William Minaud, formerly Physician to the Cardinal of Saluces, and then a Carthusian, he resolves divers Questions which he had put to him, as to the manner, in which the Prior of the Carthusians ought to behave himself upon different occasions towards his Regulars.

In the Treatise, Entitled, A Theological Question, viz. Whether the Light which shines in the Morning before the Sun? He treats of the Practice of Evangelical Counsels, and the Perfection of their State who take upon them a Vow to Practise them; and shews, That the State of Prelats and Curates is more perfect than that of Monks and Regulars. The same Question he handles in the Treatise of the perfection of the Heart which is written by way of Dialogue.

The following Treatises are Works of Piety, whose Titles discover their Subject: viz. A Treatise of Meditation, A Treatise of Purification, or Simplicity of Heart, A Treatise of Uprightness of Heart, A Treatise of the Illumination of the Heart, A Treatise of the Eye, A Treatise of the Remedies against Pusillanimity, Scruples, false Consolations, and Temptations, written written in French, and translated into Latin; A Treatise of divers Temptations of the Devil, translated also out of French, An Instruction concerning the Spiritual Exercises of simple Devotionists, A Treatise about the Communion, A Piece against a Regular Professed, who was Disobedient, and another about the Zeal of a Novice, Eight Spiritual Letters, A Treatise of the Passions of the Soul, Two Spiritual Poems, A Treatise of Contemplation which was also translated out of French, A Conference of a Contemplative Man with his own Soul, whereof the second Part contains several Prayers and Meditations, A Letter to his Sisters, about the Thoughts we ought to entertain every Day, An Act of Appeal from the Justice of God to his Mercy, A Treatise of Prayer and its Effects, An Explication of these Words in the Lord's Prayer, Pardon our Sins, &c. A Prayer of a Sinner unto God, Many Treatises upon Scripture-Songs, particularly upon the Magnificat and the Canticles, A Treatise of the Elevation of the Soul to God, or the Alphabet of Divine Love, A Treatise upon the seven Penitential Psalms, Donatus Moralis'd, that's to say, Moral Questions in the form of Donatus's Grammar, A Poem of a Solitary Life. These are the Books contain'd in the second Part of Gerson's Works, at the end of which are two Epitaphs of the Author, and a Letter from his Brother John the Celestine, about Gerson's Works; after which follows a Catalogue which contains a Great Part of the Works whereof we have spoken. John Charlier Gerson's Brother.

The fourth Part contains many Sermons, some Letters and divers Treatises. The first Sermon is a Discourse about the Angels, rather Dogmatical than Moral; after which follows a Conference about the Angels, A Sermon about Circumcision, and the Panegyricks of St. Louis and St. Nicholas, Two Discourses for the Licentiates in Law, A Sermon upon the Supper of Our Lord, A little Tract wherein he advises to read the Ancients rather than the Moderns, Three Letters about Spiritual and Contemplative Writers to Peter of Ailly, Bishop of Cambray, A Supplement to a Sermon which begins with these Words, A Deo exivi, A Memorial about the Duty of Prelates during the Subtraction, Two pieces containing divers Proposals for the Extirpation of Schism, A Tree of Right and Laws, and the Ecclesiastical Power, containing their Divisions, A second Panegyrick of St. Louis, and a Letter to John Morel, Canon of St. Remigius of Rheims, about the Life of a Holy Woman which he thought not convenient to publish.

The Treatises which follow are more considerable; the First contains a Definition of all the Terms of Speculative and Moral Divinity, and also of the Vertues, Vices and Passions; the Second is an Addition to the Treatise of Schism; the Third is a Letter address'd to the Abbot of St. Denis, to perswade him to suppress a Placard injurious to the Parisians, wherein he accuses them of an Error and a Fault about the Relicks of St. Denis; the Fourth contains some Proposals about the Extirpation of Schism; the Fifth, two Lectures against Curiosity and Novelty in Matters of Doctrin; the Sixth, a Treatise against Horoscopes and Judicial Astrology; the Seventh, a Sermon for Holy-Thursday; the Eighth, another Sermon upon the Feast of St. Louis; the Ninth, two Letters about the Celebration of the Feast of St. Joseph; the Tenth, a Treatise of the Marriage of St. Joseph and the Virgin, with the Office of the Mass for that Day; the Eleventh, divers Conclusions about the Power of Bishops in Matters of Faith; the Twelfth, a Treatise of the Illumination of the Heart; the Thirteenth, a Resolution of a Case, viz. whether it be lawful for the Regulars of St. Benedict to eat Victuals in the House where they use to do it; to which he answers affirmatively; the Fourteenth, a Tract against the Superstition of those who affirm, That such as will hear Mass on a certain Day, shall not die a sudden Death. The Fifteenth, Instructions to John, Major Preceptor to Louis XI. Dauphin, about his Duty; the Sixteenth, a Sermon preach'd at Lyons in 1412. about the Duty of Pastors; the Seventeenth, a Treatise to justifie what he had written of Lascivious Pictures, against the Writing of one who would justifie this Custom; the Eighteenth, a Treatise of Good and Evil Signs to discern where a Man is Just or Unjust; the Nineteenth, an Imperfect Sermon about the Nativity of the Virgin; the Twentieth, of Principles against a certain Monk who preferr'd the Prayers of a devout Woman and Lay-men before those of Ecclesiasticks who are Sinners; the Twenty first, a Sermon Preach'd the Day after Pentecost; the Twenty second, a Rule for a Hermit of Mount Valerian; the Twenty third, an Opposition made to the Subtraction of Obedience from Benedict XIII; the Twenty fourth, a Letter written from Bavaria in the Year 1400. about the Calamities of the Church; the Twenty fifth, the Articles for the Reformation of the University; the Twenty sixth, the Consilegium of the final cause of the Works of God; the Twenty seventh, a Treatise of Metaphysicks and Logicks.

After these Treatises follow many Sermons preach'd in French by Gerson, and translated into Latin by John Drisconique, after which there are printed also some other Tracts, viz. a Treatise of Consolation upon the death of his Kindred; A Discourse spoken in the Louvre, in the presence of King Charles VI. the Dauphin, and the Court, containing many Instructions for a Prince, to which are join'd Ten Considerations against Flatterers; Another Discourse spoken also before the same King, in the Year 1408. about the Peace of the State and the Church; A third Discourse about Justice; A Sermon upon the Passion, preach'd in the Church of Notre Dame in Paris; A Treatise against the Romance of the Rose; Some Conclusions against the Sport of Fools, that's to say, against the Custom which was introduc'd of going disguis'd into the Churches on certain days; An Admonition to the Duke of Berry, to cause the Feast of St. Joseph to be celebrated; Some devout Meditations upon the Ascension

Root of all Vices, he ſays, that the Contempt of the Riches and Goods of this World, which the Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt expreſs'd in the Primitive Church, brought upon them the Bleſſing of Heaven, the liberal Gifts of Princes, and the Riches of this Life; that it was by this means only that the Church became Powerful, that Monaſteries, Chapters, Cathedral and Parochial Churches were founded and eſtabliſh'd; the Eccleſiaſticks, who had obtain'd theſe Goods by their Vertues, did not employ them to profane Uſes, but for Alms and Exerciſes of Charity; they had no other Treaſure but that of their good Works; no Veſſels of Gold or Silver, nor any Equipage, and then they enjoy'd all kind of Proſperity: That than Charity, Innocence, Faith, Piety, Juſtice, and ſincere Friendſhip reign'd upon the Earth, and that Fraud and Calumny were baniſh'd out of it, becauſe the Paſtors inſtructed their People in theſe Vertues by their ſound Doctrin, and their holy Life; but that Abundance having produc'd Luxury and Pride, Religion grew cold by degrees, and Avarice took Poſſeſſion of the minds of Men, and extinguiſh'd Charity in them; that after this, the Salvation and Edification of the Faithful was not deſign'd in the Eccleſiaſtical Offices of Divine Service, but only the great Revenue of Benefices; that the greateſt part of benefic'd Men, thought only of Raviſhing the Profit without putting themſelves to the trouble of diſcharging the Office. Afterwards he enters upon the particular Abuſes which Luſt has introduc'd among the Eccleſiaſticks, and begins with thoſe which the Paſſion of domineering and enriching themſelves, has introduc'd into the Court of Rome: Such as are the Collations of all Benefices, which the Popes have engroſs'd in their own Hands to the prejudice of Elections; the Sums which the Apoſtolick Chamber hath exacted for theſe Collations; the Promiſes of vacant Benefices which they have granted to unworthy Men, who have rendred the Prieſt-hood contemptible; the Rights of Vacancy, the Tenths, and the other Taxes of Pence which have been exacted with an unparallel'd Rigor; an infinite number of Proceſſes which the Court of Rome hath given Birth to, and maintain'd by its Tricks; the Pride and Pomp of Cardinals, who being formerly imploy'd for burying of the dead, are now ſo highly advanc'd that they deſpiſe not only the Biſhops, whom they call in deriſion Little Biſhops, but even the Archbiſhops, the Primats and Patriarchs; who heap together an infinite number of incompatible Benefices, uniting in their own Perſons the Titles of Monks and Canons, Regular and Secular, and poſſeſſing Benefices of all ſorts of Order and Nature, not only to the Number of two or three, but even to twenty, nay a hundred or more of the moſt conſiderable and richeſt Benefices; while a great number of poor Eccleſiaſticks have not whereupon to live, and are forc'd ſometimes to purchaſe Benefices of them. He accuſes them of being the Authors and Cauſes of Schiſm, of ſelling their Votes, of making Creatures and Dependents by the Benefices which they give. After this he proceeds to other Prelats, and reprehends the Ignorance and Avarice of ſome, the abſence of others from their Benefices, and the neglect of diſcharging their Duties; the Diſorders of ſome Canons, the Exceſſes of ſome Monks, and the Pride of ſome Religious Mendicants. He deſcribes in Words very ſharp, and apparently paſſionate, the Diſorders which were in ſome Monaſteries of the Regulars. Laſtly, having compar'd together the Manners of the Chriſtians of his time, and thoſe of the Primitive Church, for fear leſt what he had ſaid ſhould be abus'd; he adds this Caution, That his Intention was not to comprehend all Eccleſiaſticks without Exception, as being guilty of the Diſorders which he had ſpoke of; That he knew that Jeſus Chriſt who cannot lie, had ſaid, Peter, I pray for thee, that thy Faith fail not; That he was perſuaded there was in each State many juſt and innocent Perſons, who have no hand in the Diſorders of which he had complain'd, although he believ'd that the Number of wicked Men was far greater. After this, he aggravates the Diſorders of the Pope's Court at Avignon, and the miſerable Conſequences of the Schiſm; and ſays, That we muſt have recourſe to God, and pray him to reunite his Church, and heal the Breaches which were among its Members: He concludes all with a Prayer directed to Jeſus Chriſt for this purpoſe. After this Work follows a poetical Piece in Hexameter Verſe; wherein he bewails the Schiſm of the Church, and exhorts Pope Benedict XIII. to extinguiſh it.

Nicholas Clemangis a Doctor of Paris.

The Treatiſe of the Falling and Reſtauration of Juſtice, addreſs'd to Philip Duke of Burgundy, is a Work rather Political than Theological, wherein he ſhews that without Juſtice a State cannot be maintain'd; he deteſts the Civil Wars, the Contempt of Juſtice and Religion, and the other Diſorders which reign'd then in France, and enquires after Means to remedy them.

The third Dogmatical Treatiſe of Clemangis, is about the Infallibility of a General Council. This he wrote when the Council of Conſtance was ſitting, and the Univerſity of Paris did vigorouſly maintain the Infallibility of General Councils. Clemangis wrote then two Pieces by way of Conferences with a Scholaſtical Divine of Paris; wherein he propoſes the Difficulties and Doubts which there are about this Queſtion, and the Reaſons which are brought to prove this Infallibility: He ſays himſelf at the end of this Work, That he has no deſign to affirm any thing, but only to propoſe his Doubts and Difficulties, that the Matter may be clear'd up; and that he is ready to retract or amend what he has written upon this Subject, if it ſhall be found contrary to Truth, or be the cauſe of Scandal. This Temper may ſerve to excuſe what he has written ſo boldly in this Treatiſe againſt the Infallibility of General Councils, though he does not oppoſe the Infallibility of Councils in Matters of Faith, which he acknowleges but only in Queſtions of Fact about Morality or Diſcipline.

To

Nicholas Clemangis a Doctor of Paris.

To theſe three Treatiſes muſt be join'd his Book about Theological Studies, publiſh'd by Father Dom Luc Dachery, in the Seventh Tome of his Spicilegium. It is addreſs'd to John of Piemont, Bachelor of Divinity, who had conſulted him whether he ſhould Commenſe Doctor. He anſwers him in this Book, That we muſt diſtinguiſh between him who is truly a Doctor, and him who has only the external Marks of that Degree; that undoubtedly he would do well to be a Doctor in the firſt Senſe, that's to ſay, to be capable of Teaching, and doing the Office of one by his Diſcourſes, and by his Life; but if he enquir'd whether he ought to take upon him the exteriour Marks of one, i. e. the Degree and Cap of a Doctor, he muſt conſult himſelf, and reflect upon his own Mind and Deſign, becauſe it was a thing which might be well us'd or abus'd; yet he muſt examine what Motives mov'd him to aſſume this Degree, and ſearch the ſecret Corners of his Heart, that he might diſcover the Springs of this Action: From thence he takes occaſion to explain to him what ought to be the Object and End of a Divine's Studies; he blames thoſe who ſtudy this Science out of Intereſt or Vanity, and think of nothing but to enrich themſelves by this Means: He would have a Divine who is a Preacher, to be in Truth the ſame thing which he ſays; to live according to God, and give an Example of that Life which he Preaches; that his Sermons ſhould be the Effect of the Charity of the Holy Spirit ſpread abroad in his Heart; that he ſhould read continually the Scriptures, and the Books of the Holy Fathers: He complains of the Divines of his own time, that they read the Holy Scriptures negligently, and imploy their Wit and Time in barren Subtilties: He ſays that the Ancient Fathers aſſerted nothing which they did not ground upon the Holy Scriptures; whereas the greateſt part of the School-men valu'd them ſo little, that they laugh'd at theſe Diſcourſes which are founded upon Authorities; which render'd them ſo lazy, and ſo unfit for Preaching and Inſtruction, which ought to be the end of a Divine's Studies: " For, ſays he, " he ought not only to ſtudy to underſtand Divinity, which would be a vain Curioſity; nor to " purchaſe the Favour and Applauſe of the People, which would be Vain-glory; nor to ac- " quire Reputation, which would be a barren Commendation; nor to gain Revenues " and Riches, which would be Covetouſneſs; nor to be advanc'd to Honours and Dignities, " which would be Ambition; nor to be honoured with the Title of Maſter, which would be " Vanity; nor to meditate in Peace and at Leiſure, which would conſopite his Mind and make " it more remiſs; but he ought to ſtudy to improve that Talent of Doctrin which God has " entruſted with him, by uſing it faithfully, and conducting as many as he can to Life eter- " nal; and herein conſiſts true Charity. He admoniſhes Divines therefore to take good heed, " that they do not aſpire to the Title of Doctor by a blind Ambition; as may be ſeen in ma- " ny, ſays he, at this day, who will have high Titles, not that they may Teach, but that they " may gain Riches, even to exceſs: They make their Court to Prelats, and obtain Benefices by " their Importunity; of which they are ſo Covetous, that there is nothing which they will not " do to obtain them; I dare not ſay after what manner they uſe them, after they have got " into Poſſeſſion. " Certainly it had been much better for this People never to have aſpir'd to the Title of Doctor, than thus to be thrown down by their Ambition into ſo many Pains and Diſorders. After this he enquires which is the moſt excellent Employment and moſt conducing to Salvation, to Preach to the People; or after they have taken a Doctor's Degree, to ſtay in the Univerſity, and read Lectures there. He confeſſes there is one whom the School calls a Solemn Doctor, who prefers the latter; but he is not of his Opinion, but eſteems the former much more Excellent and more Uſeful. Above all, he blames thoſe negligent Paſtors who excuſe the little Care they take of their Flocks with a pretence of Study, and thoſe benefic'd Men who cloak the Plurality of their Benefices with the ſame Pretence: Nevertheleſs, he confeſſes, that the Office of Profeſſors is neceſſary; but he ſays, it belongs to thoſe who are not call'd to other Employments to diſcharge that Office; and he does by no means approve that thoſe who are call'd to the Care of Souls, ſhould neglect it for Studying or Teaching Divinity.

Of the five other Treatiſes of Clemangis, printed among his Works, there are three of Morality, viz. the Diſcourſe of the Parable of the Prodigal; wherein he diſcovers the bad Uſe which Men make of the Benefits of God; the Treatiſe of the Advantage of Solitude, and that of the Improvement of Adverſity, wherein theſe things are handled with as much Eloquence and Politeneſs, as Beauty and Strength: The two other are concerning two important Points of Diſcipline; the former to ſhew, that 'tis not convenient to appoint new Feſtivals; and the ſecond, againſt the Simony of Prelats.

In the former, he undertakes to prove, That it was not convenient in his time to appoint new Feſtivals in the Church, chiefly without neceſſity, becauſe they are become ſo numerous already, that it were more expedient to retrench ſome of them than to add to them; and ſo much the rather, becauſe things that are rare, are more eſteem'd, whereas thoſe that are common become contemptible. " It remains only to be conſider'd, ſays he, with how little Devotion Chri- " ſtian People do celebrate theſe Feſtivals: Few come to Church on theſe days; many hear " not Maſs at all, others hear but a part of it, and go away before the Prieſt ſays, Ite, miſſa " eſt: Some ſatisfie themſelves with entring into the Church, and taking there a little conſe- " crated Water, or falling down on their Knees for a moment, ſaluting the Image of the Vir- " gin, or of any Saint, or adoring the Body of Jeſus Chriſt during the Elevation. As to the " Office of Mattins or Veſpers, few Perſons are preſent at it, and often times the Preaſt re-

" peats

" peats alone with an Under-Clerk; ſcarce one can be found ſometimes to anſwer at the Maſs. Nicholas Cle-
" Some go to their Houſes in the Country, others go about their Affairs, the greateſt part go to mangis a " Fairs, which they ſeldom do, but on theſe days; many take the diverſion of a Comedy, or a Doctor of Pa-
" Play: The Rich make Feaſts on theſe Days with great Pomp and Magnificence, but take no ris.
" care to purge their Conſciences. The meaner ſort of People profane the Holineſs of theſe " Days by going to the Alehouſe, where they Swear, Blaſpheme, Quarrel, and Beat one ano" ther, and ſpend Night and Day in Riot and Luxury. The younger ſort of People come to " Church on theſe Days only to ſee the Women, who are better Dreſs'd on theſe Days than others.
" In fine, an infinite number of Crimes are committed on theſe Days. Thoſe are ſeverely pu-
" niſh'd who labour in the Vineyard, or in digging the Ground on theſe Feſtival Days; and yet " they are not puniſh'd at all, who violate the Holineſs of theſe Days by their Crimes; tho'
" St. Auſtin affirms, that it is leſs Criminal to Till the Ground, than to Dance on a Feſtival
" Day. Clemangis concludes from all this, that theſe Diſorders are almoſt inevitable; that it was expedient to retrench the Feſtivals which are not neceſſary, rather than to add to them, as the Church has aboliſh'd the Vigils which were formerly us'd in Churches with much advantage to Piety, becauſe they became the occaſion of Debauchery, whereof there are ſtill remaining ſhameful Examples in ſome Churches. He explains afterwards the Reaſon of the Inſtitution of Feſtivals, and the manner in which they ſhould be Celebrated. " There comes no benefit to the " Saints, ſays he, from our Worſhip, nor from the Praiſes we give them; they did not themſelves
" rejoyce in the Glory they had upon Earth, which they deſpis'd, when they were Cloath'd with " this Mortal Fleſh; all the advantage of their Feſtivals is for us, if we Celebrate them as we " ought to do: They are appointed for our Salvation, to excite our Devotion, that being de-
" liver'd on theſe Days for a little time from the Cares of the World, and the Labour of the " Body, we may take pains for the good of the Soul.

" And becauſe it rarely happens but in our daily Labours, and the Care of our Domeſtick Af" fairs, we fall into ſome Sin, either thro' Infirmity, or Weakneſs, or by Negligence, therefore " the Lord's Day and other Feſtivals are appointed, that Men being freed from ſuch Cares on theſe
" Days, may deſcend into their own Breaſt, recollect themſelves, examine their own Conſcience, " reflect upon their Sins, and blot them out by their Contrition, waſh them with their Tears,
" drive them away by Prayer, ranſom them by Alms, and by praying to God for Pardon, thro'
" the Invocation of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Saints, and for Grace to forſake them for the time to
" to come; for he is not a true Penitent, nor worthy of Pardon, who has not a firm Reſolution " to forſake his Sins. Now to the end that the Heart may be quickned to this Devotion, the " Faithful muſt be aſſiſted on theſe Days with Holy Myſteries; they muſt hear Maſs, and the " Word of God, which is able to ſoften the hardeſt Hearts, if they hear it with attention; they
" muſt Meditate on the Actions and Vertues of the Saints, whoſe Feſtival is Celebrated, that they " may imitate their Example. 'Tis probable, that the Saints are more favourable to thoſe who " Pray to them, who Honour them on the Days of their Feſtivals, than at other times; and that
" Jeſus Chriſt has then a greater regard to their Interceſſion: But the Faithful muſt ſo prepare
" themſelves, that the Saints may Pray to Jeſus Chriſt for them, and that Jeſus Chriſt may hear " their Prayers. He declaims afterwards againſt the Profaneneſs of the greater part of Chriſtians in his time on theſe Days, and the Diſorders which they committed. But ſince it might be objected to him, that tho' many Perſons had abus'd the Feſtivals, yet there were many others who Celebrated them with Devotion, and ſpent theſe Days in Prayer, and Good-Works: That the Feſtivals being chiefly appointed for Perſons of Piety, it was not convenient to aboliſh them, but that even new ones might be added to them, to procure farther means of Edification, and ſo much the rather, becauſe the Adminiſtrations of the Church are chiefly deſign'd for the benefit of the Elect, which herein follow the foot-ſteps of its Head: He propoſes therefore this Objection, and before he anſwers it, he obſerves that there is a great deal of difference between the Commandments of God, and the Traditions of Men, as to what concerns their Obſervation, or Neglect; that the Commandments of God cannot be abrogated by any Human Inſtitution, upon any pretence of profit whatſoever, becauſe no Man has a Right to change the Law of God: But as to Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitutions, altho' they have been appointed for juſt and ſufficient Reaſons, they do not oblige ſo indiſpenſably, but they may often be chang'd, with reſpect to Times, Places, and Cuſtoms, by the Univerſal Church, or even by particular Churches. He alledges Images for an Example, which were thought to be forbidden in the Primitive Church, for fear leſt the Faithful, who were newly Converted from Paganiſm, ſhould believe that there was ſome Divinity in them, and which were afterwards allow'd, when the Faithful were confirm'd in the Faith, and this Inconvenience was no more to be fear'd. He adds, that about four years ago, Michael Biſhop of Antiſiodorum, a Prelate of great Vertue, and lately deceas'd, had taken away by his Synodical Decrees many Feſtivals which were wont to be Celebrated in his Dioceſs, upon the account of the Diſorders which were committed at them, and the neceſſities of the Common People, that this Retrenchment did not hinder Pious Perſons from Celebrating them with Devotion, and aſſiſting at the Office; that 'tis true, the Church ought to manage all things for the good of the Elect, but then it ought not to deſpair of any Man, nor to look upon any Chriſtian as a Reprobate while he lives upon Earth; that it ought to take care of the good, and the bad; that according to the Goſpel, we ſhould rather cut off our Hand, or our Foot, and pluck out our Eye, than give offence to the leaſt of our Brethren: How much more Reaſon is there then to take away a thing which gives Scandal both to Great and Small. He intimates also, that the Consideration of the Miseries to which the Common People in his time were reduc'd, was sufficient Reason for abolishing these Festivals, which depriv'd them of the means of gaining their livelyhood. Lastly, he blames the New Festivals, whose Rents they cannot enjoy, without Celebrating them in their Churches; an Abuse which had so subverted the Divine Service in the greatest part of the Churches, that the Office for the Day was scarce any more regarded, because these New Saints had Engross'd all the Days, and sometimes had even taken up the Days of the Festivals Consecrated to God; from whence it came to pass, that the Holy Scripture was no more read in the Office, but only the History of the Saints; and that there was a necessity of changing every day the Ancient Offices, and the Order of the Church. He complains that these Novelties were introduc'd into the greatest part of the Churches, and even into the Cathedrals, except that of Lyons, which he says did not receive these Novelties. Lastly, he Conjures those who had more Zeal than was necessary for the Institution of the New Festivals, to reflect upon these Reasons, and if they found them Just, to acquiesce in the Truth; if they found any thing in them worthy to be blam'd, to acquaint him wherein he was deceiv'd, and declares that he was ready to Correct what he had written, if it were against the Rule of the Church; and protests that he had not Compos'd this Book to contradict their Affection, which he believed to proceed from a good Intention, but to discover the Scandal and Mischief which arise from this multiplication of Festivals, for the instruction and satisfaction of those, who not considering them, procure these Novelties out of a good Zeal, but not according to Knowledge.

In the Treatise of Simoniacal Prelates, Address'd to Gerson, he declaims earnestly against the Custom of some Bishops in his time, who took and exacted Mony for Conferring of Orders, under pretence of dispatching the Letters, or otherwise. "Tell me, O Bishops, says he, who are "not asham'd to sell Doves in the Church of Jesus Christ, wherefore think ye that Ecclesiastical "Benefices were Appointed? Was it not for the performing of some Office? And what is the "Office for which ye were Ordain'd? Ye will not tell me that it was to Baptize, to Consecrate "the Eucharist, to hear Confessions, to give Absolutions, to Celebrate Marriages, since this is "common to you, with the Curates and Priests of your Dioceses. Neither will you say, that it "was to Preach; for altho' it belongs to you to discharge this Duty, yet ye do it very rarely, and "negligently, and commonly turn it over to others: What then is the Office which is not com-"mon to you with others? 'Tis chiefly to Conferr Orders in your Dioceses, this is the Principal "End for which ye were Ordain'd Bishops. How comes it to pass then that ye do not discharge "this Duty gratis, having so great Revenues of your Bishopricks for this very Reason? As to what "might be objected to him, that there were many Bishops of great Piety that us'd to do this; "and that it was Authoriz'd in some Places by an Ancient Custom. He answers, That no Cu-"stom nor Prescription ought to be alledg'd against the Law of God, the Holy Decrees of Coun-"cils, the Commands of the Holy Fathers, and against Decency, and Good Manners. He re-"futes also the excuse which some alledge, who would defend this Usage. We do not, say "they, sell the Orders, it is not for Orders that the Money is given, but for the Letters, the Seal, "and the Notary. These, says he, are Fictions, and not Truths; for it often happens, that "those who refuse to take the Letters to shun this Simony, have nevertheless been oblig'd to give "the Mony to be Ordain'd; what say I, to be Ordain'd? Their Names are not so much as set "down in the Catalogue of those who are to receive Orders, unless they pay what is demanded "of them: Whether this turn to the profit of the Bishop, or his Secretary, God is witness, and "the Secretary may be also. But suppose that this turn to the profit of the Secretary, is it just "that the Bishop should pay to him anothers Mony; and among so many Officers, cannot he "maintain a Secretary at his own Charges? Besides, that it is expresly forbidden in the Canons "to take any thing, not so much as for the Writing, which excludes all kind of pretence. In "fine, he affirms, that this Abuse is the Fountain of all the Disorders that are in the Church; for "whence, says he, comes the Indevotion of the People, the Contempt of Priests, the Abolishing "of the Rights and Liberties of the Church, but because it is full of contemptible Persons, and "unworthy of their Ministration? Whence comes it to pass that an infinite number of ignorant "Persons, are admitted to the Priesthood, who understand no Latin, and scarce can Read; and "who in Repeating or Singing the Prayers, know not whether they Bless or Curse the Lord, "and so many others of bad Morals, who live in all sorts of Debauchery. The Bishops are the "chief Cause of these Disorders, because they admit to Orders indifferently all sorts of Persons, "without examining their Learning, or their Manners; and they are satisfy'd with punishing "them in their Purse, without endeavouring to reform their Faults. And after all this, can any "one wonder, that the Ecclesiastical State should be trampled upon, despis'd, hated, afflicted, "oppress'd, robb'd, and Persecuted? These are the words which Clemangis makes use of to exaggerate the Disorders of the Ecclesiasticks in his time, which thanks be to Heaven, to the Decrees of Holy Councils, and chiefly to that of Trent, and to the Pastoral Vigilance of our Bishops, are now Corrected and Reform'd in our Age, which abounds with Ecclesiasticks of singular Learning, and extraordinary Piety.

The Collection of Clemangis's Letters contains 137. all Written with much Elegance and Chastity, and full of Christian, Moral and Politick Instructions; of the Descriptions of Vices, and Vertues, of Draughts of History, of Critical Questions, of wholsom Advices, and Complements. The most considerable, with reference to Ecclesiastical Matters, are those which were written written about the Schism, and about the State of the Church, viz. the first, address'd to King Charles VI. wherein he exhorts him in a most Pathetical manner to labour for the Reformation of the Church, and the Extirpation of Schism. The second, address'd to Pope Benedict XIII. lately chosen, written with a great deal of Art upon the same Subject. The third, wherein he makes an Apology for the former. The thirteenth, address'd to Benedict about the Inconveniences of the Subtraction. The fifteenth, to John Gerson, about the danger in which the Church was. The seventeenth, to King Charles VI. to dissuade him from the Subtraction, which is very long and eloquent. The twenty ninth, address'd to Peter of Ailly, Bishop of Cambray, about the Afflictions of the Church. The fortieth, address'd to Renald of Fountains, to justifie, That he was not the Author of the Letter which Benedict sent into France, for Excommunicating the King and the Kingdom. The forty second, to the University of Paris, upon the same Subject. The forty third, to Renald of Fountains, to clear himself of some other things which he was accus'd of writing in Letters intercepted. The forty fourth, forty fifth and forty sixth, about the Persecution which he suffer'd upon this occasion. The fifty fifth, against the Enemies of Pope Benedict. The hundred second, of the Qualifications which Deputies ought to have that are sent to a General Council. And the hundred twelfth, address'd to the Council of Constance, wherein he praises the Fathers of that Council who were already Assembled for two Years, and exhorts them not to part till they had procur'd the Peace of the Church; and insinuates to them towards the end of the Letter, That it would be more convenient to choose one of the Competitors, than not to conclude the Peace of the Church; signifying withal, That he did not approve the Decree, which some said they had made, That they would not choose ode of the Competitors.

Nicholas Clemangis a Doctor at Paris.

Those which are written about the Civil Wars, and the Mischiefs wherewith France was Afflicted at that time by the Divisions of Princes, are equally strong and beautiful; they are full of Christian Maxims and Politicks about the Peace and Reformation of the State: See the Letters 59, 63, 67, 68, 69, 89, 90, 97, 98, 101, 103, 107, and 132. to which may be added the 56. to Louis Duke of Aquitain, Eldest Son to King Charles VI. wherein he exhorts him to Mildness and Clemency. The 92d about the Instructions of this Prince, address'd to John D'Arcival his Governor, and the 136 to Henry King of England about Justice, and the other Vertues of a Prince.

In many of his Letters he gives lively Descriptions of the Disorders, and Corruption of Manners in the Ecclesiasticks and Secular Men of his Time: See the 14, 15, 28, 31, 35, 54, 133. In others he treats of important Points of Morality, as in the 9th, of Patience under Afflictions, in the 11th, That the Health of the Soul is preferable to that of the Body, in the 60th, of shunning Vain-Glory, in the 62d, of the advantages of Afflictions and Persecutions; In the 84, 73, 74. of Preaching, of the Fervor and Constancy that should be us'd in this Ministration, in the 75th, of the Vigilance of Pastors, and the things wherein they ought to employ themselves. There he confirms the same Principles, which are in his Books of the Corruption of the Church and the Study of Theology; in the 82d, he treats of the uncertainty and shortness of this Life; and in the 92d, of Alms and Christian Watchfulness.

There are some Letters, which are not about serious Matters, and so do not discover the Learning and Excellent Wit of Clemangis, as the fourth and fifth, in which he refutes what Petrarch had affirm'd, That no where but in Italy there were any Popes and Orators of Worth; the Twenty third, wherein he enquires, Whether one might make use in Latin Letters of the form of Salutation us'd by the Ancients; the Twenty fourth, wherein he describes very pleasantly a Property he had of smelling an Evil Scent in Pestilential Places; the Twenty seventh, wherein he treats Learnedly of the Causes of the Pest; the Thirty ninth, wherein he relates two Stories which had been told him by a Man whom he met in a Journey, one about an Assassination discover'd in an extraordinary manner; and the other, of a Wild and Hairy Man taken in a Forest; the Sixty first, wherein he relates a Story of a visible Judgment upon a wicked Wretch.

This Author is no whit inferiour to the Ancients for Eloquence and Nobleness of Thought, and as to the Purity of his Words, and the Chastness of his Latin Style he does even surpass them: His Discourse is adorn'd with the Natural Ornaments of true Eloquence without Affectation, and abounds in choice Words, rich Thoughts, and happy Applications of the Passages of Sacred and Prophane Authors: It is a little too Luxuriant in his Declamations, and too Rising in his Satyrs, but it is pleasant in his Descriptions, polish'd in his Narrartives, full in his Instructions, earnest in his Exhortations, and wise in his Advices. In fine, whatever may be said of him, he will always pass in any Age whatsoever, for an Author worthy to be read and valued.

Gerard Machet, after he had studied in the College of Navar, towards the end of the preceeding Century, took a Doctor's Degree in 1411. He was promoted some time after to a Canonry in the Church of Paris, and discharg'd the Office of Vice-Chancellor in the absence of Gerson; and in this Quality he was appointed by the University to harangue the Emperor Sigismund as he pass'd through France: Charles VII. made choice of him for his Confessor, and gave him the Bishoprick of Castres. He wrote many Letters which are found in Manuscript in the Church of St. Martin at Tours, whereof Monsieur Launoy speaks in his History of the College lege of Navar, and has given us the Titles of the Chief of them; but he has drawn nothing from them very remarkable as to Ecclesiastical Matters.

John de Courtecuisse Bishop of Geneva.

John de Courtecuisse (in Latin Breviscoxa) born in the Country of Mayence, was admitted in the Year 1367. into the College of Navar, where he took the Degree of Doctor in 1388. and after that was one of the Ambassadors from King Charles VI. to the Popes Benedict and Boniface, for obtaining the Peace of the Church: He was afterwards of the Opinion of the Substraction, and made a Discourse in 1408. against the Interdict under which the Kingdom was laid by Benedict, for which he was rewarded with the Office of Almoner to the King. He perform'd the Duty of Chancellor to the University of Paris, in the absence of Gerson, and was afterwards chosen Bishop of Paris in 1420. But because he was not acceptable to the King of England, who was then Master of that City, he could not continue in the Possession of the Bishoprick, but was forc'd to hide himself in the Monastery of St. Germain Despres, and chose rather to quit Paris and go to Geneva (whereof he had been made Bishop) in the Year 1422. than submit to the Domineering of the English. The Year of his Death is not certainly known: His Works are not yet come to Light: Those which are found in Manuscript, are as follow: A Treatise of the Power of the Church and the Council, in the Bibliotheque of St. Victor; A French Version of a Treatise about the Vertues of Seneca, in the King's Library; Divers Questions of Theology, and Lectures upon many places of the Gospel, in the Libraries of St. Victor, and of the Church of Paris.

John of Lignano a Lawyer.

John of Lignano, a Lawyer of Milan, wrote a Book upon the Clementines, and divers other Treatises of Ecclesiastical and Civil Law, which are to be found in the Collection of Law-Treatises, Printed at Venice in 1584. Among the rest, there is a Treatise of Friendship, a Treatise of the Plurality of Benefices, a Treatise of Ecclesiastical Censures, a Treatise of the Canonical Hours, a Treatise of the Ecclesiastical Interdict, and some Explications of the Three first Books of the Decretals. He flourish'd at the beginning of the Fifteenth Century. Rainaldus has publish'd at the end of the Seventeenth Tome of his Annals, a Treatise of this Learned Lawyer in behalf of Urban VI. wherein he defends the Election of that Pope.

Nicholas Biart a Dominican.

Nicholas Biart, an English-man of the Order of Friars Predicant, flourish'd at the beginning of the Fifteenth Century, and wrote some Sermons, some Moral Distinctions, and a Sum about Abstinence, Works which are to be met with in Manuscript in England.

Adrian the Carthusian.

Adrian, the Carthusian, a Fleming, flourish'd at the beginning of this Century, and wrote in imitation of Petrarch, a Treatise of the Remedies of both Fortunes, Printed at Colen in 1471.

Thomas, Abbot of St. Andrew at Verceilles.

Thomas, Abbot of St. Andrew at Verceil, of the Order of St. Benedict, according to some, and according to others, Canon-Regular, wrote a Commentary upon the Books attributed to St. Denis the Areopagite, Printed at Colen in 1526. with the Commentary of Denis the Carthusian upon the same Books. There is also attributed to him a Commentary in Manuscript upon the Canticles. He flourish'd according to some at the beginning of this Century, and according to others in the Thirteenth.

John Petit Friar Minor.

John Petit, a Licentiate in Theology, of the Faculty of Paris, of the Order of Friars Minors, being a Mercenary Soul, had the Impudence to maintain by word of Mouth and by Writing, the Assassination of the Duke of Orleans, in the Year 1407. by Order of the Duke of Burgundy, whose Creature this Regular was; He being condemn'd for this, and driven away from the University of Paris, retir'd to Hesdin, where he died in 1411. He wrote, besides this Treatise which was burnt at Paris, another Book about Schism, and some Questions which are to be met with in Manuscript in the Library of St. Victor.

Martin Poree Bishop of Arras.

At the same time, a Regular of the Order of Friars Predicant, call'd Martin Poree, undertook to defend the same Cause, and wrote a Treatise upon the same Subject, for which he was rewarded with the Bishoprick of Arras. This Treatise is to be found in Manuscript in the Library of the College of Navar, together with the Answer. Poree was one of the Ambassadors from the Duke of Burgundy to the Council of Constance, and afterwards made a Journy into England. He died September the 6th, 1426.

Paul an English Doctor in Law.

There was towards the end of the Pontificat of Boniface IX. an English Writer nam'd Paul, a Doctor in Law, who wrote about the Year 1404. a Treatise, Entitled, A Mirror of the Pope and his Court, by way of Dialogue, wherein he writes against the Abuses of the Court of Rome concerning Collation of Benefices. 'Tis divided into three Parts; in the first he treats of the Nature of Benefices, of the Order which is among Prelats, of the Canonical ways of Promotion to a Benefice, of the Injustice of Reservations, and Promises of vacant Benefices, of the Simony that is committed for the obtaining of Benefices, and the Enormity of the Crime of Simony, of the Penalties which Simoniacks and those who have a hand in Simony do incur. In the second, he shews, That the Pope may commit Simony by receiving Mony for the Collation of Benefices, directly or indirectly. In fine, he alledges in the last, That the Court of Rome and its Officers, commit Simony by receiving Mony for the Dispatch of Bulls, of Benefices and Graces; That the Cardinals partake in this Simony; That the Pope cannot be excus'd when he grants Exorbitant Graces, and that the Plenitude of his Power does not give him Right to grant Dispensations without Cause and without Reason. This Treatise is printed in the second Tome of the Monarchy of Goldastus, Page 1527.

Abour

About the same time flourish'd another English-man, call'd John Lattebur, of the Order of Friars Minors, who wrote a Moral Commentary upon the Lamentations of Jeremy, printed in 1482. and some other Treatises in Manuscript, viz. Theological Distinctions, a Moral Alphabet, and some other Pieces, which are wholly lost, as Commentaries upon Jeremy, upon the Psalms, upon the Acts of the Apostles; some Lectures upon the Scripture, and some Sermons. John Lattebur a Friar Minor.

Richard Ullerston, Doctor and Professor of Divinity at Oxford, flourish'd also at the beginning of this Century, and wrote in the Year 1408. a Treatise of the Reformation of the Church, at the desire of Robert (a) Cardinal Bishop of Salisbury. This Treatise is to be found in Manuscript, in a Library at Cambrige; (b) and the Title of it is, The Petitions of Richard, for the Defence of the Church Militant. It contains sixteen Articles; the first is about the Election of a Pope, the second of Simony; those that follow are against the Abuses of the Revenues of the Church, against Dispensations, Exemptions, Plurality of Benefices, Appeals, Privileges, about the Life and Manners of the benefic'd Clergy, and the Celebration of Divine Service. In this Piece he speaks boldly against the Disorders of the Court of Rome. There is in the same Manuscript (c) a Treatise of the Duty of a Souldier, written by the same Author at the desire of Richard Courtnay his Master, and dedicated to Henry Prince of Wales. There is also mention made of some other Treatises of the same Author, which are not to be found, viz. a Defence of the Donation of Constantine, Commentaries upon the Psalms and the Canticles, of the Ordinary Lessons, and a Treatise upon the Creed. Richard Ullerston a Doctor of Oxford.

Some time after, Boston a Benedictine Monk of the Monastery of St. Edmund (d) [at Usk in the Province of Wales] wrote a Catalogue of the Writers, which he had found in the Libraries of England, which is only in Manuscript. There is also another Treatise attributed to him, entituled, The Mirror of the Monks, and the Chronicle of his Monastery, which Works are lost. Boston a Benedictine Monk.

Theodorick of Niem, a German, Secretary to some Popes; and according to some, Bishop of Ferden, and afterwards of Cambray, wrote the History of the Schism of the Popes, from the death of Gregory XI. to the Election of Alexander V. in three Books; to which he added another Work, entituled, Nemus Unionis, which contains the Original Pieces written on both sides about this Schism; and a third, wherein he writes the Life of Pope John XXIII. and the Transactions of the Council of Constance, until the Deposing of this Pope. The two former were printed at Basile in 1566. at Nuremberg in 1592. and at Strasburg in 1608. and in 1629. the latter was printed at Frankfurt in 1620. He wrote also a Treatise of the Privileges of the Empire, as to the Investiture of Bishopricks and Abbies, printed at Basil in 1557. and at Strasburg in 1609. and 1618. The Exhortation to Robert King of the Romans, which is in Goldastus, is one of the Chapters of his Book about Union. The Style of this Author is harsh and unpleasant; but he is full of Vigour, faithful and exact in his Relations. Theodorick of Niem, Bishop of Ferden.

Jerom of St. Faith, a Spanish converted Jew, and Physician to Benedict XIII. is the Author of two Treatises against the Jews; whereof the one is entitled, The means of Refuting and Convincing the Jews; and the other is against the Talmud. Both of them have appear'd under the Title of Hebræo-mastix, and were printed at Frankfurt in 1602. and in the last Bibliotheque of the Fathers. In the former he proves, That the twenty four Conditions, which the Jews acknowledge, should happen at the coming of the Messias, according to Scripture and their own Tradition, are all accomplish'd in Jesus Christ. In the second, he discovers the Errors and wild Conceits of the Talmud; and shews that it contains things contrary to Charity, to the Law of Nature, to the Service of God, to the Law of Moses, and Blasphemies against Jesus Christ. These two Treatises were written by Jerom of St. Faith in the Year 1412. and many Jews were converted by reading them. Jerom of St. Faith a converted Jew.

About the same time flourish'd another Spaniard, who was also a converted Jew, call'd Paul of Carthagena, a Native of Burgos, who was Bishop of Carthagena, and after that of Burgos, Chancellor of the Kingdoms of Leon and Castile, and at last Patriarch of Aquileia. He had three Children before his Conversion, Alphonsus, Gonsalvus, and Alvarus Garsias: The first succeeded him in the Bishoprick of Burgos, the second was Bishop of Plaisance, and the last continu'd in a Secular Life. He died in the Year 1435. Aged 82 Years, and in the preceding Year he finish'd a Work, entituled, The Scrutiny of the Bible, printed at Mantua in 1474. and at Burgos in 1591: But his principal Work is an Addition to the Postils of Nicholas of Lyra, upon the whole Bible, printed with that Glos. He wrote also a Treatise about the Name of God, printed with the Notes of Drusius at Franeker in 1604. There is much Jewish Learning in this Work, and they are very useful for the understanding of Scripture. Paul Bishop of Carthagena.

Peter of Ancharano of Bononia in Italy, descended of the Family of the Farnese, a Disciple of Baldus, and a famous Lawyer, flourish'd from the Year 1410. until about the middle of this Century. He wrote Commentaries upon the Decretals and Clementines, printed at Lyons in 1549. and 1553. and at Bologne in 1581. and some other Treatises of Law. * Peter of Ancharano a Lawyer.

St.

St. Vincent Ferrier of the Order of F. F. Preachers.

St. Vincent Ferrier, born at Valence in Spain, of the Order of Friars Predicant, made himself famous by his Sermons, by the Holiness of his Life, and by his Miracles. He was Confessor to Benedict XIII. and Master of the Sacred Palace. He was present in 1418. at the Council of Constance, and died the next Year at Vannes in Brittany, April the 5th. Some

Some pretend that there was a Third Henry of Heſſe, of the Order of the Hermites of St. Auguſtine, to whom they attribute a Treatiſe of the Keys of the Church, and of Indulgences; and others confound him with the Firſt. Henry of Heſſe an Auguſtine.

He wrote a Commentary upon the Four Books of Sentences, and ſome Queſtions upon the ſame Books; but theſe Treatiſes are loſt; there remains now only of his ſome Diſcourſes of Piety, Printed at Strasburg, in 1516. viz. Eleven Sermons, and Diſcourſes upon the Precepts of the Decalogue, the Lord's-Prayer, upon the Three parts of Penance, upon the Eight Beatitudes, upon the Seven Mortal Sins, and the Tribunal of a Confeſſor. Trithemius alſo mentions a Treatiſe of the Seven Gifts of the Holy Spirit, a Treatiſe of Charity, a Treatiſe of the Sins of the Tongue, and of the Eight Capital Vices; and many Sermons which Æneas Sylvius ſays were much ſought after in his time. The Treatiſe of the Seven Gifts is to be found in Manuſcript in the Library of Auſburg, together with a Treatiſe of Gratitude, and Ingratitude, and a Treatiſe of Sacramental Communion. Nicolaus Dinkelpulius, Rector of the Univerſity of Vienna.

At the ſame time Flouriſh'd Theodoric of Ingelhuſe, a German, Canon of Hildeſheim, who wrote the Chronicon of Chronicons, or an Univerſal Chronicon from the beginning of the World, to the year 1420. King of England, whom he waited upon in his Journey to France, where he died at Roan, November the 3d, 1430. He ſtoutly oppos'd the Errors of Wiclef, and confuted them, and eſtabliſh'd the Truth of the Doctrine of the Church; he wrote a great Book, Entituled, A Doctrinale of the Antiquities of the Faith of the Catholick Church, againſt the Wiclefites, and Huſſites, divided into three Tomes, and Printed at Paris, in 1532. at Salamanca, in 1556. and at Venice, in 1571. This Work is Dedicated to Martin V. and approv'd by this Pope. In it the Author propoſes to himſelf to relate the Doctrin of Jeſus Chriſt, of the Apoſtles, and the Fathers, againſt the Errors of the Wiclefites, and joyns Tradition, and the Teſtimony of the Univerſal Church, and of the Councils with the Holy Scripture, which are the Principles he lays down for his Foundation, in refuting the falſe Maxims of Wiclef, who following the foot-ſteps of the Ancient Hereticks, rejected the Tradition and Authority of the Church, pretending that we ought to found our Doctrins upon the Scripture only. Thomas Waldenſis, or of Walden, a Carmelite.

The Firſt Tome of this Work contains Four Books againſt the Errors of Wickef. In the 1ſt he Refutes the Errors of Wicklif concerning the Divinity, the Human Nature, and the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt. In the 2d. he Treats of the Preheminence of St. Peter among the Apoſtles, of the Church, of the Primacy and Privileges of the Pope, and of the Roman Church; of the Authority, Rights and Prerogatives of Biſhops, and other Paſtors, as well in Matters of Faith, as for the Government of the Church. In the 3d. he defends the profeſſion of the Regulars; and in the laſt, he juſtifies particularly the Orders of the Regulars Mendicants, of thoſe who live by the Labour of their Hands, and of thoſe who have Revenues; and ſhews againſt Wickef, that the Eccleſiaſticks may poſſeſs Temporal Revenues.

In the Second Tome he lays down the Doctrin of the Church about the Sacraments, and ſhows againſt Wickef, 1ſt. that the Conſecration and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments by Miniſters is valid, tho' they be Sinners. After this he Treats of the Euchariſt, and having prov'd the Real Preſence, and Tranſubſtantiation, he ſhews that the Communion under both kinds is not neceſſary. As to Baptiſm, he eſtabliſhes the abſolute neceſſity of it to Salvation, and proves that Infants who die without Baptiſm are Damn'd, and that this Sacrament imprints a Character. As to Confirmation, he inſiſts chiefly upon diſcovering the effects of it, and ſhews that the Biſhops only can Adminiſter it. As to the Sacrament of Orders, he makes it evident that the Diſtinction between Biſhops and Prieſts was Eſtabliſh'd from the beginning of the Church; that the Prieſts ought to be Ordain'd by the impoſition of the hands of the Biſhops; that the Reprobate may Conſecrate as well as others, and that the Celibacy of Prieſts is according to the Spirit and Genius of Holy Scripture, and agreeable to the practice of the Ancient Church. As to Marriage, he he ſhews, That this Sacrament may ſubſiſt between Perſons who preſerve Continence, That it ought to be contracted according to the Forms preſcrib'd by the Church, and with the Benediction of the Prieſt, and diſtinguiſhes between Marriages which are Lawful, and which Unlawful. In the Treatiſe of Penance he defends the neceſſity of Confeſſion, the Vertue of Abſolution, and the Practices of the Church, againſt the Accuſations and Errors of Wickleſ. There he Eſtabliſhes the difference between Sins Mortal and Venial, againſt Wickleſ, who made no diſtinction between them, but with reſpect to the predeſtination of God, and who admitted no other Mortal Sin but final Impenitence. He ſhews alſo that the Predeſtinate may loſe Charity againſt the Opinion of the ſame Heretick. Laſtly, he ſhews that the Sacrament of Extream Unction was Founded by Jeſus Chriſt, and his Apoſtles; and that the Sacrament produces its effect by its own Vertue, and not only by the Merits of the Prayers of thoſe who Adminiſter or Receive it.

In the Third Tome he Treats of thoſe things which are call'd Sacramentals; and firſt of the Effects and the Neceſſity of Prayer in general. 2. Of Singing Prayers in the Church. 3. Of the Service of the Church. 4. Of the Maſs, and its parts. 5. Of the Ceremonies of the Sacraments of Baptiſm, Confirmation, Orders, and Penance. 6. Of the Obſervances of the Regulars, and the Vow of Obedience. 7. Of the Participation of Suffrages and Prayers among the Living. 8. Of Prayers for the Dead. 9. Of Prayers for the Saints, and the Worſhip that is due to them. 10. Of the Canonizing of the Saints, and the Honour that is given to their Relicks. 11. Of Devout Pilgrimages, and the Feſtivals of the Saints. 12. Of Building of Churches, their Dedication, their Ornaments, of Images, Croſſes, and their Worſhip. 13. Of the Benediction of the Paſchal Wax-Candle, of Bread and Water, and the Firſt Fruits and Exorciſms.

The Laſt part of this Work, which was about Faſts, Indulgences, Rights, and Eccleſiaſtical Privileges, was never Printed.

The Method in which the Author handles theſe Queſtions, is, Firſt, To relate the Errors of Wiclef, or the Wicleſites, to oppoſe againſt them paſſages of the Holy Scripture, of the Fathers, or Eccleſiaſtical Writers, which he ſets down at full length, and then to draw from them Concluſions when it is needful, but in few words. So that the ground of this Work is a Collection of Paſſages out of different Authors, about the Matters which he handles, which is the Fountain from which many Writers of Controverſie ſince his time, have drawn thoſe paſſages, which they make uſe of againſt the late Hereticks.

He wrote alſo many other Works, which have never ſeen the light to this day; ſome whereof are mention'd, as follows. A Commentary upon the Four Books of the Sentences, Poſtils upon the whole Bible, a Bundle of the Tares of Wiclef, out of which Balæus has given us ſome Fragments †; a Treatiſe of the Catholick Truth, Sermons and Commentaries upon the Books of Ariſtotle's Philoſophy. The Titles of ſome other Treatiſes are alſo mention'd, as, Of the Religion of the Perfect, of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, of Divination, of Preſcience, and Predeſtination, of Faith, of Indulgences, of the Sacraments, of Poverty; a Book addreſs'd to the Council of Conſtance, and two Books Entituled, a Defence of the Peace; but 'tis not known what's become of theſe Works, neither is it certain if ever there were any ſuch, and whether they be different from ſome Chapters of the Doctrinal of the Faith, which are upon the ſame Subjects.

St. John Capiſtran, a Diſciple of St. Bernardin of Siena, and of the ſame Order, employ'd himſelf, as did his Maſter, in Preaching, under the Pontificate of Martin V. Eugenius IV. Nicholas V. and Calliſtus III. He was made General of the Croiſade againſt the Fratricelli and the Huſſites, burnt a great many Villages whither the former had retir'd, defeated the Bohemians; and with 100000 fighting Men ſuccour'd Belgrade when it was beſieged with the Turks. He died the 3d of October, 1456. aged 71 Years; he was Beatified by Gregory XV. and Canoniz'd a little while after. There are of his the following Treatiſes; A Treatiſe of the Authority of the Pope, and of a Council, againſt the Council of Baſil, printed in the Collection of the Treatiſes of Law at Venice; A Mirror of the Clergy, or a Diſcourſe to the Clergy, ſpoken in a Dioceſan Synod at Trent, printed at Venice in 1580. together with an Inſtruction for Prieſts, and an Apology for the third Order of St. Francis; The Mirror of Conſcience, a Penitential; A Treatiſe of Excommunication, and a Treatiſe of Marriage, in the Collection of Treatiſes of Law; Some Treatiſes of the Civil Law, and a Treatiſe of Uſury and Contracts, printed at Venice in 1583. and 1587. A Treatiſe of the Univerſal Judgment, of Antichriſt and the Spiritual War, printed at Venice in 1578. This is what is printed under the Name of this Author. Thoſe who have ſpoke of them do mention alſo the following Treatiſes, Of the Eccleſiaſtical Dignity to Pope Nicholas, of the Pains of Hell, and of Purgatory; of Reſtitutions and Contracts; a Commentary upon the Rule of Friars Minors, three Books of Luſt, a Diſcourſe of the Conception of the Virgin, and one upon the Paſſion of our Lord; a Treatiſe againſt the Huſſites, and a Diſcourſe againſt Rockſane.

Laurence Valla Canon of St. John of the Lateran.

Laurence Valla, a Roman Patrician, Canon of the Church of St. John of the Lateran, did not only excel in Polite Learning, and a Critical Knowledge of the Tongues; but made himſelf famous alſo by ſome Pieces which reſpect Religion, and particularly by his Notes upon the New Teſtament, which yet are rather Grammatical than Theological; but ſtill they are uſeful for underſtanding of the Text; they have been printed at Paris in 1505. at Baſil in 1541. at Amſterdam in 1631. and in the great Criticks of England. With them we muſt join the Diſcourſe about the Forgery of Conſtantine's Donation, which is written rather like an Orator than a Critick, which has been printed in the Collection of Grotius, and a-part at Leyden in 1620. a Treatiſe of Free-will, printed at Baſil in 1540. and a Diſcourſe upon the Euchariſt, printed at Strasburg in 1490. This Author flouriſh'd at Rome about the Year 1440. He went out of it to go to Naples in 1443. where he taught Latin to Alphonſus V. King of Arragon. 'Tis ſaid, that he was delated to the Inquiſition, and that he eſcaped the Flames only by the favour of King

King Alphonſus, who yet could not ſave him from being publickly whipp'd with Rods: But this Hiſtory appears ſo much the rather fabulous, becauſe when he return'd to Rome, he was honoured with a Penſion, and taught there publickly. He died in 1465. aged fifty Years.

Flavius Blondus Secretary to Eugenius IV.

Flavius Blondus, or rather Blondus Flavius, was born at Forc-livio in 1388. He was ſometime Secretary to Pope Eugenius IV. and died under the Pontificate of Pius III. on the 4th. of June, in the year 1463. He made himſelf Famous by his three Decades of the Hiſtory of the Weſtern Empire, from the year 410. to the year 1440. of which Æneas Sylvius has made an Abridgment. He wrote alſo other Books to Illuſtrate the Hiſtory of Italy, viz. Three Books, Entituled Rome Reſtor'd, which contain a Deſcription of the City of Rome, as it was in his time; Eight Books of Italy Illuſtrated, wherein he gives a New Deſcription of the State of Italy, as it was in his time; a Treatiſe of the Origin and Actions of the Venetians, from the year 450. to the year 1291. and a Treatiſe Entituled Rome Triumphant, divided into Ten Books, which contains a Deſcription of what belongs to the Government of Ancient Rome. All theſe Works were Printed at Baſil, in 1559.

Ambroſius Camaldulenſis.

Ambroſe of Camalduli, may juſtly be rank'd among Eccleſiaſtical Writers; as well upon the Account of his Profeſſion, as an Hermit in the Abby at Camalduli, which he embrac'd at the Age of Fourteen Years, as becauſe of his Works, which are almoſt all about Eccleſiaſtical Matters. He was Born at Pertico, a ſmall City of Romandiola, and was the Diſciple of Emanuel Chryſoloras, under whom he learn'd the Greek Tongue, which he underſtood better than any Latin Authors of his time, in the judgment of Scuropulus. He Flouriſh'd under the Pontificate of Eugenius IV. and was made General of the Order of the Camaldule Hermites in 1431. He was one of the Divines who was preſent at the Councils of Baſil, Ferrara, and Florence: 'Twas he that drew up in the laſt, the Form of the Union. He died at his return from this Council, October the 21ſt. in the year 1439. His Chief Works are his Tranſlations of the Greek Authors, viz. of the Life of St. John Chryſoſtom, written by Palladius, and Printed at Venice in 1533. of the Spiritual Meadow, Printed at Lyons, in 1617. of the Ladder of St. John Climacus at Venice, in 1531. of Four Books of Manuel Calecas, againſt the Errors of the Greeks, Printed at Ingolſtadt, in 1603. of ſome Sermons of St. Ephrem; of the Books attributed to St. Denis, of the Cœleſtial Hierarchy, of a Treatiſe of Virginity by St. Baſil; of a Treatiſe of St. Athanaſius againſt the Gentiles; of three Books of St. Chryſoſtom to Stagyrius; of his Homilies upon St. Matthew, and of many other Works of the Fathers. Of the other Works of St. Ambroſe there are none Printed, but his Voyage into Italy, publiſh'd at Florence, in 1681. wherein he deſcribes the Diſorders of many Monaſteries which he had Viſited: But there are many more Manuſcripts of his at Florence, in the Library of St. Mark, viz. Sixteen Books of Letters, the Chronicon of Mount Caſſinus, two Books of his own Actions, while he was General of the Camaldulians; a Treatiſe of the Sacrament of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; a Treatiſe againſt the Greeks, about the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit: Some Diſcourſes ſpoken in the Councils of Ferrara, and Florence; and in the Library of St. Juſtina at Padua, a Treatiſe againſt thoſe who cenſure a Monaſtick Life. The Style of Ambroſe the Camaldulian is Latin good enough, but he takes a great deal of liberty in his Tranſlations, and does not always render the words according to their true and proper ſignification.

Maphæus Vegius, Diary to Martin V.

Maphæus Vegius, of the City of Lodi near Milan, Datary to Martin V. is the Author of this Age, who wrote moſt Uſefully, moſt Pleaſantly, and moſt Elegantly. He wrote a Treatiſe of the Chriſtian Education of Children, which is the moſt Compleat that we now have of this kind. There he Treats of the Duties of Fathers and Mothers, of the Studies of Children, and the Vertues that ought to be inſpired into them; 'tis full of a moſt Chriſtian Morality, and an uncommon Prudence. The Six Books of the ſame Author about perſeverance in Religion, contain a ſolid Piety, and moſt uſeful Inſtructions for making great progreſs in it, and for maintaining and preſerving a ſenſe of Piety and Religion; which is alſo the deſign of his Diſcourſes concerning the four laſt ends of Man, which he handles excellently well. The Dialogue of Truth Baniſh'd is a piece of Wit. I ſay nothing of his profane Works; as his Supplement to the Twelfth Book of Virgil, and ſome other pieces of Poetry and Eloquence, wherein he excell'd, and came near to the Ancients. He died in 1458.

St. Antonine Archbiſhop of Naples.

St. Antonine being Born at Florence in 1389. ſtudied Law at Fieſoli, and at the Age of Sixteen years entred into the Order of Friars Predicant. Among them he ſpent ſome part of his Life, tho' he was employ'd by the Republick of Florence in divers Negotiations, and was at laſt made Archbiſhop of Naples, by Eugenius IV. in 1446. He died the 2d. of May, in 1459. His Principal Work is an Hiſtorical Summary, or a Tripartite Chronicle, from the beginning of the World, to the year 1459. which is nothing but a Collection taken out of many Hiſtorians, and without much choice. It was Printed at Venice, in 1480. at Nuremberg, in 1484. at Baſil, in 1491. and at Lyons, in 1586. His Theological Summ was Printed at Memmingen, in 1483. at Strasburg, in 1496. and at Venice, in 1591. His Summ of Confeſſion has been Printed in many Places; at Strasburg, in 1492. and 1499. at Paris in 1516. at Lyons, in 1564. and at Venice, in 1572. There are Treatiſes of this Author about Excommunication, and the other Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, Printed in the Collection of Law-Treatiſes. There is alſo a Treatiſe of his about the Diſciples of Emaus, Printed with his Life, before the year 1500. a Treatiſe of Vertues, Printed at Nuremberg, in the year 1472. and Annotations upon the Donation of Conſtantine, Printed at Collen, in 1535. beſides many other Manuſcript Works.

Leonard Aretine,

Leonard Aretine, and John Baptiſta Poggio.

Leonard Aretine, and Poggio, who were Celebrated Authors for Polite Learning, employ'd their pains about Matters very different from Religion, yet ſome of their Works may have a Reference to it, as the excellent Diſcourſe of the former againſt Hypocrites, Printed in the Collection of Othuin Gratius, and with a Dialogue againſt Hypocriſie, by Poggio, at Lyons, in 1679. The deſcription of the Death of Jerom of Prague, Addreſs'd by Poggio to Leonard Aretine in the ſame Collection, and among the Works of John Huſs. The Funeral Orations of Francis Zabarella, Nicolas Albergat Cardinals, and of Laurence de Medicis by Poggio; Four Books of the variety of Fortune, Dedicated to Nicolas V. by the ſame Author; a Diſcourſe of the Authority and Power of the Pope, and Council, by the ſame; a Treatiſe of Nobility, and another of Human Miſery. Theſe two Authors excell'd in the Study of the Greek and Latin Tongues, and both of them were Secretaries to Popes; the former under Gregory XII. Alexander V. and John XXIII. the latter under the following Popes: The former died in 1443. and the latter in 1459. both of them at Florence, whither Laurentius de Medicis had call'd them.

John de Stavelo, and John Loſſe, Benedictine Monks.

John de Stavelo, of the Dioceſe of Liege, a Benedictine Monk, of St. Lawrence of Liege, wrote the Hiſtory of the Actions of the Biſhops of Liege, to the year 1449. and was continued by another. John de Loſſe, of the ſame Order.

Matthew Palmier a Florentine.

Matthew Palmier, a Florentine, wrote a Chronicle from the beginning of the World, to the year 1449. of which there is nothing Printed but what follows the Chronicle of St. Proſper, i. e from the year 444. in the Edition of Baſil, of the Chronicle of Euſebius. 'Tis ſaid, that this Author having made a Poem about the Angels in Italian, was accus'd of Arianiſm, upon the account of ſome words that eſcap'd him in that Work, and that he refuſing to retract his Errors, was burnt; but this Story is groundleſs.

Matthias Palmerius.

The Chronicle of this Author was continued down to the year 1481. by another, who had or took upon him the ſame Sirname, and is no otherwiſe diſtinguiſh'd, but by the name of Matthias, which was given him inſtead of that of Matthew; this Author was alſo of Piſa or Vicenza: He Tranſlated alſo the Hiſtory of Ariſteas, which was Printed at Baſil, in 1536. and 1551.

John Capgrave an Auguſtine.

John Capgrave, an Engliſh-man. of the Order of Friars Hermites, of St. Auguſtine, a Doctor of Oxford, and Confeſſor to the Duke of Glouceſter, Flouriſh'd about the middle of this Century, and died in the year 1464. He wrote a Catalogue or a Legend of the Saints of England, Printed at London, in 1516. and there are in England many other Manuſcript Works of the ſame Author. †

Nicolas of Cuſa, ſo call'd from the Name of the place of his Birth, ſcituate upon the Banks of the Moſelle, in the Dioceſe of Treves, the Son of a poor Fiſherman; was advanc'd by his Merits to the Higheſt Eccleſiaſtical Dignities. He was at firſt a Canon-Regular, afterwards Arch-Deacon of Liege, and Dean of St. Florin in Conſtance; He was preſent at the Council of Baſil, and was one of the greateſt Defenders of the Authority of the Council above the Pope: Upon this Occaſion he wrote a Conſiderable Work, Entituled, Of Catholick Agreement, which was divided into Three Parts. After this he chang'd ſides, and turn'd over to Pope Eugenius's Party, and was Employ'd by him in Embaſſies into Germany, and France, and promoted by Nicolas V. December the 20th, 1448. to the Dignity of a Cardinal, with the Title of St. Peter ad Vincula. He was ſent again into Germany, and made Biſhop of Brixen in the County of Tyrol, which occaſion'd a difference with Sigiſmund Duke of Auſtria, who forc'd him at laſt to depart out of Germany. He died at Todi in Italy, Auguſt 12. 1464. Aged 63 years. The Works which he wrote are theſe following: Three Books of Learned Ignorance, wherein he endeavours to give Ideas of the Eſſence of God, of the Trinity, and of other Myſteries of Religion, drawn from Metaphyſical and Mathematical Principles. This Work is very abſtract and obſcure; which being attack'd by ſomebody, he wrote an Apology for it. The two Books of Conjectures are yet leſs intelligible, and leſs uſeful, and contain nothing but Metaphyſical Notions, which are of no uſe. The Piece about the Filiation of God is founded upon the ſame Principles, and written in the ſame method. The Dialogues upon Geneſis, upon Wiſdom, and Wit, and about Statical Experiments, have ſomething in them more ſolid, and deſcend more to particulars. The Treatiſe of the Viſion of God is more pathetical, and contains fine Meditations. The two Books of the Globe are written to give an Idea of the Myſtery of the Trinity by this Figure, and he enlarges upon the ſame Argument in another Dialogue. The Book about Beryl contains divers Metaphyſical Principles, which are very confus'd. The Books of the Gifts of the Father of Lights, of ſeeking after God, of the purſuit of Wiſdom, contain divers abſtract and general Maxims, which are above our knowledge. The Book of the top of Theory is almoſt unintelligible; the Dialogue of an Unknown God may be of ſome uſe. Theſe are the Works contain'd in the Firſt Tome, now follow thoſe in the Second. A Dialogue upon the Annunciation of the Virgin, a Work Entituled Excitations, divided into Ten Books, which contain Allegorical and Myſtical Reflections upon many Select paſſages of Holy Scripture: Three Books of Catholick Agreement; wherein he Treats 1. Of the Church in it ſelf. 2. Of the Prieſthood, and the Authority of General Councils, and of the Pope. 3. Of the Empire, and the Power of Princes. He wrote this Treatiſe before he was Cardinal, during the Council of Baſil, and in it he handles theſe Queſtions with much moderation. The Principal Points which he eſtabliſhes in it are theſe; that the Church is the Union of all Souls with Jeſus Chriſt its Spouſe; that there are in this Church different Degrees; that altho' it be united, yet it may be divided into Militant, Dormant, and Triumphant; that the two laſt parts are made up only of the Predeſtinate, and that the firſt is a mixture of Nicholas de Orbellis, a Franciscan Regular of the same Order, flourish'd about the same time at Poitiers. He wrote also an Abridgment of Theology according to the Doctrin of Scotus, printed at Haguenaw in 1503. and at Paris in 1511, 1517, and 1520. There are also some Sermons of his upon the Lent-Epistles, printed at Lyons in 1492. and divers Treatises of Philosophy. Nicholas de Orbellis a Friar Minor.

James of Clusa, who, according to most Writers, is not different from James of Paradise; after he had spent some part of his Life in the Order of Cistercians, entred into that of the Carthusians, because he would not be made Abbot of his own Order. After this, he spent Twenty Years in the Carthusian Monastery at Erford, and died there Aged Eighty Years, in 1465. The Treatise of the seven States of the Church, describ'd in the Revelations, is attributed to him, wherein he shews the necessity of reforming the Church in its Head and Members: There he proves that the Pope is peccable and fallible, and subject to a Council; and the necessity there is, That a Council should take care of the Reformation of the Church. This Treatise is in the Second Tome of the Monarchy of Goldastus; perhaps it was written before he was a Carthusian. James of Clusa, a Carthusian.

Some confound this Author with James of Junterbuck, and there is some probability that he is not different; for he was a Carthusian of Erford, liv'd at the same time, and the Treatises attributed to him are near a-kin to that whereof we have just now spoken. Howsoever this be, there are many Treatises about Discipline and the Reformation of the Church, and upon divers Points of Morality, which go under the name of James Junterbuck, which Surius found in Manuscript in the Library of the Carthusians at Collen; and whereof he has given us a Catalogue, which is to be found in the Bibliotheque of Carthusian Writers by Petreius: Some of them also are printed, viz. the Art of curing Vices, the Complaint of a Sinner, the State and Duty of Ecclesiastical Persons, printed at Amsterdam in 1617; a Treatise of Souls separate from the Body, printed at Basil in 1475. a Treatise of the Truth in speaking or keeping Silence, printed at Basil, and a Treatise of the Manners and Errors of Christians, printed at Lubeck in 1488.

John de Turrecremata, so call'd in Latin from the name of the place in which he was born, call'd in Spanish, Torquemado, in the Diocese of Palenza, entred into the Order of St. Dominick, in the Convent of Valladolid. He flourish'd at first in the University of Paris, where he took the Degree of Doctor, and there he profess'd Theology and the Canon-Law. He return'd afterwards into Spain, where he stay'd not long, being sent for in the Year 1431. by Pope Eugenius, and made Master of the Sacred Palace. He was sent to the Council of Basil, where he oppos'd the Hussites, and strenuously defended the Pope; from thence he was call'd back to the Council of Florence, where he was one of those who entred the Lists with Mark of Ephesus, for which Service he was rewarded with the Title of Cardinal-Priest of St. Sixtus, in the Year 1434. and was sent Legat into France, where he presided at the Council of Bourges: After he had been employ'd in many Ambassies, he was nominated in 1450. to a Bishoprick in Galicia, and after that to be Bishop of Albana, which he chang'd in 1464. for that of St. Sabina. He died September the 28th, in 1468. Here follows a Catalogue of his Works: A Commentary upon the Decree of Gratian in five Tomes, printed at Lyons in 1555. and at Venice in 1578; A Summary about the Church and its Authority, in four Books, printed at Lyons in 1496. and at Venice in 1561; A Treatise of the Authority of the Pope and a General Council, against the Orator of the Council of Basil, printed at Venice in 1563. and in the Thirteenth Tome of the Councils. An Exposition of the Epistles of St. Paul, printed at Basil in 1493; A Commentary upon the Psalms of David, printed at Venice in 1513; A Course of Sermons for the whole Year, and for the Festivals of the Saints, at Lyons in 1509; Quodlibetical Questions at Strasburg in 1490; A Treatise of Holy Water, at Rome in 1559; A Treatise of the truth of the Conception of the Virgin, divided into thirteen parts, printed at Rome in 1547; A Commentary upon the Rule of St. Benedict, at Paris in 1494, and at Colen in 1575; An Exposition of the Rule of St. Bridget, at Colen in 1628. and an Apology for the Revelations of this Saint among his Works: The Salvation of the Soul, or the Confirmation of the Catholick Faith, at London in 1509; A Treatise against the Principal Errors of Mahomet, at Paris in 1465; A Collection of the Questions of St. Thomas Aquinas about the Authority of the Pope, printed at Lyons, and at Ausburg in 1496. and at Venice in 1562; Meditations upon the Tables, which he plac'd in the Church of Minerva at Rome, printed at Rome in 1467. and 1473; A Dissertation against the Greeks about Unleavened Bread in the Thirteenth Tome of the Councils. Trithemius mentions also Questions upon the Gospels for Sundays, and the Festivals of the Saints. This Author was an able Man in Scholastick Learning, and in the New Canon-Law; he understood Subtleties very well, and could use them with ease. His Style has nothing sublime in it, and savours of the Barbarism and Dryness of the School-men and Canonists. He maintain'd Pope Eugenius stoutly against the Council of Basil, and defended the Superiority of the Pope above the Council. John de Turrecremata a Cardinal.

Henry Arnold a Saxon, having perform'd the Office of Secretary in the Council of Basil, entred into the Order of Carthusians, and wrote many Treatises of Piety, which were never printed, and a Book of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin, printed at Antwerp in 1527. He died in the Year 1487. Henry Arnold a Carthusian.

Alphonsus Spina, a Friar Minor.

Alphonsus Spina, a Spanish converted Jew, a Regular of the Order of St. Francis, and Rector of the University of Salamanca, is the Author of a Treatise, Entitled, The Fortress of Faith, against the Jews, Saracens, and other Enemies of the Faith, printed at Nuremberg, without the Name of the Author, in 1494. and publish'd afterwards by William Totan, of the Order of Friars Predicant in 1511. printed at Lyons: But John Mariana attributes it to Alphonsus Spina, and the Author observes in the Work it self, That he wrote it at Valladolid in 1458. 'Tis a Work that promises more in the Title than it performs, for it is not well-written; it contains no deep Enquiries, and often makes use of Proofs, Arguments and Answers, which are very weak; yet there is some Learning in it, and it may be of some use.

Ægidius Carlerius, Dean of Cambray.

Giles Charlier, born at Cambray, studied in the College of Navar: After he had finish'd there with credit the Explication of the Master of the Sentences, in 1414. he took the Degree of Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, and was chosen in 1431. Dean of the Chapter of Cambray. He was present at the Council of Basil, and was one of the Envoys from the Council to the Bohemians. He liv'd a very long time, and was Dean of the Faculty of Theology at Paris, and died not till the 23d of November, in 1472. He compos'd many Works, whereof some have been printed at Brussels, in 1478. under the Title of the Sporta, and Sportula, viz. under the first Title, a Treatise of the Preservation of the Goods of the Church, a Defence of the Church, a Treatise of the Perpetual Virginity of Mary, a piece against the * Iconomachi, and a Treatise of the Celibacy of Ecclesiasticks: And under the last Title, the following Treatises, Of the Election of the Traytor Judas, of the Ecclesiastical Hierarchy, of Revenues for Life, of Tithes, of Images, of Confession, of abstaining from Meat among the Benedictines and Carthusians, against the Calculators of the past Age, about the Cloistering of the Monks of the Order of St. Dominick. There is at the end of the Acts of the Council of Basil, a Discourse against the second Article of the Bohemians about the Correction of Publick Sins. His Commentary upon the Master of the Sentences is Manuscript, in the Library of Navar, and many other Treatises upon different Subjects, as, upon the Communion of the Laity in one kind, upon some Propositions against the Authority of the Church, upon Indulgences, upon the Eucharist, and upon several other Questions of Practice, or Cases of Conscience, with a multitude of Sermons.

* i. e. Those who oppos'd Images.

Gregory of Heimburg, a Civilian.

Gregory of Heimburg, Doctor in Law, was one of the most violent Enemies to the Pope which this Age produc'd: He was present at the Council of Basil, and was afterwards call'd to Nuremberg, where he did the Office of Syndick for the space of Thirty Years, and was honour'd with the Title of Counsellor to Frederick of Austria. He wrote a Treatise against the Temporal Power which the Popes pretend to have over Princes, wherein he does not contain himself within the bounds of the Question, but lashes out in Invectives against the Popes. The Contest which the Cardinal of Cusa had with Sigismund Duke of Austria, gave occasion to Gregory of Heimburg, to discharge his Gall against the Popes, and in particular against Pius II. who had formerly been one of his Friends. Upon the Difference which happen'd between the Cardinal of Cusa and Duke Sigismund, about the Execution of the Cardinal's Jurisdiction in his Bishoprick of Brixen, Pope Callistus III. cited this Duke, and forbad him under pain of an Interdict to trouble the Cardinal in the exercise of his Jurisdiction: This Mention did nothing but irritate the Duke, who persecuted this Cardinal. Pius II. renew'd the Censures against the Duke, and cited him and his Adherents anew. Then Sigismund appeal'd to a Council, and the Act of Appeal was drawn up by Heimburg. The Pope Excommunicated the Duke and his Adherents, and pronounc'd an Interdict against their Estates, by his Bull publish'd at Siena, August the 2d, in 1460: Sigismund appeal'd also from this Proceeding. The Pope denounc'd him Excommunicate again by his Mandates in the Month of January the next Year. He Excommunicated also Gregory of Heimburg, by his Bull dated October the 18th. in the Year 1460. This Civilian made railing Annotations, and an Act of Appeal against this Bull.

Theodore Lælius Bishop of Feltre.

Theodore Lælius, Bishop of Feltre, who died after he was chosen Cardinal in the Year 1464. made a Reply, which is very well written, to Heimburg's Act of Appeal: Against which he wrote an Apology full of Reproaches, and he made an Invective yet more passionate against the Cardinal of Cusa. All these Pieces have been publish'd by Goldastus, in his first and second Tome of the Monarchy, and printed a-part at Frankfurt in 1608.

Henricus Gorcomius, or Gorichemius.

Henry Gorcome, or Goricheme, a Hollander, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Colen, flourish'd about the Year 1460; He wrote a Treatise of Festivals, and a Treatise of some Superstitious Observances and Ceremonies, printed at Colen in 1503. and at Lyons in 1621: A kind of Table of Conclusions, or the Agreement of the Bible and the Canons, upon the Master of the Sentences, together with a Catalogue of the Opinions of the Master of the Sentences, which are rejected at Paris, and in England, printed at Colen in 1502. at Venice in 1506. and at Basil in 1513; not to mention his Commentaries upon some Books of Aristotle.

Thomas of Kempis a Canon-Regular.

Thomas, commonly call'd a Kempis, or de Kempis, was of Kempen, a City in the Diocese of Collen, as he says himself in his Chronicle of the Mount of St. Agnes, Chap. 8. & 10. and not of Kampen in the Diocese of Utrecht, as some have said. He was born at this place about the Year 1380. and was sirnam'd Hemerken, which signifies a Hammer; his Father was call'd John and his Mother Gertrude; he had a Brother nam'd John de Kempis, Prior of the Monastery of the Canons Regular of the Congregation of Gerard le Grand, in the Mount of St. Agnes near to Zwol. Thomas was educated in the Society of the Scholars of Deventer, where he learn'd to write, write, to read the Bible, and to underſtand Treatiſes of Piety and Morality: After this he went in 1399. to Zwol, to obtain the Indulgences which Pope Boniface IX. had granted to the Church of this place, and there he deſir'd to be admitted into the Monaſtery of the Mount of St. Agnes; into which he was receiv'd in the Month of October the ſame Year by his Brother, and made Profeſſion the 10th of June, 1406. The Author of the Continuation of his Chronicle of the Mount of St. Agnes, relates that in the firſt Year after he enter'd into this Monaſtery, he endur'd great Hunger, and Tryals, and conſiderable Pains. He was ordain'd Prieſt in 1423. One of the chief Employments of the Canons Regular of this Congregation, was to write out the Bible, the Writings of the Fathers, and Treatiſes of Piety. Thomas a Kempis apply'd himſelf with Vigor to this Labour, copied out the whole Bible, a Miſſal, and a multitude of other Works; and in performing this Office, he practis'd the Advice of one of the Ancients, that in writing Books he did not only ſeek by the Labour of his Hands to gain Food for his Body, but alſo to Refreſh his Soul with Heavenly Nouriſhment: For he ſo poſſeſs'd his Mind with the Maxims and Truths contain'd in the Books which he copied out, that he prepar'd himſelf to inſtruct others by his Example, and by his Doctrin, by Word of Mouth and by Writing; which he did in his Converſation, in his Diſcourſes, in the Inſtructions he gave to his Brethren, and in the Works of Piety which he compos'd. He was humble, meek, ready to give Conſolation, fervent in his Exhortations and Prayers, Devout, Spiritual and Contemplative. His Style is plain and has nothing ſublime in it; but his Thoughts are ſolid, and full of Unction, and withal intelligible and uſeful to the whole World; having nothing of that lofty and extravagant Devotion of ſome Myſtical Divines, whoſe Language is uncommon and very ſingular. He liv'd 70 Years in his Order, and died not till the Year 1471. on the 24th of July.

Thomas a Kempis a Canon Regular.

The largeſt Edition of his Works is that of Colen, in the Year 1660. which is divided into three Tomes.

The firſt contains the Diſcourſes of Thomas a Kempis, viz. firſt, thirty Sermons to the Novices, which are Conferences that Thomas a Kempis had with the Novices of his Order at different times, and which he afterwards collected together and addreſs'd to his Brethren, under the Name of a Pilgrim Friar. Theſe Diſcourſes contain wholſome Inſtructions and Advices to the young Regulars, founded upon Paſſages of Scripture, and ſupported by ſome Examples which are related at the end. Secondly, Nine Diſcourſes to his Brethren, containing moſt ſublime Thoughts upon the principal Vertues of Regulars, viz. upon Self-denial, Compunction, Chaſtity, Silence and Solitude. Thirdly, Thirty ſix Diſcourſes upon the Incarnation, the Birth, the Life, the Death, the Reſurrection and Aſcenſion of Jeſus Chriſt, and alſo upon the Miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and upon the Primitive Church, which are almoſt wholly compos'd of Paſſages of the Holy Scripture.

The Second Tome contains Spiritual Treatiſes, at the head of which are the four Books of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt: The Title of the firſt is, Uſeful Advices for the Spiritual Life; Of the ſecond, Advices or Documents of the Interiour Life; Of the third, Of inward Conſolation; Of the fourth, Of the Auguſt Sacrament of the Euchariſt; Or, A devout Exhortation to the Holy Communion. After this Treatiſe of Thomas a Kempis, which is conteſted, there follow many others which without ſcruple are attributed to him: The firſt is the Soliloquy of the Soul, wherein he hath collected many Meditations drawn out of the Holy Scripture, containing divers Thoughts and Motions of Piety, of the Thankfulneſs and Affection of the Soul towards God: The ſecond is a Work, entitled, The little Garden of Roſes, containing divers Advices for the Spiritual Life, which are alſo in the third, entitled, The Valley of Lillies. In the fourth, which bears this Title, Of the three Tabernacles, he treats of Poverty, of Humility and Patience. The fifth is of the Diſcipline of thoſe who are in the Cloiſter: There he treats of the Duties, Employments, Exerciſes of thoſe who are in the Cloiſter, and of the means they ought to uſe for performing them well. The fifth is about a faithful Steward, or the Miniſtery of Martha; where he ſpeaks of the external Employments of the Regulars: The ſeventh is entitled, The Hoſpital of the Poor; Or, of the Contempt of the Things of this World. It contains divers Spiritual Inſtructions, particularly about Prayer, Temptations and Humility. The eighth is a Dialogue about Novices, wherein he brings in a Novice ſpeaking to an ancient Regular, who inſtructs him in the chief Duties of Religion. The Spiritual Exerciſes are the ninth Work, whereof the firſt part is about interiour Duties, and the ſecond of external Employments. The tenth is entitled, The Doctrinal, or the Manual of young People. There he recommends the reading of the Holy Scripture, the ſtudy of good Books, Singing, frequenting Divine Service, Humility, Diligence, Self-denial, and Affection to Heavenly Things. The Book of Compunction of Heart, is a moſt fervent Prayer to God, of one who acknowledges himſelf a Sinner, and lays open his own Miſery. The twelfth Book, after that about the Imitation, diſcovers the Uſefulneſs of Solitude and Silence. Theſe are the Treatiſes contain'd in the firſt Part of the Second Tome; the ſecond contains many other ſhorter Tracts, the Titles whereof are theſe; Of the Acknowledgment of our own Frailty, a ſhort Epitaph, or a Manual of the Monks, the Manual of Little Ones, of the Elevation of the Mind to God, to ſeek after the Sovereign Good, the little Alphabet of a Monk for the School of Jeſus Chriſt, the Conſolation of the Poor and Sick, ſeven Prayers, little pieces of the Mortification of our ſelves, of Humility, of a good and peaceable Life, the Life of a good Monk in Rhime, and ſome Hymns.

But three years after, the ſame Pope ſuſpecting he had Conſpir'd againſt his Perſon, caus'd him to be put in Priſon again, and Tortur'd; and when he could not by this means extort a Confeſſion from him of the pretended Crime, he accus'd him of Hereſie, and of having ſome bad Opinions about the Immortality of the Soul. Nevertheleſs, upon the requeſt of the Cardinals Beſſarion, and Gonzaga, he granted him at laſt his Liberty, but he was not Reſtor'd 'till the Pontificate of Sixtus IV. who made him Library-Keeper of the Vatican, and gave him a Houſe in the Quirinal, where he died, in the year 1481. After this, Picus apply'd himſelf wholly to the Study of the Holy Scripture, undertook to confute the Jews, and Mahometans, and to confound Judicial Aſtrology; he reſign'd alſo his own Sovereignty, and diſtributed all his goods among the Poor. He died at Florence, November 17. in the year 1494. His Theſes which contain 900 Queſtions, were Printed at Rome in 1486. at Nuremberg, in 1532. and at Collen, in 1619. and together with his other Works, which are an Apology for his Theſes; Seven Books upon the beginning of Geneſis, a Treatiſe of Being and Unity, a Treatiſe of the Dignity of Man, Twelve Rules or Precepts for the Inſtitution of a Chriſtian Life, a Commentary upon the Fifteenth Pſalm, a Treatiſe of the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt, and of the Vanity of the World, an Expoſition of the Lord's-Prayer, a Book of Letters, Twelve Books upon Aſtrology, Three Books upon Plato's Banquet. All theſe Works were Printed together at Venice, in 1498. and at Strasburg, in 1504. at Baſil, in 1573, and 1601. and at Mirandula, in 1596. He wrote alſo other Pieces, whereof John Francis Picus of Mirandula his Nephew makes mention in his Life, viz. A Book of the Fidelity of the Verſion of the Bible by St. Jerom, againſt the Calumnies of the Hebrews; a defence of the Septuagint's Verſion upon the Pſalms; a Treatiſe of the true Computation of Time; a Commentary upon the New Teſtament; a Treatiſe againſt the Seven Enemies of the Church; which are the Atheiſts, the Pagans, the Jews, the Mahometans, the Chriſtian Hereticks, the Impious Chriſtians, who are Catholicks in appearance, and the Impious and Heretical Chriſtians; ſome Books againſt all Hereticks, and other Treatiſes of Philoſophy, and Grammar. Johannes Picus, of Mirandula.

The 900 Concluſions of Picus of Mirandula are for the moſt part Metaphyſical and Scholaſtical Queſtions; many of them are upon the Philoſophy of Ariſtotle and Plato, upon the Principles of the Cabbala, and of Magick, and ſome upon the Queſtions diſputed by the Scholaſtical Divines. Upon this laſt he was attack'd, and Thirteen of them were accus'd of Hereſie, Error, or Raſhneſs. The 1ſt. that Jeſus Chriſt did not really deſcend into Hell, as to his preſence, but only as to his effects: The 2d. That an infinite pain is not due to a Mortal Sin of a finite Time, but only a pain that is finite; the 3d. That we ought not to adore the Croſs, nor any Image, with the Adoration of Latria, no not in the ſenſe of St. Thomas; the 4th. That he was not certain that God could be united hypoſtatically to every Creature, but only to a Rational Creature; the 5th. That there is no Science that renders us more certain of the Doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt, than the knowledge of Magick, and the Cabala: the 6th. That ſuppoſing the common Opinion that the Word may be hypoſtatically united to an Inanimate Creature, then the Body of Jeſus Chriſt may be really upon the Altar, tho' the Bread be not chang'd into his Body, nor annihilated; which is to be underſtood of the poſſibility of the thing, and not in any way as if it were actually ſo; the 7th. That 'tis more reaſonable to believe that Origen ſhould be Saved, than be Damned: the 8th. That as no Perſon is of any Opinion, meerly becauſe he would be of it; ſo neither can any Perſon believe, preciſely, becauſe he has a mind to believe; the 9th. That he who will maintain that the Accidents cannot ſubſiſt, unleſs they be ſuſtain'd by the Euchariſt, may nevertheleſs maintain the truth of the Sacrament, and believe that the ſubſtance of the Bread is not there; the 10th. That the words of Conſecration are repeated by the Prieſt materially, and exactly; and not only by way of ſignification; the 11th. That the Miracles of Jeſus Chriſt are not an evident proof of his Divinity, upon the account of the Operation, but upon

upon the account of the Manner in which they were wrought; the 12th. That 'tis more improper to ſay of God, that he is Intelligent, or has Underſtanding, than to ſay of an Angel that he is a Rational Soul; the 13th. That the Soul does not underſtand nor conceive diſtinctly any thing but it ſelf. Picus of Mirandula in his Apology, declar'd the Motives which his Adverſaries might have to accuſe him. He ſays, that ſome blam'd his Deſign, and the manner of his Philoſophizing; others thought it was a Raſhneſs in one of his Age to attempt ſuch great things; ſome reprov'd him for the great number of Theſes he had propos'd; and laſtly, ſome Divines accus'd him of Hereſie; that he thought he ought not to be ſilent upon this Accuſation, having learn'd from St. Jerom, and Ruffinus, that a Man ought to endure all ſorts of Reproaches, except that of Hereſie, but under that he ought not to be patient. Nevertheleſs he anſwers the Objections which are made againſt his manner of Philoſophizing, againſt the great number of his Theſes, and particularly as to his diſcovery of the ſecret of the Jewiſh Cabbala, and laſtly he explains himſelf, and defends the Thirteen Propoſitions. As to the Firſt, he confeſſes that we ought to believe that the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt deſcended into Hell; but as to the manner of it there is nothing determin'd; and that the Soul being ſeparate from the Body is no more in a place by its preſence, but by its Operation; which was the only ſenſe of his Propoſition, and cannot be Condemn'd of Hereſie. But on the contrary, thoſe who Condemn it as ſuch, are in Error, becauſe they believe a thing to be of Faith, when it is not. As to the Second, That we muſt diſtinguiſh two things in Sin, the Averſion from God, and the Converſion to the Creature; and that we may alſo ſay, Pain is due to Sin in a two-fold ſenſe; either as it ſhall be effectually endur'd, or as it is that which is juſtly deſerv'd: That Mortal Sin as it is an Averſion from God, who is an Infinite Good, is objectively Infinite, and deſerves Eternal Pains; but that Eternal Pains will not be inflicted for Mortal Sin, except when the Sin is Infinite in its duration, viz. in caſe the Man continue in this Sin, and perſevere in it through all Eternity: For if he repents of it before his Death, and continue in it only for a finite time, his pain ſhall not be Infinite. As to the Third, that the Opinion of St. Thomas as to the Adoration of the Croſs, and of Images is this, that they are Worſhip'd as they are Images. That on the contrary, William Durant, Henry de Gandavo, Robert Holcot, and many other Divines maintain that we ought in no ways to adore an Image, nor the Croſs, but only to Worſhip that which they repreſent; that he follow'd this latter Opinion as more probable, and rejected that of St. Thomas. As to the Fourth, That he does not affirm, as Henry de Gandavo does, that abſolutely ſpeaking, the Divinity cannot be united to a Creature devoid of Reaſon, but only he ſuſpends his Judgment as to the Queſtion. As to the Fifth, That it ought to be reſtrain'd to thoſe Sciences which are not founded upon Revelation; and that it is of theſe only that he meant it. As to the Sixth, That it does no ways impeach the Real Preſence of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt. He debates the Queſtion, viz. Whether any other way may be alledg'd for explaining the Converſion of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, than that of Tranſubſtantiation, and whether to this end they may not pretend the Union of Jeſus Chriſt with the Bread; and after he has produc'd the Reaſons and Authorities on both ſides, he anſwers to thoſe which are brought to ſhew that another manner of explaining the Real Preſence may be maintain'd different from Tranſubſtantiation, and proves that his Concluſion does no wiſe favour this Opinion. As to the Seventh, He confeſſes, that the Hereſies attributed to Origen are Impious, and have been juſtly condemn'd by the Church; but he maintains that he can aver without Raſhneſs, that they have been falſly attributed to him; and that in caſe he had maintain'd them, he might believe that he had repented of them: That the Church has never determin'd that Origen is Damn'd; and laſtly, that tho' it had done ſo, he would not be oblig'd to hold its Judgment in this as a matter of Faith, becauſe it would be no more certain than that of Canonizing the Saints, which according to the Opinion of St. Thomas, is not of Faith. As to the Eighth Propoſition, he maintains it to be true, becauſe no Man can believe any thing, unleſs he has ſufficient Motives which oblige him to believe it; but then it does not follow from thence, that the Act of Faith is not free. As to the Ninth, That it may be maintain'd, becauſe we may affirm with St. Thomas, that there is a real diſtinction between the Exiſtence and Eſſence of the Bread, and that in this Caſe God may preſerve the Exiſtence to ſuſtain the Accidents. As to the Tenth, That the words of Conſecration in the mouth of Jeſus Chriſt are to be underſtood in a Literal ſenſe, becauſe he gave effectually to his Apoſtles his Body which was to be broken, and his Blood which was to be ſhed; but in the mouth of a Prieſt, who does not give his own Body and his own Blood, but the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, which is no more to be broken or ſhed, they are to be conſider'd only as a Narrative. As to the Eleventh, That the Miracles of Jeſus Chriſt prove indeed preciſely that he did them in the Name of God, but that which proves he was God, is that he did them by his own Authority. As to the Twelfth, He defends himſelf by the Authority of the Books attributed to St. Denis the Areopagite, who would not have any to ſay that God is an Intelligence. As to the Thirteenth, He obſerves that this ought not to be extended to all ſorts of knowledge, but only to that ſecret knowledge which the Soul has immediately from it ſelf.

His Treatiſe upon the Creation of the World, is rather an Eſſay than a perfect Work. The Treatiſe of Being and Unity is very Metaphyſical: That about the Dignity of Man, diſcovers divers Secrets of the Jewiſh Cabbala, of the Chaldean and Perſian Philoſophers. His Letters are full of Wit. There is a great deal of Reaſon and Learning in his Books againſt Aſtrology. In fine, all the Works of this Author are written with much Elegance, Eaſineſs, and Cleanneſs; and in them he diſcovers as well the ſharpneſs of his Wit, as the extent of his Knowledge.

His Nephew John Francis Picus of Mirandula, has alſo left us many Works, which are printed with the preceding in the Edition of Baſil, in 1601. viz. A Treatiſe of the Study of Divine and Human Philoſophy, wherein he compares Profane Philoſophy with the knowledge of the Scripture; and ſhews how much more excellent this latter is, and what uſe we ought to make of the former: A Treatiſe to prove that we ought to meditate on the Death of Jeſus Chriſt, and our own; a Treatiſe of Unity and Being, in defence of that written by his Unkle; a Treatiſe of the Imagination; two Treatiſes of Phyſicks, one of the firſt Matter, the other of the Elements; a Treatiſe of Imitation, addreſs'd to Bembus, together with the Anſwer of Bembus, and the Reply of Francis of Mirandula; Theorems of Faith, and of what we are oblig'd to believe; wherein he Treats very largely of the Principles of our Faith in 26 Theorems. After he has ſhewn that the Faith of Chriſtians is well grounded, he proves in the 1ſt. Theorem, that we cannot be Sav'd without Faith in Jeſus Chriſt; but he believes that God will ſhew that favour to all thoſe who obſerve the Law of Nature, as to give them Faith. In the 2d, That the Faith of a Chriſtian is the Gift of God. In the 3d, That all thoſe who have the Habit of Faith, give their conſent to the Truths of Faith, which are propos'd unto them, or at leaſt do not oppoſe them with obſtinacy. In the 4th, that every one is oblig'd to believe and obſerve all that the Catholick Church has determin'd, by an expreſs or tacit Deciſion, at leaſt as to what concerns Faith and Manners; for as to other things ſhe may deceive, and be deceiv'd; as in the Canonization of Saints, according to the Opinion of Thomas, and Panormitan. In the 5th, That every one is oblig'd to believe all that is litterally expreſs'd in the Old and New Teſtament. In the 6th, That we are alſo oblig'd to believe and practiſe all that the Church has learn'd or receiv'd from the Apoſtles. In the 7th, That the ſame is to be ſaid of thoſe Truths which follow by neceſſary Conſequence from ſuch as are founded upon the preceding Principles. In the 8th, That we ought alſo to believe the Definitions and Decrees of Popes, when the Church does not oppoſe them. In the 9th, That the Truths which God reveals to private Perſons are not of Faith, ſave only for thoſe to whom they are reveal'd. In the 10th, That we ought to obey the Deciſions of Biſhops in their Dioceſes, when they Condemn any Doctrines as contrary to Faith or Good Manners. In the 11th, That every one is oblig'd to believe and practiſe what is neceſſary for attaining happineſs. In the 12th, That among Chriſtians the difference of Dignities, States, and Underſtanding, obliges ſome to have more knowledge of Matters relating to Religion than others. In the 13th, That no Perſon is oblig'd to believe what one or many private Perſons teach, but only the Doctrine of the Catholick Church is to be embrac'd by every one. In the 14th, That none is oblig'd to follow the Opinion of Saints and Doctors, and to give credit to their Miracles and Revelations. In the 15th, That we are not oblig'd to give Credit to the Words or Writings of Men, even in ſuch things as do not relate to Faith and Manners. In the 16th, That in caſe a Council and the Pope be of contrary Opinions, we muſt adhere to the Deciſion of a Council; and when the Fathers of a Council are divided, we muſt follow the Majority. In the 17th, That when there are two Perſons who call themſelves Popes, we muſt endeavour to diſcover whoſe Election was Canonical; and in caſe it be difficult to know this, that it will be better to follow his Party who is thought to have the greateſt probability on his ſide, than to own no Pope at all. In the 18th, That when Divines or Interpreters differ about any Opinion, we muſt follow that which is thought to be moſt true; but if their Opinions happen to be equally probable, we muſt follow that which is taught by the moſt Famous and Holy Perſons. In the 19th, That in Matters of Controverſie and Faith, a Man is not at liberty to follow what Opinion he pleaſes, when the thing is once defin'd. In the 20th, That when it is not determin'd, we ought to follow what is moſt agreeable to the Goſpel, and beſt founded. In the 21th, That in caſe the Opinions appear to be equally reaſonable, we ought to ſhun that againſt which Anathema's are thundred out. In the 22th, That in Controverſies of Faith, which cannot be explain'd, we ought to ſuſpend our Judgment. In the 23th, That thoſe who have a pure heart, who pray to God without ceaſing, that they may know the Truth, and have an humble ſubmiſſive Spirit, cannot Err dangerouſly in matters of Faith. In the 24th, That thoſe Truths which one is not oblig'd to believe explicitely at the beginning, becauſe they were not explain'd and defin'd, become afterwards neceſſary Points of Faith when they are. In the 25th, That every Chriſtian is inſtructed, Spiritually nouriſh'd and perfected in the Unity of one only Church, and its Head. In the 26th, That 'tis not ſufficient to have Faith, but it muſt be accompanied with good Works, whereof God is the Author; that we muſt love God, and live in conformity to his Will. After this Treatiſe follows a Piece upon a paſſage of St. Hilarius, of the manner after which Jeſus Chriſt is in us, reported by Gratian in the Decree, Diſtinct. 2. de Conſecrat. A Tranſlation of the Exhortation of St. Juſtin to the Greeks; a Poem upon the Myſteries of the Croſs; Nine Books of the preſcience of Things, wherein he treats of the Divine Preſcience, and of that knowledge which ſome pretend to of things future, by Compacts with Evil Spirits, by Aſtrology, Chiromancy, Geomancy, &c. which he confutes at large in this Treatiſe; and therein he juſtifies theſe Predictions, which Prophets Divinely inſpir'd, Angels, and even God himſelf has given us of things future. The Six Books of the Examination of the Vanity of the Doctrine of the Gentiles, and of the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion, oppoſe the Errors of Philoſophers, and particularly thoſe of the Ariſtoteleans. There are alſo Four Books of Letters written by this Author, which are almoſt all upon Profane Subjects; at the end of which there is a Diſcourſe addreſs'd to Leo X. about the Reformation of Manners. There is not ſo much Wit, Vigor, Subtilty, nor Elegance in the Works of Francis Picus, as in thoſe of his Unkle; nor yet ſo much Learning, but there is in them more ſolidity and evenneſs. This Prince was unhappy during his Life; for he was driven out of his Dominions by his younger Brother Louis, and being reſtor'd in 1510. after the death of his Brother, he was again forc'd away two years after by the French; but at laſt he was reſtor'd a ſecond time, and enjoy'd peaceably his Principality, 'till the year 1533. when he was cruelly Maſſacred by Galeote the Son of Louis.

CHAP. V.

The History of the Greek Writers in the Fifteenth Century, and of their Works.

THO the Greek Empire was now in its Declension, yet it still afforded a great many Ingenious Men, who applied themselves to the Study of Eloquence, Philosophy, and Divinity, even till it was utterly ruined. The Disputes they had with the Latins oblig'd them to study the Subjects about which they contested, and to read their Ancient Writers: but at the same time these Disputations made them negligent of other matters, accustom'd their minds to excessive subtilty, and inspir'd them with such a Spirit of Cavilling and Contention, as they could not easily shake off afterwards. Those who liv'd in the Age whereof we are now speaking, had still some remainder of good Learning; but those who came after them, did continually degenerate, and at last sunk into that Ignorance, out of which we see them at this present. And therefore the Writers whereof we shall now give an account, may be look'd upon as the last good Authors among the Greeks.

Simeon, Archbishop of Thessalonica.

Simeon, Archbishop of Thessalonica, Flourish'd at the beginning of this Century, and render'd himself famous by his Merit, and his Learning. His principal Work is a Treatise of the Liturgy, wherein he explains what belongs to Churches, Ministers, Sacerdotal Habits, the Celebration of the Mass, and the other Ceremonies of the Church, which was publish'd by Father Goar in his Collection of the Greek Rituals: He wrote also a Book against Heresies by way of Dialogue, wherein he has Collected the passages of Scripture, and the Fathers about Matters of Faith, and the Sacraments of the Church, which is to be found in Manuscript in the Libraries of the Vatican, and the Emperor, and out of which Father Morin has given us an Extract about the Sacrament of Penance, at the end of his Book about Penance. There are also many other Treatises in Manuscript of this Author in the Vatican Library, of which Allatius has publish'd the following Titles; viz. His Answers to the Questions of Gabriel or Pentapolis; a Treatise of the Priesthood, Dedicated to a Monk; an Explication of the Creed; another Exposition of the Creed, wherein he shews whence the Articles were taken, and against whom they were drawn up; Twelve Articles which contain the whole Faith of Christians, a Treatise against the Innovations of the Latins. Simeon died in 1429.

Joseph Briennius, a Greek Monk.

Joseph Briennius, a Monk of Constantinople, Flourish'd under the Empire of Manuel Paleologus, to the time of the Patriarch Joseph, and discharg'd the Office of a Preacher. He has left us 18 Discourses about the Trinity, against the Doctrine of the Latins, concerning the procession of the Holy Spirit, which are to be found in Manuscript in the Vatican Library, where Allatius who reviews them, saw them. He quotes also 2 Sermons of the same Author about a Future Judgment, and Eternal Happiness. He observes in one of these Discourses, that he spoke it in the year 1420. after the Birth of our Lord.

Macarius Macrez, a Greek Monk.

Macarius Macrez, a Monk of mount Athos, Flourish'd about the same time. He was sent by the Emperor John Paleologus, with Mark, Isaac, into Italy, to Pope Martin V. where he died. [illegible] publish'd a Treatise about the Procession of the Holy Spirit, against the Latins.

Demetrius Chrysoloras.

Demetrius Chrysoloras, Flourish'd under the Empire of Manuel Paleologus, who had a great respect for him. He wrote against the Latins a Synoptical Discourse taken out of the Works of Nil of Thessalonica; a Dialogue, to shew that the Orthodox ought not to accuse others who are Orthodox, and lastly, a Dialogue against a Piece which Demetrius Cydonius wrote against Nil Cabasilas.

Macarius, Archbishop of Ancyra.

At the same time lived Macarius Archbishop of Ancyra, who wrote a Treatise against the Latins, as the said whereof he has added also Barlaam, Achyndin, and their Followers.

Nicolas Selengis.

At the same time also Nicolas Selengis publish'd against the Latins a Collection of Authorities out of the Fathers, about the Procession of the Holy Spirit, which falling into the hands of a Monk of Crete, call'd Elias, this Monk wrote a Letter to confute it, addressed to Pope [illegible] wherein he undertakes to shew that Selengis has [illegible] and the Passages of the Fathers which he alledges, whereupon the Latter wrote a very fierce Answer to the Letter of Elias. Allatius who saw this Work in Manuscript, relates a part of Selengis's Letter.

Elias, a Monk.

The Conferences of the Greeks and Latins at the Council of Florence, discover'd the Judgment and Eloquence of the most able Men among the Greeks, and gave occasion to many Books; but some among them secretly embrac'd the Union with the Latins, and wrote afterwards in defence of it; whereas on the contrary, others remain'd in their former Sentiments, and continu'd still to write against the Latins. Among the latter, the most considerable is * Marcus Eugenicus, who having, for a long time prepar'd to such Eloquence, was appointed Archbishop of Ephesus, and and made choice of to speak in behalf of the Greeks, at the Conferences they were to have in the Weft with the Latins. There he maintain'd their Cauſe with all the ſubtilty and vigour which they could deſire, and was almoſt the only Perſon who would not ſign the Decree of Union; and in fine, the firſt who ſtood up and wrote againſt it, after the Greeks who had been at Florence were return'd to Conſtantinople. There are in the 13th Tome of the Councils a Circular Letters of his addreſs'd to all Chriſtians, againſt the Council of Florence. He wrote a Profeſſion of Faith, which is to be found in Manuſcript in the Vatican Library, as alſo a Treatiſe about the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit againſt the Latins; a Letter to the Emperor John Paleologus, and another Letter to George Scholarius, againſt the Rites and Sacrifice of the Church of Rome. There is alſo a Treatiſe to ſhew that Conſecration is made not only by the words of our Lord, but alſo by the Prayer and Bleſſing of the Prieſt, which is Printed among the Liturgies. There is in the Acts of the Council of Florence, and in the Hiſtory of Sguropulus, a part of the Diſcourſes which he ſpoke in this Council, and there are in the King's Library ſome other Manuſcripts Works of the ſame Author; as 2 Diſcourſes of Purgatory, ſpoken at Ferrara; Anſwers to the Queſtions of the Cardinals, and about the Conſecration of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; the Solution of two Queſtions propos'd by the Emperor, and ſome Letters againſt the Latins.

Mark Eugenicus had a Brother nam'd John, who came with him to the Council of Florence, and there adher'd to the ſame Party, who alſo wrote a Piece againſt the Council of Florence, out of which Allatius relates ſome Fragments, in his Book of Purgatory. John Eugenicus.

George Gemiſtius Plethon, a Celebrated Platonick Philoſopher, did no leſs oppoſe the Union than Mark of Epheſus; he ſet himſelf againſt the Propoſal which was made of beginning a Conference with the Latins; he gave Advices contrary to the Union in the Council of Florence; he derided it when it was made, and ſtood up againſt it after he was return'd to Conſtantinople; he liv'd a long time, and wrote againſt the Latins. Allatius mentions two Treatiſes which he wrote about the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit, which are in Manuſcript, in the Vatican Library. Beſſarion who had been his Scholar, writing to his Children after his Death, gives a fine Character of him. There are many Hiſtorical or Philoſophical Works of this Author in Print. George Gemiſtius Plethon, a Greek Philoſopher.

To Gemiſtius we muſt joyn another Philoſopher, Nam'd Amirutzes of Trebizonde, who was preſent alſo at the Council of Florence, diſallow'd the Union, and wrote againſt it after he return'd to Conſtantinople; his End was unhappy, for he Apoſtatiz'd, and became a Mahometan. Amirutzes, a Greek Philoſopher.

We muſt not forget to place among the reſt Silveſter Sguropulus, or Scyropulus, Grand Eccleſiarch of the Church of Conſtantinople, who came with the Patriarch to the Council of Florence, was preſent there, was always againſt the Union, and yet Sign'd it; but he was no ſooner return'd to Conſtantinople, but he declar'd openly againſt it, and wrote the Hiſtory of the Council of Florence after ſuch a manner as was little to the advantage of that Council. This has been Tranſlated and Publiſh'd by Robert Creighton, a Doctor of the Religion in England, and afterwards Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and Printed at the Hague, in 1660. It is written by way of Memoirs, but with much ſineneſs and purity; the Tranſlation of it is not faithful in ſome places; * and the Tranſlator ſpeaking of the Ceremonies of the Church, does often make uſe of Contemptuous and Reproachful terms, which do not at all agree with thoſe which are in the Original. Silveſter Sguropulus, the Grand Eccleſiarch. * Here Dupin ſhould have mention'd the Places.

We muſt place in the number of thoſe who were Enemies to the Latins, George Scholarius a Monk, who is different from that George Scholarius who wrote for the Latins in the Council of Florence; for this of whom we ſpeak, was a Scholar and Friend to Mark of Epheſus, and is the Author of a Treatiſe againſt the Council of Florence, Printed in Greek at London, without the Date of the year. He wrote many Letters, which Allatius ſaw, and quoted. George Scholarius, Enemy to the Latins.

Laſtly, we muſt add to theſe Authors Manuel or Michel Apoſtolius, a Learned Man, but Poor, whom Cardinal Beſſarion maintain'd a long time; but he being mov'd by Envy againſt thoſe Learned Men, who deſerv'd Praiſe and Commendation from him, ſet himſelf to Write againſt them, and ſo drew upon his head the Rebukes of Beſſarion, who abandon'd him; inſomuch that he was forc'd to retire about the end of this Century into the Iſle of Crete, where he got a livelyhood by Writing Books, and teaching Children. Then it was that he wrote a Treatiſe againſt the Doctrine of the Latin Church, contain'd in the Decree of Union made by the Council of Florence, which is publiſh'd by Monſieur Le Moine, in his Collection of Pieces. He wrote alſo a Treatiſe of the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit againſt Plethon, wherein he Reprimands that Philoſopher, becauſe he did not found his Doctrine upon Principles of Divinity, but upon Arguments of Philoſophy, whereof Allatius makes mention. Manuel or Michel Apoſtolius.

Among the Greeks who ſincerely embrac'd the Union and maintain'd it to the laſt there was none more Illuſtrious than Beſſarion, who from being a Monk of the Order of St. Baſil, was advanc'd to be Archbiſhop of Nice, that he might aſſiſt and ſpeak in behalf of the Greeks, at the Conferences with the Latins. He behav'd himſelf worthily in this Employment, and ſpoke with a great deal of Eloquence in the Council of Florence. After he had Diſputed earneſtly for the Greeks, he came to a Tempeſt, and was the chief promoter of the Union: By this means he became odious to the Greeks, who were diſpleas'd with it, and therefore he ſtay'd in Italy, and was honour'd with the Dignity of a Cardinal, or rather he honoured the Purple which he wore, by his Learning, Wiſdom and Piety. He deſerv'd to have been Pope, and ſhould have been ſo, if he would have made ſome advances to obtain that Supream Dignity, but he preferr'd Retirement, Study and Repoſe before Beſſarion, a Cardinal.

Scholarius, before the Patriarchal Dignity, and Metrophanes [illegible] Confessors seek after the Truth

Joseph, Bishop of Methone.

Gregory Mamas, the Protosyncelle.

Andrew, Archbishop of Rhodes.

Isidore, Archbishop of Kiovia.

Acts in 1472. After [illegible] a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Spirit, and of the Sacrament of the Eucharist, and of the Sacrifice of the Mass, wherein he endeavours to prove that the Bread in the Sacrament is truly and really the Body of Jesus Christ, and that the Priest consecrates and offers up the Body of our Lord in the Sacrifice of the Mass. He wrote also Reflections upon the Objections of the Greeks, by explaining their Liturgy according to the Doctrine of the Latin Church; a Confession of Faith, which he presented to the Emperor Constantine Dragases; a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Spirit, and the Council of Florence, against Mark Ephesus; concerning the Procession of the Holy Spirit, and the Doctrine of the Latin Church; an Apology for the Council of Florence, related in the 13th Tome of the Councils; a Treatise of the Procession of the Holy Spirit, an Apology for Pope Eugenius, against the Calumnies of Palamas, Bishop of Ephesus, and those of the Patriarchate of Constantinople, and an Answer to the Calumnies of Plusiades about the Procession of the Holy Spirit; which works were published at Rome, and printed at Rome, in 1630. These are all the Theological Works of this Author. I ro mention those of Philosophy, which discover that he was a great Philosopher. He defends the Philosophy of Plato in 4 Books against George of Trebizonde, who he wrote about that Philosophers Books of Laws, and a Treatise of Nature and Art, addressed to George of Trebizonde; he Translated the Metaphysicks of Aristotle, and Theophrastus' Works were printed at Venice in 1503. and 1516. He wrote a Letter to the Governours of the Children of Venice, Magnæ Paideiæ, about their Education, which is published by Possevin, in his Notes upon the History of Florence, printed at Ingolstat, in 1603. and by Hanschius in 1613. There was also printed at Ursberg in 1603. An Exhortation to Christian Princes to make War against the Turks; and Bzovius has inserted in the History of Ursberg, which Bzovius made upon the death of the Emperor Manuel Palæologus. These are all the Works of this Author in Print, and in Manuscript.

There was one Greek Author of this time, who has left us above Works as a Testimony of the Latin Faith, George Scholarius, who was Professor at Constantinople, who being Consulted at all by Gregory Mamas, about the project of Union, answer'd him very freely against it, and afterwards with him into the Council, and was present at the Council of Florence, where he declared for the Union. He wrote upon this subject a Letter addressed to the Greek Bishops, and 3 Discourses to the Council about Peace, and after the Council was ended, he defended Publickly the Articles of the Decree, about the Procession of the Holy Spirit, Unleavened Bread, Purgatory, the Happiness of Souls after Death, and about the Primacy of the Pope, in an Excellent Apology printed in Latin at Dillingen, in 1581. in Greek at Rome, in 1577. and in Greek and Latin in 1628. He wrote also a Treatise about the Procession of the Holy Spirit, against Mark of Ephesus, which remains in Manuscript, and was never yet printed. But besides these Books of Controversie with the Greeks, he wrote also other Treatises about Religion, viz. A Dialogue about the Perfections of the Trinity, and Incarnation, between a Christian and a Philosopher, printed at Basil in 1559. and 1563. A Abridgment of the Dogmata of Religion, printed at Basil in 1559. and at Rome in 1581. A Treatise of Predestination, addressed to Joseph a Monk of Thessalonica, printed at Basil in 1559. and at the end of St. Basil's Works of the Edition in 1618. A Discourse about the Trinity, printed at Venice in 1501. all which Works are in Latin, in the last Bibliotheque of the Fathers. He wrote also many other Treatises which are in Manuscript, or lost. This Author wrote with ease, abounds in words, is Noble in his Expressions, and Solid in his Reasonings.

Joseph Bishop of Methone, maintained also the Union made at the Council of Florence, and wrote upon this Subject an Answer to the Treatise of Mark of Ephesus against the Council of Florence, printed at the end of the Acts of this Council.

Gregory Mamas the Protosyncelle, Confessor to the Emperor, and Governour of Constantinople, after he had done much towards the Union, was [illegible] of Florence, maintain'd it also against Mark of Ephesus, Syncelle to the Patriarch of Jerusalem, wrote against the decree of Union, and publishing all the Articles which it contains, he has excellent Apology which is at the end of the Acts of this Council. He wrote also a Treatise of this Author about the Procession of the Holy Spirit, and Answer to Mark of Ephesus, wherein he justifies the doctrine of the Latins, and explains the Nicene Creed. It was publish'd by Allatius, in the first Tome of Graecia Orthodoxa.

To these Authors we must joyn John Plusiadenus, Author of a Book of Allatius, an Apology for the Council, printed at Rome in 1630. but this Book is [illegible] Mark of Ephesus, in some Manuscripts.

Andrew Archbishop of Rhodes, who was sent by [illegible] he made a Discourse, delivered in the Council of Florence.

Isidore Archbishop of Kiovia in Russia, who was also one [illegible] ought rather to be considered as one for the Latins, than for the Greeks, since he [illegible] the Latin Church.

We may alſo place in this Rank the Monk Hilarion, who wrote a Tract of the uſe of Unleavened Bread in the Euchariſt, according to the doctrine of the Latins, publiſh'd by Allatius in the firſt Tome of the Orthodox Faith, Hilarion, a Greek Monk.

As to George of Trebizonde, and John Argyropulus, who retir'd into Italy, the former before the taking of Conſtantinople, they may be look'd upon rather as Learned Men, than as Divines. Nevertheleſs the former wrote a Letter to John Paleologus, exhorting him to come to Florence, rather than to Baſil; 2 Treatiſes of the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit, againſt the Sentiment of the Greeks, which are publiſh'd by Allatius in the firſt Tome of Orthodox Greece. He Treats alſo in the laſt, of the Unity of the Catholick Church, and of the Primacy of the Church of Rome; and alledges that the 5 Patriarchal Churches have a kind of Subordination one to another, according to their Rank and Degree; and that during the Vacancy of the Church of Rome, the Government of the Univerſal Church belongs to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. This Author wrote alſo a Diſcourſe upon theſe words of Jeſus Chriſt, about St. John the Evangeliſt, If I will that he tarry, &c. wherein he alledges that St. John never died; which was printed at Baſil in 1543. and the Martyrdom of St. Andrew of Chio, who was Martyr'd by the Turks, which is Related by Surius, at the 22th of May. He Tranſlated many Works of the Fathers, viz. The Commentaries of St. Cyril upon the Goſpel of St. John, and his 14 Treatiſes about the Trinity, many Homilies of St. Chryſoſtom, the Treatiſe of St. Gregory of Nyſſen, of the Life of Moſes, the Books of St. Baſil againſt Eunomius, and Euſebius's Treatiſe of Evangelical Preparation. As to John Argyropulus, the only Theological Treatiſe which we have of his, is a Work of the Proceſſion of the Holy Spirit, in defence of the Decree of the Council of Florence, which is publiſh'd by Allatius in the firſt Tome of Orthodox Greece. George of Trebizonde, and Argyropulus.

There are alſo ſome other Greek Authors of this Century, whoſe Works are purely Hiſtorical, as George Phranza an Officer of the Emperor's Court, who wrote the Byzantine Hiſtory, from the year 1260. to the year 1476. which is publiſh'd by Pontanus, and printed at Ingolſtadt, in 1604. George Phranza.

Matthew Camariote, who wrote a Letter about the taking of Conſtantinople by the Turks, made Commentaries upon Syneſius, and a Treatiſe of the Light of Thabor, againſt the Barlaamites. Matthew Camariote.

Ducas wrote the Byzantine Hiſtory from the year 1341. to the year 1462. which was printed at Paris in 1649. Ducas, a Greek Hiſtorian.

George Codinus Curolopata, was the Author of divers Pieces about the State, the Empire and City of Conſtantinople, which are printed at Paris in 1655. George Codinus Curolopata.

Laonicus Chalcondylus wrote the Hiſtory of the Turks, from the year 1300. to the year 1463, which is printed in Latin at Paris, in 1550. and at Baſil in 1556, and 1562. in Greek and Latin at Geneva, in 1615. and at Paris, in 1650. Laonicus Chalcondylus.

Nicolas Secundinus, who ſerv'd as an Interpreter to the Council of Florence, wrote an Abridgment of the Hiſtory of the Turks, until the Taking of Conſtantinople, which is printed at Louvain, in 1553. Nicolas Secundinus.

of Divinity, Nam'd John Huſs, or of Huſſenitz, the Place of his Birth, who had taught Grammar, and Philoſophy, and having afterwards applied himſelf to the Study of the Holy Scripture, and the Latin Fathers, was become an able Preacher, and Chaplain in the Church of the Holy Innocents, call'd Bethlehem, at Prague. He was one of thoſe who were moſt reſpected in the Univerſity of that City, becauſe he had obtain'd of Wenceſlaus the King, the Revocation of the Privileges of other Nations, in favour of the Bohemians; for the Univerſity of Prague being Founded by Charles IV. after the Example of that at Paris, it was compos'd of four Nations, Bohemia, Bavaria, Saxony, and Poland. Thoſe of the three latter Nations being almoſt all Germans, and having 3 Voices againſt one, were become abſolute Maſters of the greateſt part of the Profeſſors Chairs and Places, and Governors of all the Affairs of the Univerſity, Diſpoſers of the Chief Benefices in the City, to the utter Excluſion of the Bohemians, who depended entirely upon them, until that John Huſs obtain'd of King Wenceſlaus the Revocation of the Privileges of theſe other Nations, and the Reſtoration of the Bohemians to the Principal Places of the Univerſity. The Profeſſors of other Nations being offended at this Treatment, retir'd to Miſnia, and carried away with them more than 2000 Scholars. John Huſs having by this means acquir'd a great deal of Credit and Authority in the Univerſity, eaſily perſwaded many of its Members that the firſt Order of the Archbiſhop was an Infringment of the Privileges and Liberties of the Univerſity, which the Members ought to enjoy, whereby they were allow'd to Read all ſorts of Books; and that the ſecond contain'd an intolerable Error, in that it ſeem'd to affirm that there was nothing but the Body of Jeſus Chriſt under the ſpecies of Bread, and nothing but his Blood in the Cup. Upon this Ground they appeal'd from theſe Orders to Pope Gregory XII. who was own'd for Pope in Germany. Their Appeal was receiv'd, and the Archbiſhop of Prague was Cited to Rome by the Pope. But this Archbiſhop having inform'd Alexander V. that theſe Errors of Wickleſ began to take root in Bohemia, by the means of their Sermons who had read his Books, obtain'd from him a Bull, whereby the Pope Commiſſions him to hinder the publiſhing of theſe Errors in his Province.

John Huſs ſends the Book of Wickleſ.

In vertue of this Bull, he Condemn'd by a Definitive Sentence the Writings of John Wickleſ, proceeded againſt 4 Doctors who had not brought to him the Copies which they had of them, and by another Sentence forbad them to Preach in any Chappels, whatever Privilege they might have. John Huſs, and ſome other Members of the Univerſity of Prague, and the Patron of the Chappel of Bethlehem, made their proteſtations againſt the Proceeding of the Archbiſhop of Prague; and on the 25th of June, in 1410. entred a new Appeal from his Sentences. The Affair being carried before John XXIII. he order'd that John Huſs, who was accus'd of Preaching many Errors and Hereſies, ſhould appear in Perſon at the Court of Rome, and granted a Commiſſion to Cardinal Colonna to Cite him. John Huſs excus'd himſelf, and ſo order'd the matter, that Wenceſlaus King of Bohemia, the Queen, the Barons, and the Univerſity, ſent to the Pope to pray him that he would diſpence with John Huſs's Perſonal preſence; that he would not ſuffer the Kingdom of Bohemia to be defam'd by accuſing them of Hereſie, that he would give leave to Preach the word of God freely in their Chappels, and that he would ſend Legates to ſit upon the Place, at the Expence of the Bohemians, for correcting Abuſes, if any ſuch there were. John Huſs ſent 3 Proctors, who appear'd for him before Cardinal Colonna, and alledg'd Excuſes for his Abſence; proteſting that they were ready to anſwer on his behalf; but the Cardinal ſhew'd no regar'd to them, declar'd him Contumacious, and as ſuch, Excommunicated him. Theſe Proctors having appeal'd to the Pope, he appointed the Cardinals of Aquileia, Brancas, Venice, and Zabarella, to draw up the Proceſs of this Affair. Theſe Commiſſioners confirm'd the Judgment given by Cardinal Colonna, and carried the matter higher, by extending the Excommunication which was paſs'd againſt John Huſs, againſt his Diſciples, and his Friends; they declar'd him a Ringleader of Hereſie, and pronounc'd an Interdict againſt him. But notwithſtanding this Deciſion, from which he appeal'd to a future Council, he continu'd ſtill to Preach and publiſh his New Doctrins by word of mouth, and by Writing, tho' he was driven away from the Church of Bethlehem, and had retir'd to the place of his Nativity. At this time he wrote many Letters, and Compos'd his Treatiſe of Reading the Books of Hereticks; wherein he maintains, that it cannot be abſolutely forbidden; but he particularly juſtifies Wickleſ's Book of the Trinity, anſwers a Treatiſe written againſt Wickleſ, by one Stokes an Engliſh-man, and another nameleſs Author, who had written againſt him, and accus'd him of Diſobedience.

John Huſs Condemn'd at Rome.

After this, he ſets himſelf to declaim againſt the Clergy, the Pope, and the Cardinals: At the ſame time he wrote a Diſcourſe to prove that the Vices and Faults of Eccleſiaſticks ought to be reprov'd in Sermons. He handles alſo other Queſtions, whereof one reſpects the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, of which many pretend to have a Relick, and in what ſenſe Jeſus Chriſt may be called Bread. As to the Firſt, He determines, that Jeſus Chriſt being Glorified, did take up with him all his own Blood, and that there is no Remains of it on Earth; and that the greateſt part of the Miracles which are reported about the Apparition of the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, are the Frauds and Impoſtures of Covetous Men. In the Second, He maintains that Jeſus Chriſt may be called Bread; but neither in the one nor the other does he depart from the Doctrin of the Church, about the Tranſubſtantiation of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

John Huſs perſiſts in his Opinions.

At the ſame time Peter of Dreſden being driven out of his own Country, came to Prague, and perſwaded Jacobelle of Miſnia, a Prieſt of the Chappel of St. Michael, to preach up the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Communion under the Species of Wine. The Huſſites embrac'd this Opinion, and began to Preach that the uſe of the Cup was neceſſary to the Laity, and that the Sacrament ſhould be Adminiſtred under both kinds. Sbinko ſeeing this Diſorder, implor'd the help of Wenceſlaus; but when this Prince did not afford any Cure to theſe Novelties, the Archbiſhop had recourſe to Sigiſmund King of Hungary, who promis'd him that he would come quickly into Bohemia, to ſet in order the Affairs of the Church in that Kingdom; but before he could make this Journey Sbinko died in Hungary. Wenceſlaus Advanc'd to his Place an Ignorant Man, Covetous, and Negligent, Nam'd Albicus, who never troubled himſelf about his Church, nor took any care to oppoſe the Huſſites, but ſuffer'd them to continue their Sermons.

The Bulls of John XXIII. Publiſh'd at Prague, in 1412. againſt Laodiſlaus King of Naples, by which the Pope order'd a Croiſade for making War with this Prince, and granted Indulgences to all thoſe who ſhould go to this War, furniſh'd ample Matter to John Huſs, who was now return'd to Prague, who Declaim'd againſt the Indulgences, the Croiſades, and Confuted theſe Bulls. The Populace being animated by his Diſcourſes, began to publiſh that John XXIII. was Antichriſt; the Magiſtrates having cauſed ſome of the moſt Seditious to be apprehended, the Common People put themſelves in Arms to deliver them, and the Magiſtrates had much ado to pacifie them, by promiſing that no hurt ſhould be done to the Priſoners. But they were ſo far from keeping their word, that they order'd them to be ſecretly Executed in the Judgment-Hall; and the Blood which ran out from the place of Execution, diſcovering the Maſſacre of theſe Men to the Common People, they took Arms again, carried off by force the Bodies of thoſe who were put to death, Interr'd them Honourably in the Church of Bethlehem, and look'd upon them as Martyrs.

The Magiſtrates having a mind to publiſh their Reaſons why they oppoſed the Doctrin of the Huſſites, call'd together many Doctors of Divinity at Prague, who drew up a Cenſure of Forty Five Propoſitions of Wicklef, and put a Preface before it; wherein they aſſert the Authority of the Pope, the Cardinals, and the Church of Rome, and accuſe the Huſſites of Faction. It was about this time that John Huſs wrote a great many Books and Diſcourſes againſt the Cenſure of theſe Doctors, whom he calls Prætorians. He maintains ſome of the Articles which they had Condemn'd, viz. Thoſe which concern'd the Liberty of Preaching, the Power of Secular Princes over the Revenues of Eccleſiaſticks, the voluntary payment of Tithes, and the forfeiture which Spiritual and Temporal Lords make of their Power, when they live in Mortal Sin.

He wrote a Great Treatiſe about the Church, to confute the Preface of that Cenſure, wherein he maintains that the Church conſiſts only of thoſe who are predeſtinate; That Jeſus Chriſt is the Head and Foundation of it; That the Pope and Cardinals are only Members of it, and that the other Prelates are Succeſſors to the Apoſtles as well as they; That none is oblig'd to obey them, but when they Command what is agreeable to the Law of God, and not in things that are evil, or indifferent; That an Excommunication which is groundleſs does not bind at all. He anſwers alſo particularly the Writings of Stephen Paletz, of Staniſlaus Zuoima, and of Eight other Doctors, who had written againſt the Cenſure, and caus'd a Writing to be fix'd up upon the Church of Bethlehem, wherein he accuſes the Clergy of Six Errors. Firſt, Of believing that the Prieſt by ſaying Maſs becomes the Creator of his Creator. Second, Of ſaying that we ought to believe in the Virgin, in a Pope, and in the Saints. Third, That the Prieſts can when they will, and when it pleaſes them, remit the pain and guilt of Sin. Fourth, That every one muſt obey his Superiors, whether they Command what is juſt, or unjuſt. Fifth, That every Excommunication, juſt, or unjuſt, binds the Excommunicate. Sixth, About Simony. He wrote two particular Pieces againſt the ſecond of theſe pretended Errors; wherein he confeſſes that we muſt believe the Church, and the Saints; but maintains, that it cannot be ſaid that we muſt believe in the Church, as 'tis ſaid that we muſt believe in God, which was never affirm'd by any Catholick. He inſinuates in one of theſe two Pieces, that Confeſſion to a Prieſt is not neceſſary. He wrote alſo at the ſame time three thick Volumes againſt the Clergy; the 1ſt, Entituled The Anatomy of the Members of Antichriſt; the 2d, Of the Kingdom of the People, and the Life and Manners of Antichriſt; the 3d, Of the Abomination of Prieſts, and Carnal Monks in the Church of Jeſus Chriſt, and ſome other Tracts againſt Traditions, about the Unity of the Church, Evangelical perfection, the Myſtery of Iniquity, and the Diſcovery of Antichriſt. His heat and paſſion tranſport him againſt the Clergy in all theſe Pieces, and the ſame Principles and Errors are found in them.

John Huſs goes to the Council of Conſtance.

The Council of Conſtance being now appointed, the Pope and Emperor Invited John Huſs to come thither, and give an account of his Doctrin; and that he might do it with all freedom, the Emperor granted him a ſafe Conduct, whereby he gave him leave to come freely to the Council, and return from it again. John Huſs before his Departure out of Prague, caus'd ſome Placarts to be fix'd upon the Gates of the Churches in that City, wherein he declares that he went to the Council to anſwer all the Accuſations that were made againſt him, and that he was ready to appear at the Court of Conrad Archbiſhop of Prague, to hear all thoſe who had any thing to ſay againſt him, and to juſtifie his Innocence. He demanded alſo of the Biſhop of Nazaret the Inquiſitor, whether he had any thing to propoſe againſt him, from whom he received a favourable Teſtimony; but when he preſented himſelf at the Court of the Archbiſhop who had called called an Aſſembly againſt him, he was denied admiſſion. After this he parted from Prague, accompanied with the Lord Wences of Dunbar, and John of Chlum, to go to Conſtance; and thro' all the Cities as he went, he made publick Declarations that he was going to the Council to juſtifie himſelf, and to anſwer the Accuſations that ſhould be made againſt him; and exhorted all thoſe who had any thing to ſay againſt him, to be there preſent. He arriv'd at Conſtance November the 3*d*, in the year 1414. His Adverſary Stephen Paletz came thither a little time after; and having joyn'd with Michael of Cauſis, who had formerly been a Pariſh-Prieſt at Prague, but went from thence to ſtay at the Court of Rome, they declared themſelves to be his Accuſers, and drew up a Memorial of his Errors, which they preſented to the Pope, and Prelates of the Council.

John Huſs goes to the Council of Conſtance.

John Huſs was Order'd twenty ſix days after his Arrival, to appear before the Pope, and Cardinals; thither he went, accompanied with the Lord John of Chlum, and declar'd to them that he was ready to ſubmit to their Correction, in caſe he ſhould be Convicted of having taught any Error. The Cardinals afterwards retir'd to Conſult what they ſhould do with John Huſs, and left him in the mean time under a ſtrong Guard. The Reſult of their Conſultation was, that he ſhould be put in ſafe Cuſtody; whereupon they told John of Chlum that he might withdraw, but as to John Huſs, he was Conducted to the Chantry-Houſe of the Church of Conſtance, where he was kept for Eight days, and from thence remov'd to the Priſon of the Convent of Friars-Preachers, where he fell Sick. His Accuſers preſented a Petition to the Pope, containing the Heads of the Accuſation which they had to propoſe againſt him, and deſir'd that Commiſſioners might be nam'd to draw up his Proceſs. The Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and two Biſhops were the Perſons Commiſſion'd, who heard many Witneſſes againſt John Huſs, and order'd his Books to be Examin'd. While this Proceſs was drawing up, Pope John XXIII. retir'd from Conſtance, as we have already ſaid, and his Officers who had the Charge of keeping John Huſs follow'd him, and left the Keys of the Priſon to the Emperor Sigiſmund, and the Cardinals, who deliver'd John Huſs into the hands of the Biſhop of Conſtance, by whoſe Order he was ſhut up in a Caſtle beyond the Rhine, near to Conſtance. The Council at this time in Seſſion 5. April the 6th, in 1415. appointed the Cardinals of Cambray, and St. Mark, the Biſhop of Dol, and the Abbot of the Ciſtercians, to finiſh the Proceſs of John Huſs, and renew the Condemnations which were paſſed againſt the Doctrin of Wickleſ, eſpecially that of the 45 Articles Cenſur'd by the Univerſity of Paris, and Prague; and in the next Seſſion, held the 17th of the ſame Month, the Council joyn'd to theſe Commiſſioners a Biſhop for each Nation, and granted a Commiſſion to Cite Jerom of Prague, the Companion and Friend of John Huſs, who was next to him one of the principal Preachers of this new Doctrin. He had Travelled very much, and was admitted Maſter of Arts, not only in the Univerſity of Prague, but alſo in thoſe of Paris, Collen, and Heidelberg, where he was accuſed of making diſturbances. He had Travelled into England, where he had Copied out the Books of Wickleſ, and return'd into Prague, leven'd with his Doctrin, he combin'd with John Huſs to propagate it. He arriv'd the 4th of April at Conſtance, and underſtanding how John Huſs had been treated, and that he alſo would be ſeiſed, he retired the next day to Iberlingen, an Imperial City near Conſtance, and wrote from thence to the Emperor and Council to deſire a ſafe-Conduct; one was preſented to him, which gave him leave to come, but not to return. He cauſed a Proteſtation to be fixed up, wherein he declares that he would appear before the Council to juſtifie himſelf, if a ſafe Conduct were granted him, and demands of the Lords of Bohemia an Act of his Declaration. After this he began his Journey to return into Bohemia; but he was ſtop'd at Hirſau, by the Officers of John the Son of Prince Clement, Count Palatine, who had the Government of Sultzbach, and afterwards carried away to Conſtance, by Louis, the Son of the ſame Prince.

The Proceſs of John Huſs, drawn up in the Council of Conſtance.

The Council before they proceeded againſt the Perſons of John Huſs, and Jerom of Prague, in the 18th Seſſion, held May 4. Condemn'd the 45 Articles of the Doctrin of Wickliff, which were Cenſur'd by the Univerſities of Paris, and Prague: The firſt 24 are the Propoſitions Cenſur'd by Simon Courtnay, Archbiſhop of Canterbury. The 25th, That all thoſe who are obliged to Pray for ſuch who intangle themſelves with Temporal Affairs are Simoniacks. The 26th, That the Prayer of a Reprobate is of no value. The 27th, That all things happen by an Abſolute Neceſſity. The 28th, That Confirmation, Ordination, and the Conſecration of Churches are reſerv'd to the Pope and Biſhops from no other Motive but Covetouſneſs and Ambition. The 29th, That Univerſities, Studies, Colleges, and Degrees were introduc'd only by a vain Superſtition, and do as much miſchief to the Church as the Devil. The 30th, That we ought not to fear the Excommunication of the Pope, becauſe it is the Cenſure of Antichriſt. The 31ſt, That thoſe who found Cloyſters commit a Sin, and thoſe who enter into them are Diabolical Men. The 32d, That to Enrich the Church, is to act contrary to the Law of Jeſus Chriſt. The 33d, That St. Sylveſter and Conſtantine fail'd in Endowing the Church. The 34th, That all the Regulars of the Order of Mendicants are Hereticks, and all thoſe who give them Alms are Excommunicate. The 35th, That thoſe who enter into Religious Houſes, put themſelves out of a capacity of working out their own Salvation, and that they ſhall never be Sav'd, unleſs they Apoſtatize. The 36th, That the Pope and all the Clergy who have Revenues are Hereticks, as alſo all thoſe who approve them. The 37th, That the Church of Rome is the Synagogue of Satan, and the Pope is not the immediate Vicar of Jeſus Chriſt and the Apoſtles.

The Condemnation of the Articles of Wickliff, by the Council of Conſtance.

The Condemnation of the Articles of Wickleff, by the Council of Constance.

The 38th, That the Decretal Epistles are Apocryphal, that they pervert Men from the Faith of Jesus Christ, and that the Clergy who study them are Fools. The 39th, That the Emperor, and Secular Princes were seduc'd by the Devil, when they Endow'd the Church with Temporal Revenues. The 40th, That the Election of a Pope by the Cardinals, was introduc'd by the Devil. The 41st, That it is not necessary to Salvation, to believe that the Church of Rome is Supream over all other Churches. This Article may be explain'd after the following manner; It is an Error if by the Roman Church be understood the Universal Church, or a General Council, and in as much as it denies the Primacy of the Pope over other particular Churches. The 42d, That tis a folly to give credit to the Indulgences of the Pope, and the Bishops. The 43d, That the Oaths which are made for the confirming of Civil Contracts and Matters of Commerce, are unlawful. The 44th. That Austin, Benedict, and Bernard are Damn'd, if they did not repent of receiving Revenues, and Instituting Religious Orders; and that all from the Pope down to the meanest of the Regulars are Hereticks. The 45th, That it was the Devil who introduc'd all Religious Houses. The Council Condemn'd, together with these 45 Propositions, the Books of Wickleff, and forbad the Reading of 'em, declar'd him a Notorious and Obstinate Heretick, who died in Heresie, Anathamatiz'd, and Condemn'd his Memory, Ordain'd that his Body and Bones should be dug up, if they could be distinguish'd, and thrown out of Holy-Ground.

The Continuation of the Process against John Huss.

On the Fourteenth of the same Month, the Lords of Bohemia and Poland presented a Petition to the Emperor and Council, wherein they desir'd John Huss to be set at liberty, who had been Seiz'd and Imprison'd contrary to the safe Conduct of his Imperial Majesty, and complain'd of a Report which was spread about, that in Bohemia the Blood of Jesus Christ was carried in Vessels Unconsecrated, and that Coblers heard the Confessions of the Faithful, and Administred the Sacrament of the Eucharist.

The Bishop of Litomissel perceiving that this Accusation concern'd him, desir'd that he might have leave to answer for himself. The Council put off this Affair till the 17th of May, on which day a Bishop answer'd in the Name of the Council, that John Huss had no safe Conduct when he was first Summon'd, that he had it not till after he had been Cited to Rome, and Excommunicated by Alexander V. That he was a Ring-leader of Heresie, and that he had Preach'd his wicked Doctrin even since his arrival at Constance, and therefore it was just to seize him. The Bishop of Litomissel said that it was certain the new Sectaries gave the Communion in Bohemia to the Laity in both kinds, and affirm'd that 'twas necessary to Communicate after this manner; and that if the Clergy oppos'd it, they ought to be look'd upon as Sacrilegious; that he knew also that the Blood of Jesus Christ was carried to the Sick in Unconsecrated Vessels, and that he had heard from Persons worthy of Credit, that a certain Woman of that Sect had taken the Communion by her self, and had said that the Absolution of a good Lay-man was of more value than that of a wicked Priest; moreover, that he had never said that the Coblers did take Confessions, or Administer the Sacraments; but that it was to be fear'd this might come to pass, unless the Council provided a Remedy against it. Two days after, the Lords of Bohemia presented a Memorial to the Council, in Reply to the Answer which had been made to them on behalf of the Council; wherein they maintain'd that John Huss had a safe Conduct from the Emperor, from the 25th of July, of the preceding year; that it was none of his fault that he had not appear'd at Rome, which he could not do without danger of his Life; and that it was not at all true that he had Preach'd at Constance, for he never went for one moment out of the Hospital where he was Lodged. They produc'd at the same time a Declaration which John Huss made the first of September, 1411. wherein he protests that he was falsly accused of teaching that the substance of material Bread remain'd in the Eucharist; that the Body of Jesus Christ is in the Host when it is elevated, and is not in it afterwards; that a Priest who lives in Mortal Sin does not Consecrate; that the Lords may take away the Temporal Revenues of Churches, and refuse to pay them Tythes; that Indulgences are of no use, that Clergy-men may lawfully be kill'd, and some other Errors. The Council not making any Answer to the Bohemians, they presented to it a new Libel on the last day of May, wherein they declare that John Huss had many times protested that he would not depart from the Truth, nor teach any Error: They maintain that the Propositions which his Enemies had drawn out of his Books were mutilated and falsified, on purpose to put him to death; they prayed the Council to set him at liberty, that he might be heard for himself, and offer'd to give Bond for him: To this Libel they joyn'd the Certificate of the Bishop of Nazaret. The Patriarch of Antioch answer'd in the Name of the Council, that they could not set John Huss at Liberty; but that on the 5th of June they would send for him to the Council, and permit him to speak for himself, and give him a favourable hearing. The Lords of Bohemia meeting with a refusal from the Council, address'd to Sigismund, but they could obtain nothing more from him.

In the Congregation which was held June the 5th, it was Resolv'd, that before they sent for John Huss, the Articles drawn out of his Books should be Examin'd, and that they should be Condemn'd even without hearing him; but the Emperor upon the Request of the Lords of Bohemia, caus'd to tell the Prelates that they must hear him, before they Condemn'd him. Whereupon he was sent for, and was order'd to own his Books; and then the first of the Articles whereof he was accus'd was read unto him. He had a mind to defend himself, but he could not be heard that day. On the 7th of June the Emperor came to the Congregation of the

Prelates,

Prelates, and John Huss being brought thither was accus'd of teaching, that the Substance of material Bread remain'd in the Eucharist after Consecration, which he constantly denied. 'Twas objected to 'em, That he had followed the Errors of Wickleff; to which he answered, That he had taught no Error, and that he knew not whether Wickleff had taught any in England; but that he did not oppose the Condemnation of the Books of Wickleff by the Archbishop of Prague, upon any other Account, but because he had condemn'd some Articles which he thought maintainable, viz. That Pope Sylvester and Constantine had done ill in granting Revenues to the Church; and that as to the Article which affirms, That a Priest being in mortal Sin, doth not Consecrate nor Baptize; he had limited it by saying, That he does Consecrate and Baptize, but unworthily, because being in mortal Sin, he is an unworthy Minister of the Sacraments of Jesus Christ. He maintain'd also, That Tithes were Alms, tho' Men were obliged to give them. Lastly, he declar'd, That he had never obstinately maintained any of Wickleff's Propositions; but that he did not approve of condemning them without bringing Reasons for the Condemnation taken out of the Holy Scripture. Afterwards he related the difference which he had with his Archbishop, and how having appealed from his Sentence to Rome, and not being able to obtain Justice there, he had afterwards appealed to Jesus Christ. He confess'd, That he had sometimes said, that he had some Hopes that John Wickleff was saved, and that he could wish his Soul were where his was; but he deny'd that he had stir'd up the common People to take up Arms, or was the Cause of the Commotions in the Kingdom of Bohemia; and also that it was by any Fault of his that the German Nation had quitted the University of Prague. The Cardinal of Chambre and the Emperor, when they sent him back again to Prison, exhorted him to submit to the Decision of the Council, and not to persist obstinately in his Errors: He answer'd, That he took God to Witness, he was come to Constance upon no other design, but only to change his Opinion, if any one should make it appear to him that he was in an Error. The next Day he was brought again before the Assembly, and after they had read to him 89 Articles, which were said to be drawn out of his Books, they exhorted him to submit to the Council and abjure his Errors; he made answer, that there were many of these Propositions which he had never maintain'd, and that as to others, he was ready to explain his Opinion, and inform the Council of his Thoughts about them. After many Disputes he was sent back to Prison, and then a Resolution was taken to put him to Death by burning, if he did not retract.

The Continuation of the Process against John Huss.

On the 7th of July, John Huss was conducted to the Place where the 15th Session of the Council was held, and after the Bishop of Lody had made a Discourse about the Destruction of Heresies, the Proctor of the Council demanded that the Process against John Huss should be finished. The Errors of Wickleff's Doctrin were read, viz. about the real Presence and Transubstantion, about the Salvation of Infants dying without Baptism, about Confirmation and Confession made to Priests, about Marriage, about the Primacy of the Pope, about the Forfeiture of those who are in mortal Sin, of their Power and Rights; about the Unprofitableness of Religious Orders, the Liberty of paying Tithes or not, the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, of the Revenues of Churches, the absolute Necessity of Events, and about some other Questions more metaphysical. These Errors being condemn'd in the Council, 30 Propositions were read, drawn out of the Books of John Huss, which may be reduc'd to the following Dogmes, viz. That the Church does consist only of those who are predestinate, that the Pope is not the Head of the Roman Church, that Ministers who are not righteous and predestinate are no true Ministers, that Hereticks ought not to be deliver'd up to the Secular Power, that Ecclesiastical Obedience is an Invention of Man, that all Priests have the Power to preach, and that Excommunication ought not to debar them from it. John Huss explain'd some of these Propositions, and defended many of 'em. Many other Articles of Accusation were also read, which were prov'd by Witnesses against him, and afterwards upon the Demand of the Proctor of the Council, his Books were condemned, and he was declared a manifest Heretick, convicted of having taught many Heresies and pernicious Errors; of having despised the Keys of the Church and Ecclesiastical Censures, of having seduc'd and given Scandal to the Faithful by his Obstinacy, and of having rashly appealed to the Tribunal of our Lord Jesus Christ; and thus the Council having censur'd him for being obstinate and incorrigible, ordain'd that he should be deposed, degraded and deliver'd over to the Secular Power; which was presently put in Execution. The Bishops appointed by the Council stript him of his Priestly Garments, degraded him, and having put upon his Head a Mitre of Paper, on which there were Devils painted with this Inscription, A Ring-leader of Heresie, they delivered him up to the Emperor, who put him in the hands of the Duke of Bavaria. His Books were burnt at the Gate of the Church, and he was led to the Suburbs, was tied to a Stake and burnt alive, persisting even until Death in his Errors. His Ashes were gathered together, and thrown into the Rhine.

The Condemnation of John Huss.

He wrote while he was in Prison some Treatises about the Commands of God, of the Lord's Prayer, of mortal Sin, of Marriage, of the Knowledge and Love of God, of the three Enemies of Man and the seven mortal Sins, of Repentance, and the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord; and some Days after he arriv'd at Constance, he drew up a little piece about the Communion in both kinds. He wrote also in Prison an Answer to the Propositions drawn out of his Books, which had been communicated to him, and prepar'd three Discourses; one about the Sufficiency of the Law of Jesus Christ, the other to explain his Faith about the last Articles of the Creed, and the third about Peace, and some Letters to his Disciples in Bohemia. All these Treatises of John Huss, and other Acts which we have hithetto mention'd, are to be found in the first Tome of his Works, printed at Nuremberg, in 1558. The second contains a Harmony of the four Evangelists with Moral Notes, many Sermons, a Commentary upon the seven first Chapters of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, Commentaries upon the seven Canonical Epistles, and upon the 109 Psalm, and those which follow to the 119; a Piece against that Proposition, that a Priest is a Creator of the Creator, wherein he does nevertheless maintain Transubstantiation, as in all his other Works: But he pretends that it cannot be said, That the Priest is the Creator of the Body of Jesus Christ, because the Body of Jesus Christ exists before the Bread is chang'd into it: A Treatise of the Adoration of Images, wherein he maintains, that the Humanity of Jesus Christ ought not to be ador'd with the Worship of Latria, but only with the Worship of Hyperdoulia; and that the Images of Jesus Christ ought not at all to be ador'd, not only with the Worship of Latria, but even with an internal Worship, altho' we may bow the Knee, pray, set Wax Candles before the Images, and use before them any external Signs of Adoration, which belong to the thing which they represent.

The Retractation of Jerom of Prague.

After John Huss was executed, Jerom of Prague being in Prison, was urg'd to abjure his Errors, which he consented to do; and being brought to the Council, he read in the 19th Session, held September 23, his Retractation, wherein he anathematiz'd the Errors of Wicklef and John Huss, and protested, That he was in every thing of the same Sentiments with the Roman Church, the Holy Apostolick See, and the Holy Council; and profess'd that he would follow their Doctrin above all things, chiefly about the Keys, the Sacraments, the Orders, the Offices, and the Censures of the Church; about Indulgences, the Relicks of Saints, Ecclesiastical Liberty, the Ceremonies, and every thing which concern'd the Religion of Jesus Christ; and lastly, That he approv'd the Condemnation of the Articles which the Council prescribed, acknowledged that they were faithfully drawn out of the Books of John Huss, and that he was justly dondemned. He explain'd also his Opinion about the Reality of Universals, and the Faith of the blessed, and at last swore upon the Holy Gospels, That he would for ever adhere to the Faith of the Church, that he would for ever Anathematize those who oppos'd it, and that he submitted to all the Severity of the Canonical Penalties, and eternal Damnation, if he had or should teach a contrary Doctrin. But notwithstanding this Retractation, he was carried back to his Prison, and was presently accus'd of being insincere in making this Retractation, and of teaching still the same Errors: New Articles of Accusation were also brought against him, and it was proved, That it would be dangerous to let him go; insomuch that his Commissioners could not set him at Liberty, as they wisht. He quickly repented also of his Abjuration, and of condemning John Huss; and having desired Audience of the Council, he was twice heard in the general Congregations held in the Month of May, 1416. in which One Hundred and Seven Heads of Accusation were proposed against him, to which he endeavour'd to give an Answer; and lastly made a Discourse, wherein he declared, That he repented of this Retractation, and of having approv'd the Condemnation of John Huss and Wicklef. The Fathers of the Council being fully satisfied by his own Confession of his Relapse, sent for him to come the 21st Session, held May the 30th, wherein after the Bishop of Lody had made a Discourse, Jerom of Prague declar'd, That he still persisted in his last Retractation, but yet he professed to hold Transubstantiation; whereupon he was condemned as a Heretick relapsed, deliver'd over to the Secular Power, and led away to Death, which he endur'd with great Constancy.

The Troubles and Wars in Bohemia.

The News of the Death of John Huss was no sooner carried to Prague, but it stirr'd up the Hussites to Sedition; who robb'd the Palace of the Archbishop, and the Houses of the Ecclesiasticks, and massacred many Persons. The Nobility of Bohemia and Moravia being incensed by the Breach of Promise made to them, made a League among themselves, That they would never receive the Decrees of the Council, spoke aloud in defence of the Memory of John Huss and Jerom of Prague, and wrote Letters very fiercely upon that Subject to the Council; who wrote also back to them in their own Justification, and perswaded them, That John Huss and Jerom of Prague had been justly condemned: The Council also ordered a very great number to be cited of those who defended the Person and Doctrin of John Huss, against whom it pronounced the Sentence of Condemnation. Then it was, that the Sect of the Hussites begun to be divided into two parts; whereof one were called Calixtines, because the principal Point wherein they differ'd from the Church, was about the use of the Cup, whereas the other part denied Transubstantiation, and the real Presence of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, and had many other Errors about the Sacraments, which last Party were called Thaborites. It was not long before they declar'd War against the Catholicks; for having gathered together near 30000, they begun to rob and destroy the Churches, and to commit many Outrages. The City of Prague was not exempt from them; for they made themselves Masters of it, and massacred some of the Magistrates. In the mean time, King Wenceslaus died in 1418. and tho' after his Death the Kingdom of right belonged to the Emperor Sigismund; yet the Hussites set up against him the Famous Zisca, who having gathered together some Troops, and built him a strong place, which he named Thabor, obtained many Victories over the Emperor Sigismund, and made himself Master of all Bohemia. Zisca dying in 1424. the Sect was again divided into two Parties, whereof one still retained the Name of Thaborites, and the other took that of Orphelines; but however, they were divided among themselves, they were both united in the Hatred which they bore to the Roman Church, and join'd together when they consulted about fighting against the the Roman Catholicks, whoſe Armies they defeated alſo twice, when they were under the Conduct of Cardinal Julian.

The Troubles and Wars in Bohemia.

The Pope and Emperor perceiving that it was not poſſible to reduce them by Force, reſolv'd to try if they could bring 'em back into the Boſom of the Church, and to their Duty, by inviting them to the Council of Baſil: The Emperor wrote to them about it, and the Council ſent Deputies to invite them to come thither, with Promiſes of all kind of Safety and Liberty. Theſe Advices when they arrived found them divided amongſt themſelves; for the Orphelines and the common People would have no Perſon ſent thither, alledging the Example of John Huſs and Jerom of Prague; but the Nobility thought it would be more expedient to ſend Deputies thither, that they might find out ſome means of allaying the Commotions in the Kingdom of Bohemia, and of reſtoring Peace there. The Council granted them a very ample ſafe Conduct, and they ſent a ſolemn Deputation of 300 Perſons, at the Head whereof were the Famous Captain Procopius, John Rockſana, a Prieſt and Diſciple of Jacobel, Nicholas Galecus, a Thaborite, and Peter Pain, an Engliſh-man. The Bohemians reduc'd their Pretenſions to four Heads. Firſt, That the Euchariſt ſhould be adminiſtred to the Laity in both kinds. Second, That the Word of God might be freely preach'd by thoſe whom it belonged, i. e. by the Prieſts. Third, That the Eccleſiaſticks ſhould have no more Revenues, nor temporal Demeſnes. Fourth, That publick Crimes ſhould be puniſhed by the Magiſtrates. They declared in a publick Letter, That they maintained no other Articles but theſe Four; That they were ready to defend them, and charged the Deputies to the Council not to depart from them. When they arriv'd there the Cardinal Julian made a fine Diſcourſe to them about the Benefits of Peace, and exhorted them to ſubmit to the Judgment of the Church: They anſwer'd, That they deſired nothing more than Peace; That they had never deſpiſed the Church nor the Councils, but they had been unjuſtly condemned, and without being heard by the Council of Conſtance; That they maintain'd nothing but what was founded upon the Goſpel; That they were come to give an Account of their Doctrin; That they deſired to be heard publickly, and that the Lay-men might have leave to ſpeak as well as the Eccleſiaſticks; they propoſed afterwards four Articles, which they inſiſted upon, and choſe four Perſons to defend them. John Rockſana ſpoke upon the firſt Article about the Communion in both kinds, and John Ophraguſa, a Dominican was made choice of by the Council to anſwer him; which he did in a Diſcourſe that laſted eight Hours. Nicholas Galecus, a Thaborite, made a Diſcourſe upon the Article of puniſhing publick Crimes, wherein he maintain'd that the Crimes of Eccleſiaſticks, and even their Diſorders in Matters of Religion, ought to be puniſhed by the Secular Magiſtrates; Giles Charliere, Dean of Chambre, anſwered him in a Diſcourſe four Hours long. Ulric a Prieſt, among the Orphelines, maintain'd the Article about the Liberty of preaching; Henry Kalteiſen, a Dominican of Colen, refuted him in a Diſcourſe, wherein he enlarged about the Hierarchy. At laſt, Peter Pain an Engliſh-man, undertook to prove, That it was unlawful for the Clergy to have Demains and temporal Revenues; John Polemar, Arch-Deacon of Bayeux, and Auditor of the Rota, made a Diſcourſe to the contrary. Theſe four Diſcourſes of the Catholick Doctors, are inſerted into the 12th Tome of the Councils; the Diſcourſes of the Bohemians are to be met with in Manuſcript. Theſe Diſputes begun in the Month of January, 1433. and laſted Fifty Days without any Succeſs, for the Deputies of the Bohemians perſiſting in their Opinions returned back into Bohemia.

A Deputation from the Bohemians to the Council of Baſil.

A Treaty of the Council with the Bohemians.

The Council ſent Deputies to them, to ſee if they could be brought to any Accommodation, who dealt with the Nobility, which thereby became ſuſpected to the Thaborites and Orphelines. The Nobility on their part reſolved to ſhake off the Yoke of Procopius and the Thaborites, againſt whom they made War, and choſe for their General Alſcion de Riſenburgh; the Thaborites and Orphelines, were defeated in a great Battel, where Procopius was kill'd. After this Defeat the Emperor Sigiſmund was acknowledged for King of Bohemia, and the Deputies of the Council made a Treaty with the Bohemians; whereby it was agreed, That the Bohemians and the Moravians ſhould be re-united to the Church, and ſhould conform in every thing to its Rites, except as to Communion in both kinds, as to which Rite it was allowed, That thoſe who had a Cuſtom of communicating after this manner, might ſtill preſerve it: It was alſo agreed, That the Council ſhould decide whether this Practice was according to a Divine Precept, and ſhould regulate the Matter by a general Law, as they ſhould think moſt convenient for the Benefit and Salvation of the Faithful; That if the Bohemians perſiſted afterwards in deſiring to communicate in both kinds, they ſhould ſend an Embaſſy to the Council, which ſhould leave the Prieſts of Bohemia and Moravia at Liberty, to communicate in both kinds, ſuch Perſons as were come to the Age of Diſcretion, who deſired it, provided they gave a publick Advertiſement to the common People, That the Fleſh of Jeſus Chriſt is not alone under the Species of Bread, nor the Blood alone under the Species of Wine, but that Jeſus Chriſt is whole and intire under each Species. The Emperor agreed alſo to leave the Revenues of the Church, by way of Mortgage, in the Hands of thoſe who were poſſeſſed of them, until they were redeem'd for a valuable Conſideration. The Bohemians granted leave to the Monks, and other exiled Perſons, to return into their own Country; upon condition nevertheleſs, that the Monaſteries which had been demoliſhed ſhould never be rebuilt. The Archbiſhoprick of Prague was promiſed to Rockſana, and the Diſpoſal of the Churches of Bohemia was left to the Pope, and Six Years were allowed to the Orphelines and Thaborites, to come in and accept of this Treaty, which was confirmed at Ratisbone, and perfectly concluded at Iglaw. Rockſana, with four other other Prieſts promiſed in the Name of all the Clergy, who were of his Party, to obey the Pope, and received Abſolution from the Legats of the Council; but the ſame Day he gave the Communion publickly in both kinds to a Lay-man, which was pretended to be an Infraction of the Treaty, becauſe he was in a ſtrange Church; yet this Conteſt was huſht, for fear leſt it ſhould break the Peace.

Sigiſmund is acknowledged in Bohemia.

The Emperor Sigiſmund made his publick Entry into Prague, in the Month of September, 1436. Philbert, Biſhop of Conſtance, and ſome other Prelats ſent from Baſil, reſtor'd the Uſages and Ceremonies of the Roman Church in the Churches of Prague. Rockſana being fruſtrated of the Hope that was given him, that he ſhould be made Archbiſhop of Prague, quickly renewed the Troubles; but he was forc'd to fly, and the Rebels were executed or diſperſed. The Emperor Sigiſmund dying in 1437. Albert of Auſtria, who had eſpouſed his Daughter, was declared King of Bohemia in ſpite of the Intrigues of the Empreſs Douairiere, and of ſome of the Lords of Bohemia.

The Decrees of the Councils about the Communion in both kinds.

While theſe things were tranſacted in Bohemia, the Council of Baſil in the 30th Seſſion, held the 22d of December, 1437. made a Decree concerning the Communion in both kinds; wherein it declares, That the Faithful, whether Lay-men or Clergy-men, who receive the Communion and do not conſecrate, are not obliged by a Divine Command to receive the Sacrament of the Euchariſt in both kinds; That it belongs to the Church which is govern'd by the Holy Spirit, and with which Jeſus Chriſt will continue unto the end of the World, to regulate after what manner it ought to be adminiſtred to thoſe who do not conſecrate, as it ſhall judge moſt expedient, with reſpect to the Sacrifice and Salvation of the Faithful; That whether we communicate in one kind or in two, the Communion is uſeful to thoſe who receive it; That we muſt not at all doubt but Jeſus Chriſt is whole and intire in each kind; and laſtly, That the Cuſtom of giving the Communion to the Laity in one kind, was juſtly introduced by the Church, and by the Holy Fathers, has been obſerved for a long time, and approved by Divines and Canoniſts, which ought therefore to be eſteemed a Law; and that it is not lawful for any Perſon to condemn it, or change it without the Authority of the Church.

The State of Bohemia under the Succeſſors of Sigiſmund.

Albert of Auſtria lived but two Years after his Election, and when he died he left his Wife big with Child of Laodiſlaus. After his Death, the Bohemians choſe for King Albert Duke of Bavaria, who refuſed to accept of a Kingdom that did not belong to him, and exhorted them to acknowledge Laodiſlaus: Whereupon they addreſs'd themſelves to the Emperor Frederick, and offered him the Government either in his own Name, or as Tutor to the young Prince. The Emperor adviſed them to chuſe Governours until Laodiſlaus came to be of Age; and they choſe Taſcon and Mainard, whereof the former favoured Rockſana, and the latter was intirely a Catholick. The Death of the former was the Cauſe of the Ruin of the latter; for the Complices of Rockſana not being able to endure him, choſe George Pogebrac for their Captain, who made himſelf Maſter of Prague, ſhut up Mainard in the Citadel, where he died, and remain'd ſole Governour of the Kingdom of Bohemia even after Laodiſlaus had taken Poſſeſſion of it, and he ſucceeded this Prince, who died in 1458 at the Age of Nineteen Years. He baniſh'd the Thaborites, to whom Rockſana was no leſs an Enemy than the Catholicks themſelves; but he maintained the Uſage of communicating in both kinds, which became common in the greateſt part of the Churches of Bohemia, tho' that Precaution was not obſerved of advertiſing the People, that there was no Neceſſity of this Uſage. The Cardinals Carvaſal and Æneas Sylvius, Legats in Bohemia, uſed all their Efforts to aboliſh this Practice, but in vain; for Pogebrac and Rockſana maintain'd it, which gave occaſion to Pope Paul II. to proceed againſt Pogebrac, declare him a Heretick, and to give away his Kingdom to Matthias King of Hungary; who after he had made War for ſome time againſt him, made Peace with him, and left him in peaceable Poſſeſſion of his Kingdom in ſpite of the Emperor and the Pope. Altho' Pogebrac and Rockſana had totally ruin'd the Thaborites, yet there remain'd many Perſons who were tinctur'd with their Principles, that ſeparated from the Calixtines, and made a new Sect under the Name of The Brethren of Bohemia. When they declar'd themſelves openly, they had for their Captain a Cordwainer named Keleſisky, who drew up for them a Form of Faith; and for their Paſtor, one named Matthias Convaldus; they re-baptized all thoſe who were admitted into their Sect, they explained themſelves darkly about the real Preſence, refuſed to adore Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt, and were mortal Enemies to the Clergy and the Roman Church; inſomuch, That they made no great Scruple of joining with the Lutherans and Calviniſts, as we ſhall hereafter declare.

CHAP. VIII.

An Hiſtory of the Errors Publiſh'd and Condemn'd in the Fifteenth Century, Chiefly by the Faculty of Theology at Paris; all whoſe Cenſures are here Related.

WE ſhall now give you an Hiſtorical Account of the Errors that were Cenſur'd in the Fifteenth Century, by the Sentence given againſt John Monteſon a Dominican, and againſt thoſe of his Order, by the Faculty of Theology at Paris. For tho' this Affair was begun in the preceeding Century, yet it was not ended till the beginning of this, whereof here follows the Relation.

A Cenſure of the Errors of John Monteſon, a Friar Preacher.

John Monteſon, a Catalonian, of the Order of Friars-Preachers, Doctor of Divinity of the Faculty at Paris, advanc'd in 1387. many Erroneous Propoſitions in his Acts De Veſperiis, and de Reſumpta, and in his publick Lectures. The Faculty of Theology being certainly inform'd of this, appointed three Deputies who were Seculars, and three who were Regulars, to Examine the * Cabire from whence they were extracted, but theſe being unwilling to make their Report, unleſs there were a greater number of Deputies, the Faculty appointed Six more who gave their Opinion in Writing; whereupon the Faculty being aſſembled July the 6th of the ſame year, Condemn'd the 14 following Propoſitions, and declared that this Regular ought to retract them. 1ſt, That the Hypoſtatical Union in Jeſus Chriſt is greater than the Union of the three Perſons in the Eſſence of God. 2. That it was poſſible he ſhould be a meer Creature, who could merit for himſelf and all others after the ſame manner as the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt did, by the aſſiſtance of habitual Grace; tho' it was not at all poſſible that he could Redeem and Save Man with the ſame Convenience and Sufficiency as Jeſus Chriſt. 3. That a pure Rational Creature cannot really ſee the Eſſence of God as the Bleſſed do. 4. That 'tis poſſible there ſhould be a meer Creature more perfect than the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt as to merit, ſuch as was the Grace of the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt. 5. That ſuch a Creature if he were in the World, would be above all kinds of Creatures. 6. That it is not a Doctrin contrary to the Faith, to ſuppoſe it abſolutely neceſſary that any Creature ſhould exiſt. 7. That a thing may exiſt neceſſarily, and yet be produc'd by a Cauſe. 8th, That 'tis more agreeable to the Faith to ſay that ſome other thing is abſolutely neceſſary, beſides the firſt Being, than to ſay without Exception that he is the only neceſſary Being. 9th, That 'tis a Hereſie to affirm that a Propoſition contrary to Scripture may be true; (this Propoſition is not Condemn'd, but only ſo far as it is meant univerſally of all Propoſitions which are contrary to Scripture, tho' this contrariety be not evident.) 10th, That it is expreſly contrary to Faith, to ſay that every Man except Jeſus Chriſt did not contract the guilt of Original Sin. The Faculty Ordain'd that this Propoſition ſhould be retracted as falſe, ſcandalous, offenſive to Pious Ears, and preſumptuouſly advanc'd, notwithſtanding the probability of the Affirmative in that Queſtion, viz. Whether the Bleſſed Virgin was Conceiv'd in Original Sin? The 11th, That 'tis expreſly contrary to Faith, to ſay that the Bleſſed Virgin Mary Mother of God did not contract the guilt of Original Sin. 12th, That it was as much contrary to Scripture to ſay that one Perſon only was exempt from Original Sin, as Jeſus Chriſt was, as to except ten. 13th, That 'tis more expreſly contrary to Scripture, to ſay that the bleſſed Virgin was not conceiv'd in Original Sin, than to affirm that ſhe was Bleſſed and Victorious in the Inſtant of her Conception and Sanctification. 14th, That in the explication of Holy Scripture, whether the Church define a Matter, or the Doctors explain it, or ſome exception be deduc'd about it, we muſt not draw any Deciſion, Declaration, or Exception, but only from the Scripture it ſelf. The Faculty declar'd that this Propoſition ought to be retracted as falſe and erroneous, if the meaning of it be, that the Expoſition or Exception ought to be found expreſly, or explicitly in Scripture; and that there are many general Propoſitions in Scripture which have Exceptions that are not expreſly ſet down therein, whereof they give for an Example the following Propoſitions: Every thing which enters into the mouth is caſt forth; all Men from the higheſt to the loweſt are addicted to Covetouſneſs; no Man hath aſcended into Heaven, but the Son of God who came down from it; if we ſay that we have no Sin, we deceive our ſelves, and the truth is not in us. The Faculty obſerves afterwards, that this Rule is prejudicial to the Deciſions and Uſages of the Catholick Church, becauſe in the Primitive Church there were many explications of Scripture by Revelation, or by the Inſpiration of God, and by the Information of the Apoſtles. John Monteſon was acquainted with this Cenſure by the Dean of the Faculty, and Charitably admoniſh'd to retract theſe Propoſitions; but inſtead of doing it, as he had promiſed, he proteſted that he would defend them till death. Then the Faculty of Theology accuſed him to the Univerſity, which approv'd the Sentence of the Faculty, and preſented it to the Biſhop of Paris (Peter Orgemont) who being the ordinary Judge in ſuch Matters, order'd

* i. e. a Parcel of Paper conſiſting of 3 or 4 ſheets.

John

John Monteſon to be Cited, who not appearing, he publiſh'd a Sentence on the 23d of Auguſt, wherein he forbids under pain of Excommunication, Ipſo Facto, to maintain or teach the Propoſitions which had been Condemn'd, and ordains that John Monteſon ſhould be taken up, Arreſted, and clapt up in Priſon, with the aſſiſtance of the Secular Power, if it were neceſſary.

The Appeal of John Monteſon.

Monteſon appeal'd from this Sentence, and from the Deciſion of the Faculty, to Pope Clement VII. who Reſided at Avignon, and went to that City to maintain his Appeal. The Univerſity ſent thither on their behalf for Deputies, Peter of Ailly, Giles of Champs, and John of Neuville, Doctors of Divinity, together with Peter of Alinville Doctor of the Canon-Law. After this Affair had been debated in many Conſiſtories, in preſence of the Pope and the Cardinals, (in one of which Peter Ailly made a Diſcourſe which was very acceptable to the Pope, in defence of the Cauſe of the Univerſity) the Cardinal of Embrun in the Name of the Pope, forbad Monteſon to abſent from the Court of Rome until his Affair was determin'd by the deciſion of the Holy-See; but notwithſtanding this Prohibition, Monteſon foreſeeing that the Event would not be favourable to him, and that this Prohibition was made for no other end but to ſeize him, and ſend him back to Paris to make his Retractation there, as the Deputies of the Univerſity ſhould require of him, he retir'd ſecretly from Avignon, and went into Arragon, where he embrac'd the Obedience of Urban VI. and wrote in his favour againſt Clement. After his departure, this Pope appointed Guy the Cardinal of Paleſtrina, the Cardinal of St. Sixtus, and Amelius Cardinal by the Title of St. Euſebe, to judge of this Affair, and order'd them to make a Proceſs againſt Monteſon. They caus'd to ſearch for him in the place where he Lodg'd at Avignon, and having learnt by the Search which was made, that he went from thence Auguſt the 3d, in 1388. they caus'd him to be Summon'd by publick Placarts, Sentenc'd him as Contumacious, and declar'd him Excommunicate; they ordain'd alſo that this Excommunication ſhould be ſolemnly publiſh'd, and Excommunicated thoſe who ſhould hold any Correſpondence with him. The Sentence of theſe Cardinals is dated January 27. in 1389. and was thunder'd out againſt him at Paris the 17th of March following.

John Monteſon Condemn'd by the Pope.

The Retractations of the Biſhop of Evreux, and many Dominicans.

While theſe things were Tranſacted at Avignon, the Univerſity of Paris being highly offended with the Behaviour of John Monteſon, and his Superiors who protected him, and of other Dominicans who publickly approv'd his Opinion, oblig'd many amongſt them to retract the Propoſitions which they had advanc'd againſt the Belief of the Immaculate Conception, and in defence of the Doctrin of John Monteſon. We have many of theſe Retractations in the Regiſters of the Faculty of Divinity at Paris. The moſt Remarkable is that which was made by William Valon Biſhop of Evreux, and Confeſſor to the King, in the preſence of his Majeſty, the Deputies of the Univerſity, and the Chancellor of the Church of Paris, on the 21ſt of February, in 1388 where he retracted what he had ſaid in favour of the Doctrin of John Monteſon. After this follow the Retractations of John of St. Thomas, on the 21ſt of March in the ſame year; of Friar Adam of Soiſſons, on the 16th of May, in 1389. of Richard Mary in the ſame year; of John Adam in the Month of Auguſt; of Peter Chancey in the Month of October, and of John Nicholas in the Month of September of the ſame year. All theſe Friars-Preachers were obliged to retract the Propoſitions they had advanc'd, or other publick Diſcourſes againſt the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin, and againſt the Feaſt of the Conception.

The Common People were no leſs Scandaliz'd at the Doctrin of the Dominicans than the Divines, and conceiv'd ſo great a hatred againſt them, that they durſt hardly appear in publick. At laſt, when the Confirmation of the Condemnation of Monteſon was obtain'd from the Pope, the Univerſity made a Decree, wherein they exclude from their Society all thoſe who would not Swear to maintain the Condemnation of the Errors of Monteſon, and Ordain'd that for the future thoſe who would take any Degrees, ſhould take the ſame Oath.

The Dominicans excluded from the Univerſity.

The Dominicans being perſwaded that this Cenſure impeacht the Doctrin of St. Thomas, would not take this Oath, and therefore were excluded from the Faculty, which render'd them ſo odious, that after this they were not admitted to Preach, nor to take any Confeſſions, nor do any other Office; and the Common People did not only refuſe to give them their uſual Alms, but alſo abuſed and perſecuted them. The Dominicans to allay this Storm, had recourſe to the Pope, and in their general Chapter held in the Province of Tholouſe, in 1389. they appointed ten Doctors of their Order to go and maintain the Cauſe of St. Thomas at the Pope's Court againſt the Univerſity of Paris, who ſhould be maintain'd at the expence of the Regulars of their Order, who ſhould all contribute towards it; viz. the Doctors 20 Sous, and the other Regulars 10 Sous, as is to be ſeen in the Original Inſtrument, which is in the hands of Monſieur Baluzius.

A Treatiſe of the Univerſity in its own defence.

The Univerſity at this time caus'd a Treatiſe to be written in its own defence, which is at the end of the Maſter of the Sentences; wherein they undertake to prove, 1ſt, That the Faculty of Theology, and the Biſhop of Paris, have not exceeded their Power in Condemning the Propoſitions of John Monteſon. 2dly, That theſe Propoſitions are juſtly Condemn'd. 3dly, That the Doctrin of St. Thomas was not approv'd by the Church after ſuch a manner, that the Approbation could hinder the Execution of the Sentence given by the Biſhop of Paris.

As to the firſt Point, the Faculty diſtinguiſhes two ſorts of Approbations or Condemnations of Error; the one Doctrinal and Scholaſtical, and the other Authoritative and Judicial; and divides this latter into Sovereign and Inferior. This diſtinction being ſuppoſed, it lays down the following following Concluſions. 1ſt. That it belongs to the Holy Apoſtolick See to define Matters which concern the Faith, by a Supream Judicial Authority. 2d, That it belongs to the Biſhops to decide them by the ſame Authority, but which is Inferior and Subordinate. 3d, That it belongs to Divines to give a Doctrinal Judgment upon theſe Matters, ſince it is their Duty to teach the Holy Scripture, and to make uſe of it for rejecting Heretical Opinions, and approving Catholick Truths. 4th, That the Biſhop and the Faculty of Theology may joyntly or ſeverally Condemn Heretical and Erroneous Propoſitions, after the manner which has been now explain'd. 5th, That the Condemnation which is paſs'd by the Faculty, may be even judicial with reſpect to its Members. 6th, That the Superior Judge ought not to hinder the Biſhop nor the Faculty to proceed to ſome Condemnation, unleſs it be in a Cauſe very favourable, nor to delay 'till the Appeal is made before him, without mature deliberation. From theſe Concluſions they draw the following Inferences. Firſt, That the Faculty of Theology may Condemn the Errors of Monteſon Doctrinally. Secondly, That this Faculty being joyn'd to the other 3 Faculties, may pronounce this Sentence before the Biſhop of Paris the ordinary Judge. Thirdly, That the Faculty of Theology may forbid theſe Propoſitions to be maintain'd and taught in their Schools, and the Biſhop of Paris may order the ſame prohibition in his Dioceſe. Afterwards they anſwer an Objection which the Dominicans made, that ſome of the Propoſitions of Monteſon were taken out of St. Thomas, whoſe Doctrin had been formerly Condemn'd by the Faculty of Divinity at Paris, but was maintain'd by Stephen Biſhop of Paris, and approv'd by Urban V. in his Bull to the Univerſity of Tholouſe, wherein he ordains that the Doctrine of St. Thomas ſhall be followed by all Divines. They add, that it belongs only to the Holy See to Decide, Condemn, and approve in Matters of Faith. To this the Faculty anſwers, that they always proteſted their Intention never was to Condemn the Doctrin of St. Thomas, which was very different from the Propoſitions of Monteſon, tho' it could not be concluded from the Bull of Urban V. that it was approv'd in all things, and there were many Propoſitions in his Works which might be accuſed of Error.

A Treatiſe of the Univerſity in its own Defence.

As to the Second Point, which concerns the Propoſitions Condemn'd, the Faculty obſerves in the firſt place, that tho' a good ſenſe may be put upon a Propoſition, yet it may be Condemn'd, as that which ought to be retracted upon the Account of a bad ſenſe. After this they relate the 14 Propoſitions which are Cenſur'd, and the Qualifications which ſignifie upon whom the Condemnation falls, and refer them to a Treatiſe which was written by Peter of Ailly to maintain the Cenſure.

As to the Third Point, the Faculty remarks that a Doctrin may be approv'd by the Church 3 ways. 1. As uſeful, probable, and common amongſt Scholaſtick Divines. 2. As a Doctrin which every one is obliged to believe to be true in all its parts. 3. As a Doctrin which is neither Erroneous nor Heretical in any part: For, add they, there are many Propoſitions falſe which do not concern the Faith, and do not bring a Man into a damnable Error, which cannot be accuſed of Hereſie becauſe that implies a corruption of the Chriſtian Faith. The Doctrin approv'd in the firſt way may contain Falſities, and even Errors, which is therefore more common and ordinary; beſides this, an Approbation may be either expreſs, or tacit, a Toleration or an Owning. Theſe Principles being ſuppoſed, the Faculty maintains, that the Doctrin of St. Thomas was approv'd only in the firſt ſenſe, and not in the two other ſenſes, and that it contains Contradictions and Errors in matters of Faith, whereof they bring Examples taken out of his Works; and they alſo produce other inſtances of many Saints, and many Authors who fell into ſome Errors, viz. St. Peter, St. Cyprian, St. Jerom, the Maſter of the Sentences, Gratian, St. Anſelm, Hugo de Sancto Victore, and ſome others, whoſe Doctrins they affirm to be held in greater veneration than that of St. Thomas. They maintain particularly that the Doctrin of St. Thomas about the abſolute neceſſity of ſome Creatures, is Erroneous, or at leaſt ſuſpected of Error, and refuted by many Reaſons.

They obſerve alſo that he is too much addicted to apply Principles of Philoſophy, and Sentences of Philoſophers to Concluſions of Divinity, wherein he does ill; for, ſay they, Divines ought not to ſpeak as Philoſophers do, as St. Auſtin remarks in the 10th Book of the City of God, Chap. 23. in theſe words: "Philoſophers do freely make uſe of what terms they pleaſe, and are "not at all afraid to offend Religious Ears about ſuch things as are very difficult to compre-"hend; but as to us we muſt not ſpeak but according to a certain Rule, for fear leſt the liberty "which we take of uſing ſome terms as we pleaſe, ſhould convey an Opinion of the things them-"ſelves, which is diſagreeable to Piety.

The Reſtoration of the Dominicans.

We do not find that the Dominicans obtain'd of the Court of Rome any Deciſion in their Favour; but on the contrary, we ſee that to put a ſtop to the Perſecution which they endured, they were obliged to Celebrate in France the Conception of the Virgin as others did, and no longer to maintain publickly that ſhe was Conceiv'd in Sin, but to be ſilent as to that Queſtion. By obſerving this Conduct they procur'd their own Repoſe, and were reſtor'd to their Functions; but they remain'd ſtill excluded from the Faculty for the ſpace of 25 years, becauſe they would not take an Oath to approve the Condemnation of the Propoſitions of Monteſon, until at laſt the Faculty admitted them upon the importunate Requeſt of the King, Auguſt 21. in 1403. upon Condition that they ſhould Renounce the Appeal they had made from the Decree of the Faculty, and that thoſe who were admitted into the Faculty ſhould promiſe for the future to obey this Decree of the Faculty.

The Proceſs of John Petit, and his Condemnation.

The Affairs of John Petit made no leſs noiſe in the Univerſity of Paris than that of Monteſon; this Doctor in Divinity of the Faculty of Paris, undertook to maintain the Action of John Duke of Burgundy, who had caus'd the Duke of Orleans to be Aſſaſſinated, and wrote upon this Subject a Treatiſe intituled, The Juſtification of the Duke of Burgundy, wherein he maintains that it was lawful for a private Perſon to put a Tyrant to death. This Book being for ſome time ſhelter'd from Cenſure by the Power of the Duke of Burgundy, was at laſt Cenſur'd in 1414. by the Faculty of Theology, at the inſtance of John Gerſon, and Condemn'd by Gerard Montague Biſhop of Paris, and John Polet the Inquiſitor. The Cenſure of the Faculty is to be met with among the Works of Gerſon; it contains 9 Propoſitions, with convenient Qualifications, whereof the 7 firſt concern the point in queſtion; that 'tis lawful to kill Tyrants, and that thoſe who do it, do not only deſerve to be exempt from any Puniſhment, but ought alſo to be Rewarded. The Eighth Propoſition which is Condemn'd as Erroneous is this, That to obſerve always the literal ſenſe of Scripture is to kill a Man's own Soul. The 10th, which is Condemn'd as Erroneous and Seditious is this, that no Man is bound to obſerve that Alliance or Oath which he has made, when it happens that this Oath or Alliance is contrary to the welfare of his Spouſe or Children who made them. The Biſhop and Inquiſitor by one and the ſame Sentence did joyntly Condemn the Doctrin of John Petit as Erroneous in Faith, and good Manners, and as Scandalous; they Ordain'd that the Copies of his Book ſhould be brought to them, and forbad any to maintain or teach ſuch Propoſitions. This Sentence is dated February 23. in 1413. according to the Stile of the Gallican-Church; i. e. according to our way of Reckoning in 1414. It was Publiſh'd the 25th of the ſame Month, and the Propoſitions of John Petit were publickly burnt. The King on the 16th of March of the ſame year, publiſh'd Letters Patent directed to his Parliaments, wherein he confirms the Sentence of the Biſhop of Paris and the Inquiſitor, and Ordains that they ſhould cauſe it to be enter'd in their Regiſters, and to be executed; but it was not enter'd in the Regiſter of the Parliament of Paris, till the 4th of June, in 1416.

The Duke of Burgundy appeal'd from this Sentence to Pope John XXIII. who appointed three Cardinals to Examine it, whoſe Opinion was that it was null; but Gerſon carried this Affair to the Council of Conſtance. The Duke of Burgundy wrote to 'em upon this Occaſion, and demanded that nothing ſhould be done againſt the Book of John Petit but in the preſence of his Ambaſſadors. Martin Porree Biſhop of Arras objected to Gerſon that he had not faithfully extracted the Propoſitions out of the Book of John Petit, and that he did not take them in the ſenſe of the Author.

The Condemnation of the Errors of John Petit, in the Council of Conſtance.

The Council appointed Deputies to examine this Affair, which was warmly debated on both ſides; and at laſt in the 15th Seſſion of the Council held July the 6th, in 1415. the Propoſition of John Petit, that 'tis Lawful and even Meritorious for a Vaſſal or Subject to kill a Tyrant, was Condemn'd as Heretical and Scandalous, without naming the Author, but only declaring in General that thoſe who ſhould defend it obſtinately ſhould be reputed Hereticks, and puniſhed as ſuch. The Duke of Burgundy ſent to Paris John Montleon his Almoner, to engage the Univerſity, or at leaſt the Nation of Picardy, to pray the Dauphin that he would write to the Council a Letter Condemning the Conduct of Gerſon in this Affair, as having forg'd a Propoſition which was none of John Petit's. Gerſon on his part ſent a Declaration to the Univerſity of Paris, againſt all thoſe who ſhould hinder the Duke of Burgundy from acknowledging publickly that he had committed a Crime, by cauſing the Duke of Orleans to be Aſſaſſinated.

The Faculty of Theology at Paris paſſed alſo in this Century many other doctrinal Cenſures.

From the year 1389. they had declar'd by their Concluſion dated September the 19th, againſt many Propoſitions of the Magical Art, wherein Compacts made with the Devil are excuſed, and the Superſtitions of that deteſtable Art, to which a notable Vertue and Efficacy is attributed.

A Concluſion of the Faculty in 1408. about the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

In 1408. the ſame Faculty Conſulted about a Queſtion moved in the Dioceſe of Saintes, whether we may believe that ſome of the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt ſhed upon the Croſs was ſtill remaining upon Earth? To which they anſwer'd May 28. that this Opinion was no ways contrary to Piety.

A Cenſure of the Errors of John Gorel about the Hierarchy.

In the ſame year the Faculty Condemn'd 5 Propoſitions advanc'd by Friar John Gorel of the Order of Friars Minors, Licentiate in Divinity, and obliged him to retract them. Theſe Propoſitions are, Firſt, That the Sacrament of Penance does no ways operate by its own vertue in him who has Grace, becauſe the principal effect of that Sacrament concerns only the Remiſſion of Sins. Secondly, That he who has rightly confeſſed, can no ways be obliged to confeſs a ſecond time. Thirdly, That it no ways belongs to Pariſh-Prieſts as Pariſh-Prieſts, to Preach, take Confeſſions, give Extream Unction, and to Bury, nor to receive Tythes, becauſe they were not Inſtituted by Jeſus Chriſt, nor the Primitive Church. Fourthly, That it agrees more eſſentially and naturally to Regulars than to Pariſh-Prieſts to Preach. Fifthly, That Pariſh-Prieſts who have any other means to live upon cannot receive Tythes. The Faculty Condemns theſe Propoſitions, and declares that Pariſh-Prieſts are Prelates and Hierarchs of an Inferior Order, to whom the Right belongs of hearing Confeſſions, and of Adminiſtring the Sacraments, which agrees to the Regulars only by accident.

A Concluſion of the Faculty in 1426. about the Celebration of Sunday.

In 1426. on the Month of October the ſame Faculty having Conſulted about the Obligation and Manner of obſerving Sundays, and Feſtivals, ordered Giles Charlier to draw up a Writing, wherein they lay down certain and ſolid Principles about the Celebration of Sundays, and decide,

decide, 1ſt, That every Man is obliged to ſet apart ſome time, which ought to be particularly and only imploy'd in worſhipping God; 2dly, That this time under the old Law, was Saturday; 3dly, That the Obligation to obſerve Saturday, was not a Law purely poſitive, and ceremonial, but alſo moral and natural; That the Obſervation of Sunday ſucceeded under the new Law to that of the Sabbath; 5thly, That we ought to attend the Service of God on Sundays and Feſtivals; 6thly, That we may on Sunday do ſuch Works as are Liberal, both Spiritual and Corporal, which concern the Service of God or Charity towards our Neighbour; 7thly, That we ought to abſtain from ſervile Works, of which there are three ſorts; firſt, Sin; ſecondly, the Service which we pay to another Man; thirdly, every Imployment or Action which hinders us from applying our ſelves to the Service of God, without reckoning the Works which concern that Service; 8thly, That theſe laſt Works are always lawful; 9thly, That it is more criminal to ſin on Sunday than on another Day; 10thly, That no Man is obliged to abſtain from theſe ſervile Works, which are neceſſary for the Preſervation of the Body, as the dreſſing of Meat, a Man's defending himſelf when he is attack'd, and in danger of his Life; 11thly, That theſe ſervile Works, whoſe end is temporal Gain, are unlawful on Sundays and Feſtivals; 12thly, That 'tis not lawful on theſe Days to keep Markets for ſuch things as are not neceſſary to Life, and chiefly during the time of Divine Service; 13th, That one may buy and ſell the Neceſſaries of Life on theſe Days; 14th, That when there is ſome Neceſſity, a Diſpenſation may be granted for labouring on Sundays; 15th, That this Neceſſity cannot be deſcribed by a general Rule, but in theſe Caſes we muſt have Recourſe to the Judgment of a wiſe and good Man; 16th, That thoſe who have a mind to abſtain on theſe Days, from buying, ſelling, and doing ſuch things as are even neceſſary to Life, ought not to be diſſuaded from it; 17th, That the Tranſgreſſion of this Command is very criminal.

A Concluſion of the Faculty in 1426. about the Celebration of Sunday.

A Regular of the Order of Friars Minors, called Peter Chonac, having advanc'd and preach'd ſome erroneous Propoſitions, and ſpoke ſome Words prejudicial to the Faculty, was obliged to make Satisfaction in 1428.

The Satisfaction of Peter Chonac to the Faculty.

In 1429, John Sarrazin, Licentiate in Theology, of the Order of Friars Preachers, was delated to the Faculty, and accuſed of having advanc'd, in his Act de Veſperiis, Eight Propoſitions concerning Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, contrary to the Doctrin of the Faculty, viz. 1ſt, That all the Powers of Juriſdiction in the Church, which are different from that of the Pope, are from the Pope in their Inſtitution and Collation; 2dly, That theſe Powers are not of Divine Right, nor inſtituted by God immediately; 3dly, That Jeſus Chriſt ſays nothing of theſe Powers, but only of the Supream, to which he intruſted the founding of his Church; 4thly, That when any thing is decreed in a Council, all the Authority which gives force to its Decrees, reſides only in the Pope; 5thly, That there is no Text in the Goſpel, by which it expreſly appears, That the Power of Juriſdiction was granted to any other Apoſtle but St. Peter; 6thly, That it is repugnant in ſome manner to Truth, to affirm that the Power of Juriſdiction in Inferior Prelates, whether Biſhops or Pariſh-Prieſts, is immediately from God as the Power of the Pope is; 7thly, That no other Spiritual Authorities can do any thing of Right againſt the Pope; 8thly, That the Pope cannot commit Canonical Simony, which is forbidden by a poſitive Law. The Faculty having caus'd theſe Propoſitions to be examin'd by Deputies, obliged Sarrazin to retract them publickly, and to make Profeſſion of eight Propoſitions contrary to them, wherein he owns, 1ſt, That all the Powers of Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdictions, which are different from that of the Pope, are from Jeſus Chriſt as to their firſt Inſtitution and Collation, and from the Pope and the Church, as to their Limitation and Miniſterial Diſpenſation; 2dly, That theſe Powers are of Divine Right, inſtituted immediately by Jeſus Chriſt; 3dly, That we find in Scripture, that Jeſus Chriſt founded his Church, and expreſly inſtituted other Powers beſides that of the Pope; 4thly, That when any thing is decided in a Council, the Authority which gives force to its Decrees, does not reſide only in the Pope, but chiefly in the Holy Spirit and the Catholick Church; 5thly, That there are expreſs Texts in the Goſpel, by which it appears, That Jeſus Chriſt has given his Apoſtles and Diſciples an Authority of Juriſdiction; 6thly, That 'tis agreeable to Evangelical and Apoſtolical Truth, to affirm, That the Power of Juriſdiction in inferiour Prelats, whether Biſhops or Pariſh-Prieſts, is immediately from God; 7thly, That there is a Power, viz. That of the Church, which can do ſomething of Right in certain Caſes againſt the Pope; 8thly, That every Man, in this Life, having the Uſe of Reaſon, of whatſoever Dignity, Authority and Preheminence, even the Pope himſelf, may commit the Crime of Simony. This Retractation was ſpoken by Sarrazin, in an Aſſembly of the Faculty, March the 30th, 1429. according to the way of reckoning in France at that time, i. e. in 1430.

In 1432. The Faculty was conſulted in the Name of the Biſhop of Evreux, and the Inquiſitor of that Dioceſe, about a Propoſition which one had advanc'd, That the Admonitions of Biſhops are Abuſes, and it declar'd by its Concluſion, dated May the 16th, That this Propoſition was reproachful, preſumptuous, raſh, ſcandalous, tending to Sedition and Rebellion, and to weaken the Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, contrary to the Doctrin of Jeſus Chriſt and the Apoſtles, and favourable to ſome Errors condemn'd in the Council of Conſtance.

In 1442. Nicholas Quadrigarii, a Doctor of Divinity, of the Order of Friars Hermites of St. Auſtin, having advanc'd in his Act de Veſperiis, two Propoſitions; 1ſt, That every thing which happens by Divine Providence, comes to paſs neceſſarily; the other, That there is no other Power of Juriſdiction in the Church but the Pope's, which is immediately from Jeſus Chriſt;

A Cenſure of the Propoſitions of a Friar Minor about the Hierarchy, in 1448.

In 1448. a Regular of the Order of Friars Minors, having advanc'd in the Dioceſe of Tournay, many Propoſitions contrary to the Rights of Pariſh-Prieſts, like thoſe which had been formerly advanced in 1429. by John Sarrazin; the Grand Vicars of the Biſhop addreſs'd themſelves to Giles Charlier, who wrote a piece to refute them, which is agreeable to the Doctrin of the Faculty of Theology at Paris, in the Cenſure againſt Sarrazin.

A Cenſure in 1451, againſt the Propoſitions of John Bartholomew, a Friar Minor, contrary to the Rites of Pariſh Prieſts.

In 1451. John Bartholomew, of the Order of Friars Minors, advanc'd at Roan in his Sermons many Propoſitions contrary to the Rights of Pariſh-Prieſts, chiefly about Confeſſion; viz. That the Pariſhioners may freely confeſs themſelves to Regulars Mendicants, without asking leave of the Pariſh-Prieſts: Whereupon the Proctor of the Archbiſhoprick caus'd an Information to be drawn up againſt him, and the Affair being brought before the Univerſity of Paris, this Regular appear'd in the Aſſembly of the Univerſity December the 4th, and refuſing to own that the Pariſhioners were obliged to confeſs themſelves once a Year to their Pariſh Prieſts; it was reſolved, That the Degree of a Licentiate ſhould be denied him, and that the deciding of the Queſtion ſhould be referred to the Faculties of Theology and Law.

The Differences of the Univerſity with Regulars Mendicants, about a Bull of privilege which they had obtained.

In 1456. this Queſtion was ſtarted again with ſome Warmth in the Univerſity, upon occaſion of a Bull obtain'd from Pope Nicholas V. by the Mendicants, who gave them leave to take Confeſſions, to the prejudice of the Right of Pariſh-Prieſts, eſtabliſhed by the Canon Omnis utriuſq; Sexus; and alſo, by Order of the Clementine Dudum. The Univerſity underſtanding that it had been preſented to the Official of Paris by ſome Regulars Carmelites, interpoſed an Appeal, and cited the Mendicants to appear on Monday, May the 24th, to declare to them, That they ſhould be excluded from the Univerſity, unleſs they renounc'd the obtaining of that Bull, and would promiſe to obtain the Revocation of it within a certain time. The Mendicants having appear'd, and refuſing to do it, the Univerſity declared them perjured and excluded from their Society.

The Mendicants inſtead of procuring the Revocation of that Bull, addreſs'd themſelves to Pope Calliſtus; complain'd of the Treatment they met with from the Univerſity, and obtain'd of him a Bull, which confirm'd that of Nicholas V. and null'd all that the Univerſity had done againſt them. Notwithſtanding this, the Univerſity continued firm, and the Mendicants were obliged to ſeek out ſome ways of Accommodation; the Archbiſhop of Rhemes, the Biſhop of Paris, and the Parliament concern'd themſelves in the Affair. At firſt it was propoſed, That the Mendicants ſhould declare they pretended not to acquire any new Right by this Bull: But this Propoſal appear'd to be captious, and was not at all accepted. Several other means were afterwards propoſed, which were alſo rejected, and none but one was accepted, viz. That the Mendicants ſhould refer the Examination of this Bull to a future Council; and that in the mean time, they ſhould adhere to the Definition of the Council of Lateran, and the Doctrin of the Gallican Church; but the Mendicants refuſed to ſubmit to this Condition. In the Month of September, Pope Caliſtus granted a Bull wherein, for promoting Peace, he revokes all the Privileges granted to the prejudice of the Clementine Dudum, which he orders all to obſerve. This Bull was ſent to the Univerſity, and read in the Aſſembly held February the 3d, in 1457. At laſt the Mendicants reſolved to ſubmit in order to their Reſtauration, and interpoſed the Authority of Prince Artus of Brittainy, Count of Richmont, Conſtable of France, who came with the Archbiſhop of Rhemes, and the Biſhop of Paris, to the Aſſembly of the Univerſity, which was held the 18th of that Month; where it was propoſed, That in order to the reſtoring of Peace to the Univerſity, the Bull in queſtion ſhould remain in the hands of the Biſhop of Paris; and that the Regulars Mendicants ſhould be re-admitted into the Univerſity, as they were before this Conteſt, upon Condition that they would obey the Bull of Caliſtus III. which had revoked that of Nicholas V. The Prior of the Dominicans demanded this in the Name of all the reſt; but becauſe he had not done it with Submiſſion enough, the Conſtable was obliged to bring the Regulars back into the Aſſembly, and to cauſe them to make a moſt humble Supplication by the Mouth of the Prior of the Auguſtins; after which they were admitted, upon Condition that they ſhould never make uſe of that Bull which remained in the Hands of the Biſhop of Paris, That they would obey the Bull revocatory, and cauſe it to be approved within a Year by their Generals; and that they would no more, for the future, obtain ſuch Bulls under pain of the ſame Excluſion. On the 11th of July following, a Friar-Preacher came to wait upon the Rector of the Univerſity in the Name of his General, and declared to him, That he had Orders to forbid the Friars of his Order to enter into the Univerſity upon theſe Conditions. The Rector made him no Anſwer, but ſummon'd the Friars Preachers to ratifie the Agreement, and when they refuſed to do it, upon the Account of the Prohibition of their General, the Univerſity excluded them yet a ſecond time from their Society until at laſt they were brought to ſupplicate on the eighth of October, That they would receive them, and promiſe to obſerve the Treaty made in the preſence of the Conſtable.

In 1465. the Faculty order'd its Deputies to examine three Propoſitions, which had been maintain'd in the Schools that are in the Street at Fouarra, by a Scholar who anſwer'd about Phyſicks; 1ſt, That every Man is an infinite number of Men, and that an infinite number of Men have but one Soul; 2d, That no Man ſhall be corrupted, tho' a Man ought to be corrupted; 3d, That each part of a Man is Man. The Faculty condemned theſe Propoſitions, and referr'd ferr'd the Propoſitions of other Reſpondents, which do not concern the Faith, to the Deciſion of the Univerſity.

A Cenſure in 1470. againſt ſome propoſitions concerning the Hierarchy.

In 1470. about the end of the Month of Auguſt, the Faculty condemn'd alſo a Propoſition like thoſe of Sarrazin and Quadrigarii, concerning Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, viz. That the Apoſtles did not receive their Power immediately from Jeſus Chriſt, but from St. Peter, which was advanc'd by John Meunier, of the Order of Friars-Preachers; who made Satisfaction, by declaring, That he knew not that the Faculty had condemned this Propoſition, and that he ſubmitted to their Deciſion.

A Cenſure of ſome propoſitions concerning the Hierarchy.

In the ſame Aſſembly a Doctor of Divinity, of the Order of Friars Minors, called Donat Dupuy, who had obtain'd from the Pope an Exemption of his Order, and was principal of the College of Lombards, where he ſtay'd, deſir'd to be admitted to Profeſs, repreſenting that he was not a Regular but in Name, and making great account of the Services he had done in the Reſtoration of this College. The Faculty thank'd him, but they would not grant his Deſire, leſt they ſhould infringe the Regulations made concerning the number of Profeſſors of the Mendicant Orders.

A Concluſion of the Faculty about the Truth of ſome propoſitions of the Creed.

In the Month of November in the ſame Year, the Faculty of Theology at Paris was conſulted by that of Louvain, whether the Propoſitions of the Creed which reſpect the Future, ſuch as theſe, Jeſus Chriſt will come, The Reſurrection of the Dead will happen, Be true, whether thoſe who affirm it do not fall into the Error of them who think that all things happen by Neceſſity? And the Faculty anſwered affirmatively by its Concluſion, on the 12th of this Month.

A Cenſure of a propoſition about the Trinity.

In 1477. the Faculty being aſſembled January 15th, condemn'd this Propoſition, which had been advanc'd by a Divine called William Milletis; viz. That the three Perſons are conſtituted by three Properties, whereof one is not God, and declared it ſcandalous, falſe and erroneous: The Theologue who advanc'd it, ſubmitted to this Condemnation.

A Cenſure of an erroneous propoſition about Indulgences.

In 1482. John Bethencourt, a Profeſſor of Meaux, preſented to the Faculty the following Propoſition, which was preach'd in the Dioceſe of Saintes; That every Soul which is in Purgatory is delivered from it as ſoon as any gives for it ſix Blancs of Alms to the Church of St. Peter of Saintonge. This Propoſition was founded upon a Bull of Indulgence granted by Pope Sixtus IV. to this Church Auguſt the 2d, 1476. The Faculty declar'd by its Concluſion November 20th, That this Propoſition was not in that Bull, and ought not be aſſerted or preach'd.

The Cenſure of ſome propoſitions about the Hierarchy, advanc'd by John Angeli.

At the Beginning of the next Year, the Chapter of the Church at Tournay ſent to the Faculty fourteen Propoſitions, which were advanc'd by Friar John Angeli, of the Order of Friars Minors, in the Sermons which he preach'd during the Lent of the preceding Year, in the Cathedral Church at Tournay, and the Pariſh-Churches of St. Peter and St. Quintyn. The Faculty having examined them, condemn'd them by its Concluſion, dated February the 1ſt. Here follow the Propoſitions and their Qualifications. Propoſition 1ſt, The Friars Minors being preſented and admitted by the Biſhop, are much more proper Prieſts and true Rectors than the Pariſh-Prieſts, becauſe they hold their Power of the Pope, whereas the Prieſts hold it only of the Biſhop: Qualification, Whatever may be ſaid of the firſt part of this Propoſition, by reaſon of the Equivocalneſs of the Word Proper; the Faculty declares, That the Propoſition in it ſelf, and as to all its parts, and the Proof of the laſt part, wherein 'tis ſaid, That the Prieſt receives only his Power from the Biſhop, is ſcandalous, erroneous in the Faith, deſtructive of the Hierarchical Order; and that it ought to be publickly retracted and abjur'd, for the Preſervation of that Order. The ſecond Propoſition, A Pariſhioner who has confeſs'd to theſe Friars, has ſatisfied the Decretal Omnis utriuſq; Sexus, and is not obliged to confeſs himſelf once a Year to his proper Rector, nor to deſire leave of him: The Qualification, This Propoſition according to the Terms wherein it is conceived, is ſcandalous, contrary to common Right, and ought to be publickly retracted upon the account of the Obedience and Reſpect which Inferiors owe to Prelats. The third Propoſition, If a Rector refuſe to adminiſter the Euchariſt to a Pariſhioner, who has confeſs'd to a Regular, he may come to this Regular and he ſhall adminiſter it to him: The Qualification, This Propoſition is falſe, ſuſpected of Hereſie, contrary to common Right, and ought to be publickly retracted. The fourth Propoſition, A Pariſh-Prieſt can receive nothing from his Pariſhioners for Confeſſion, nor for Adminiſtration of the Sacraments; but the ſame is not to be ſaid of the Mendicants: The Qualification, This Propoſition is contrary to the Diſpoſition of Natural Right, and the expreſs Command of God, and therefore falſe and notoriouſly Heretical. The fifth Propoſition, the Pariſh-Prieſt who affirms, That his Pariſhioners are obliged to confeſs to him once in a Year, under pain of mortal Sin, is excommunicate; and if he celebrate Divine Service he is irregular: The Qualification, This Propoſition is falſe and reproachful. The ſixth Propoſition, He who cauſes Maſs to be ſaid by a Prieſt, who keeps a Woman in his Houſe, or is otherwiſe of ill Behaviour, ſins mortally: The Qualification, This Propoſition being indefinite is doubtful, raſh, and ought never to be preach'd to the common People. The ſeventh Propoſition, The Friars Mendicants are not obliged to pay what is enacted in the Clementine Dudum: The Qualification, This Propoſition is contrary to common Right. The eighth Propoſition, The Pope can deſtroy all the Canon Law, and make a new one: The Qualification, This Propoſition is ſcandalous, blaſphemous, notoriouſly Heretical, and Erroneous. The ninth Propoſition, Some Saints are furiouſly mad: The Qualification, This Propoſition is ſcandalous, blaſphemous, offenſive to pious Ears. The tenth Propoſition, The Souls which are in Purgatory, are under the Juriſdiction of the Pope, and if he pleaſes, he may empty all Purgatory: The Qualification, This Propoſition in it ſelf is doubtful, doubtful, and in the meaning of him who advanc'd it about ordinary Juriſdiction, it is falſe, ſcandalous, and ought not to be preached to the common People. The eleventh Propoſition, The Pope may take away from an Eccleſiaſtick the half of the Revenues of his Benefices, and give them away to another without ſhewing any Cauſe for ſo doing: The Qualification, This Propoſition is dangerous, and ought not to be preach'd in theſe times. The twelfth Propoſition, Whoſoever contradicts the Will of the Pope acts like a Pagan, and incurs the Sentence of Excommunication Ipſo facto. The Pope cannot be reproved by any perſon, except in caſe of Hereſy: The Qualification, This Propoſition is falſe, and contains a manifeſt Lye. The fourteenth Propoſition, Friar John Angely has many times affirm'd, That theſe Articles are true, and that he would maintain them at Paris, and over all the Earth, even till he was burnt, without ever revoking them; and that he was not of the number of thoſe Preachers who retract: The Qualification, This is the Diſcourſe of a Man who is impudent and obſtinate; and there is ſufficient Reaſon to proceed againſt him judicially, as one who is very ſtrongly ſuſpected of Hereſie.

The Cenſure of ſome propoſitions about the Hierarchy, advanc'd by John Angely.

The Cenſures of ſome impertinent propoſitions of John Merchand, a Regular Obſervantine.

Another Friar Minor Obſervantine, called John Merchand, having preached in 1486 in the City of Beſançon, many Impertinencies about the Prerogatives of St. Francis, the Faculty of Theology at Paris, by their Concluſion April the 10th, cenſur'd twelve of his Propoſitions. The 1ſt, That Lucifer, who was the Head of the Angels, having left his place vacant, which was wonderfully ſet off and adorn'd, it was reſerv'd for St. Francis only; becauſe as Lucifer was driven from it upon the account of his Pride, ſo there was no Saint found upon Earth, which had ſo much Humility as St. Francis; upon which account he was preferr'd to that place. He added, if any Perſon will not believe me unleſs he go thither and ſee, I would rather ſee it than believe it. The Faculty examin'd this Propoſition by its parts; as to the 1ſt, which is Copulative, it was found falſe, contrary to the Sentiment of the Saints; the 2d, which concerns the vacant place of Lucifer, which was above the Angels, whither the Preacher affirms that St. Francis was taken up, appear'd to them raſh, preſumptuous, and derogatory from the ſingular Prerogative of the Virgin; the 3d, which is of the Humility of St. Francis, is alſo declared temerarious, preſumptuous, falſe, reproachful to the other Saints; and in fine the laſt part, If any one will not believe, &c. is declar'd indecent. The ſecond Propoſition is, That St. Francis is like to Jeſus Chriſt in forty Reſpects, That he is a ſecond Chriſt, and a ſecond Son of God. This Propoſition is juſtly cenſur'd as falſe and Heretical. The third, That the Conception of St. Francis was foretold to his Mother by an Angel, like that of Jeſus Chriſt: This is cenſur'd as raſh and groundleſs. The following Propoſitions until the 11th, contain the Fables about the Brands of St. Francis, which are cenſur'd as having no Authority. The 11th, That St. Francis deſcends every Year on the Day of his Feſtival into Purgatory, and delivers out of it all thoſe of his own Order, and that he carries them into Paradiſe, as Jeſus Chriſt carried thither the Souls of the ancient Fathers. This Propoſition is cenſured as ſuſpected of Hereſie, contrary to the Juſtice and the Law of God, preach'd for Intereſt, and on purpoſe to deceive the People. The 12th, That St. Francis obtain'd of God, That all the Regulars of his Order, who do not obſerve his Rule as they ought, ſhall not continue in this World; and that thoſe who ſhall ſpeak evil of his Regulars ſhall be puniſhed, a thing which he never told to any but his Confeſſor, who reveal'd it after his Death. This Propoſition is condemned as ſchiſmatical, ſeditious notoriouſly falſe, impertinent, and ſuſpected of Hereſie.

The Cenſures of the Errors of John Lailier.

As there were ſome Preachers who exceeded all due Bounds in their Devotion or Superſtition towards the Saints, ſo there were ſome others who fell into the contrary Extream; and among the reſt one nam'd Lailier, a Licentiate in Theology of the Faculty of Paris, who preaching in the ſame Year, 1486. at Paris, advanc'd many bold Propoſitions againſt the Authority and Laws of the Church. The Faculty equally condemn'd both theſe Extreams, and with no leſs Conſtancy oppoſed the Novelties of Lailier, than thoſe of the Regulars Obſervantines, of whom we have already ſpoken. Among the Propoſitions advanc'd by Lailier, they made choice of the nine following. "The 1ſt, You ought to keep the Commands of God and the Apoſtles, and as to "the Commands of the Biſhops, they are no better than Chaff, for they have deſtroyed the "Church by their Reveries; The 2d, St. Francis is rather in the place where Lucifer is at preſent, i. e. in Hell, than in the place where Lucifer was before his Fall, i. e. in Heaven; "The 3d, I am not bound to believe that a Man is a Saint becauſe he is canoniz'd; ſince he is "canoniz'd for Mony, and none are canoniz'd but thoſe who give ſomething for it; The 4th, "If a Prieſt marry clandeſtinely, and come to me and confeſs it, I would not enjoin him Penance; The 5th, The Prieſts of the Eaſtern Church do not ſin in marrying, and I believe that "neither ſhould we ſin in the Weſtern Church, if we ſhould marry; The 6th, Four Hundred "Years agoe all Prieſts were forbidden to marry by a Pope or a Butterfly *, I don't know whether he could do it; The 7th, I would give two Blancs to him that will produce any paſſage of "Scripture, whereby we are obliged to faſt in Lent; The 8th, ſince the time of St. Sylveſter, "the Roman Church is not the Church of Jeſus Chriſt, but the Church of Cæſar and of Silver; "The 9th, There is no more reaſon to believe the Legends of the Saints than the Chronicles of "the Kings of France. The Faculty by its Concluſion dated June the 6th, 1486. condemned theſe Propoſitions, and apply'd to each the ſuitable Qualifications of heretical, erroneous, ſchiſmatical, ſcandalous, raſh, &c. together with another Propoſition which the ſame Preacher advanc'd in his Sorbonica; That a meer Prieſt can as well conſecrate the Chriſm, and confer Orders,

* D'un Pape ou un Papillon.

ders, as the Pope, or the Biſhop, and that all Prieſts are equal in the power of Order and Juriſdiction, as were alſo all the Apoſtles. The Faculty reſolved at the ſame time to deny the degree of Doctor to Lailier; whereupon he Addreſſed himſelf to the Parliament, who referred this Affair to the Biſhop of Paris, to be Examined and Judged by him joyntly with the Inquiſitor, and by 4 Doctors deputed from the Faculty. Lailier preſented to the Official of Paris a Writing, for explaining ſome of his Propoſitions, wherein he affirms that he had ſaid, Firſt, I never found in the Old or New Teſtament, that our Lord or his Apoſtles Commanded to Faſt Corporally in the time of Lent, by way of a Precept, under pain of Mortal Sin, or of Damnation; and even the Holy Fathers who ſpeak of it or deſcribe it, do not Command it under pain of the great Excommunication, or of Mortal Sin; they never uſed theſe words about it, Præcipimus & Mandamus. Secondly, I never ſaid that the Church can oblige under pain of Mortal Sin, or cannot, in a Sermon, but in a Diſputation according to the Cuſtom of the School, when the Reverend Father in God Monſieur de Meaux was preſent, I argued Pro & Contra about it, as a Problematical Matter, as Mr. John Gerſon, and Peter de Alliaco have done. Thirdly, I never ſaid that Prieſts can Marry after they have received Holy Orders, but I ſaid that from the Paſſion of our Lord, to the time of Gregory VII. they did Marry. i. e. until the year 1073. and that St. Peter, and St. Paul, St. Philip the Apoſtle and Deacon, St. Fabian the Pope and Martyr, St. Hillary the Biſhop of Poitiers, St. German of Auxerres, and many others were Married; and 'tis now two years ſince I ſaid this. Fourthly, that there are ſome Propoſitions more bold than mine in Gerſon's Treatiſe about the Spiritual Life of the Soul. The Faculty Cenſured a-new theſe Propoſitions, except the 2d, as to which it declared that it no ways concern'd them. The Biſhop and Inquiſitor did each on their part draw up the Proceſs of Lailier. The Inquiſitor Communicated the Informations he had made to the Biſhop, but the Biſhop would not Communicate his to him; and without Appealing he decided the Cauſe of Lailier Summarily, and after he had cauſed him to own and abjure the Propoſitions Cenſured by the Faculty, he gave him Abſolution from the Excommunication, and reſtor'd him by his Sentence, to his Functions, Honours and Dignities, and gave him a Right of being promoted to other Degrees, and aboliſh'd all Marks of Infamy.

A Cenſure of the Errors of John Lailier.

This Sentence was given and pronounced by the Biſhop of Paris, aſſiſted with the Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Judges whom he had called together June 23d. in 1486. and in purſuance of it on the 29th of the ſame Month Lailier abjured publickly in a Sermon Preached at the Cathedral Church at a Solemn Proceſſion, the Errors contained in the Propoſitions Cenſured by the Faculty; afterwards he uſed his Endeavours to be promoted to the Degree of Doctor, but the Faculty continued ſtill to deny him; and when the Biſhop of Paris would force them to grant the Degree according to his Sentence, they interpoſed an Appeal to the Perſon to whom it belonged, by their Act dated November the 6th. Pope Innocent VIII. being informed of this Affair, ſent 2 Bulls, one Addreſs'd to John Coſſart an Inquiſitor, by which he forbids Lailier to Preach, and intruſts this Affair with that Inquiſitor, the Arch-biſhop of Sens, and the Biſhop of Meaux; the other Addreſs'd to the Faculty, whoſe Zeal he commends, and approves what they had done againſt Lailier, forbids them to give him the Degree of Doctor, makes void and nulls the Sentence of the Biſhop of Paris. Theſe Bulls are dated the 6th and the 9th of December, in 1486. There is no more about this Affair in our Regiſters, but an Extract of ſome Propoſitions which Lailier maintain'd in his Act of Sorbonica, dated July the 30th, in 1484. among which there is one which affirms that Confeſſion is not of Divine Right: The other tend to overthrow the Primacy of the Pope, and the Epiſcopal Power, and to eſtabliſh an equality of Power and Juriſdiction among the Miniſters of the Church.

The Sentence of the Biſhop of Paris, concerning Lailier.

An Appeal of the Faculty from the Sentence of the Biſhop of Paris.

The Bulls of the Pope againſt Lailier.

Some time after the Biſhop of Meaux preſented to the Faculty the 7 following Propoſitions. 1ſt, 'Tis a greater Crime to have to do with ones Godmother, than their Mother. 2d, The Biſhop canot Abſolve from ſuch a Crime. 3d, A Prieſt who is a Fornicator cannot ſay Dominus Vobiſcum, nor repeat Divine Service in any place. The 4th, The Sacraments which are Adminiſtred, or the Service which is ſaid by ſuch a Prieſt, is of no more value than the barking of Dogs. 5th, There is but one St. Ives among the Advocates who is Saved. 6th, Hell is all fill'd with Advocates, and therefore no perſon ought to fear that he ſhall go there. 7th. The Apothecaries, Artificers of Arms, Phyſicians, and thoſe who make profeſſion of other Trades, ſhall never go to Paradiſe, unleſs they be carried thither by the Devils, or upon the Tail of a Mule. The Faculty Cenſured theſe Propoſitions as falſe, ſcandalous, and impertinent, on the 3d of November, in 1486.

Some other Propoſitions Cenſured, in 1486.

On the 2d of Auguſt, in 1490. the Faculty declared a Contract to be guilty of Uſury, whereby a Church had bought a Rent of 30 Livres for 300 Livres, becauſe they had added this Clauſe to it, that when the Church would, the Sellers ſhould be obliged to reſtore the Principal to that Church without diminution of their Intereſt: On the contrary, the Faculty determined that the Intereſt of 26 years which the Church had received, ought to charged upon the Principal.

A Concluſion of the Faculty about a Contract for Uſury.

Four days after the Faculty made a Concluſion, wherein it Condemn'd the Superſtition of a Prayer uſed againſt the Plague.

A Concluſion againſt a Superſtitious Prayer made againſt the Plague.

In 1493. the Faculty was Conſulted by the Parliament, about the Profeſſion, and the Books of Judicial Aſtrology of Simon Phares. This Man having exerciſed this Art at Lyons, was apprehended by Order of the Official, his Books were ſeiz'd, and he was forbidden by a Sentence to practiſe Judicial Aſtrology, and was Condemn'd to ſome Puniſhment for having done it. Phares appealed from this Sentence to the Parliament. The Parliament would not judge in this Affair, without having the Opinion of the Faculty, and ſent to them the Books of Judicial Aſtrology which were found in the hands of Phares, and ſeiz'd by the Official of Lyons to be examin'd. The Faculty appointed Deputies to examine theſe Books, and Condemned this Art. Whereupon an Act was drawn up in the Name of the Faculty, which contained the Sentence that the Deputies had given of all theſe Books, and by which it exhorts the Parliament to oppoſe the Progreſs of this Art, which it declares to be pernicious, Fabulous, Groundleſs, Superſtitious, and adds that it Uſurps the Honour of God, corrupts good Manners, and was invented by Devils for the deſtruction of Men. According to this Opinion the Parliament confirmed by its Decree the Sentence of the Official of Lyons, and upon the Remonſtrance of the Faculty, forbad to exerciſe Judicial Aſtrology, to Conſult Diviners, to Sell the Books mention'd in the Deciſion of the Faculty, or to uſe them, and Ordained that the Copies ſeiz'd upon Phares, ſhould be ſent back, together with his Perſon, and delivered into the hands of the Official of Paris.

Some Propoſitions about the Incarnation Cenſured.

In the ſame year the Faculty, according to the Opinion of its Deputies, Cenſured the two following Propoſitions, which were advanc'd by Henry Banquevil a Friar Minor. The Firſt, Man was made God. The Second, Jeſus Chriſt had a beginning. It declared that the firſt of theſe Propoſitions taken rigorouſly was Falſe and Erroneous, forbad any to teach or maintain it, except they expreſs the ſenſe wherein ſome Doctors had affirm'd it; i. e. that 'tis come to paſs that Man is God; it declared alſo the ſecond to be Falſe, Scandalous, and Heretical, being taken rigorouſly.

A Cenſure againſt a Sermon of Grillot, a Friar Minor, bout the Conception.

About the end of the ſame year Friar John Grillot of the Order of Friars Minors, having Preach'd on the day of the Virgin's Conception, Evening and Morning, in the Church of St. Germain of Auxerres, and having taken for the Text of his Sermon in the Morning theſe words, This Woman was taken in Adultery, and given Reaſons to prove that the Virgin was Conceiv'd in Sin, tho' he aſſerted the contrary in the Sermon After-noon, was Cited before the Faculty, and obliged to Condemn this way of Preaching, and to acknowledge that it tended rather to the Subverſion of People, than their Education. This Retractation is dated December the 25th.

A Cenſure of two Propoſitions.

In 1495. the Faculty by its Concluſion of January the 15th, Cenſured the Falſity and Hereſie of the two following Propoſitions; 1ſt, The Eſſence of God is a continued quantity; 2dly, Jeſus Chriſt is a continued quantity.

A Cenſure in 1497. about the ſenſe of a Prophecy.

On the 15th of April, in 1497. the Faculty Condemned this Propoſition; when the Prophet David ſays in the Pſalms, I am a Worm, and not a Man, &c. tho' this may be verified of Jeſus Chriſt according to the Allegorical and Anagogical Senſe, yet it could no ways agree to him according to the Literal Senſe.

The Retractation of a Sermon made by Friar John Alutarii.

A little while after the Faculty obliged John Alutarii to retract a Sermon which he had Preached at St. John in Greve on the Birth-day of the Virgin, becauſe tho' he had maintain'd that the Virgin had not committed Venial Sin, yet he brought Reaſons and Authorities againſt it, and handled this Queſtion indiſcreetly, and to the Scandal of the People.

A Decree of the Faculty in 1497 about the Immaculate Conception.

On the 23d of Auguſt in the ſame year, the Faculty drew up and publiſhed its Decree about the Immaculate Conception; wherein, after they had Conſulted about this Matter in 3 Aſſemblies; whereof the 1ſt was held March the 3d, 1496. and the 2d the 9th of the ſame Month, they reſolved to oblige themſelves by Oath, to maintain that the Virgin was preſerved from Original Sin, and never to admit any into their Society but thoſe who would take this Oath, and declared that they would deprive of all Honour, and baniſh, all thoſe who did maintain the contrary Propoſition, which they judged falſe, impious, and erroneous.

The Retractation of John of Verger, a Friar Preacher.

Notwithſtanding this Decree, there was a Jacobine of Roan, called Friar John of Verger, who was ſo bold as to Preach at Diep the contrary Doctrin; the Faculty Cenſured 3 Propoſitions which he had advanc'd upon this Subject, by their Concluſion dated September the 19th. in 1497.

A Cenſure againſt the Propoſitions of Morcel.

On the 23d of Auguſt in the ſame year, the Faculty Cenſured alſo 4 Propoſitions of another Dominican, Named John Morcel, who derogated from the Honour of the Virgin. Here follow theſe Propoſitions, and their Qualifications.

Firſt Propoſition, God can produce a meer Creature more Glorious than the Virgin Mary by his abſolute Power, although he cannot do it according to his ordinary Power: The Qualification; this Propoſition tho' true as to its firſt part, yet was Preached fooliſhly, indiſcreetly, and did no ways tend to the Benefit and Edification of the People, and ought not at all to have been Preach'd; and as to the ſecond part, if he compares the Virgin to the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt, and his Soul as to Glory, it is falſe and Erroneous in Faith, and ought to be retracted.

The Second Propoſition, It is a Problem, viz. whether the Virgin Mary was Corporally more Beautiful than Eve: The Qualification, This Propoſition is raſh, derogatory from the Honour and Dignity of the Virgin, falſe, contrary to the Doctrin of the Saints, ſuſpected of Hereſie, and therefore ought to be retracted.

The Third Propoſition, It is Apocryphal to ſay that Jeſus Chriſt was before the Virgin in his Aſſumption: The Qualification; this Propoſition is falſe, contrary to the Writings of the Doctors, ſavours of Impiety, and is offenſive to pious Ears.

The

The Fourth Propoſition, We are not obliged to Believe under pain of Mortal Sin, that the Virgin was taken up into Heaven in Body and Soul, becauſe this is not an Article of Faith: The Qualification; this Propoſition as it is expreſs'd is raſh, ſcandalous, impious, tending to diminiſh the Devotion of People towards the Virgin, falſe and Heretical. Many People will find that there is ſome Extravagance in theſe Qualifications. A Cenſure against the Propoſitions of Moreel.

On the Month of January in 1498. the Faculty being Conſulted by King Charles VIII. about the neceſſity of Celebrating General Councils, decided the Queſtions which his Majeſty had propoſed to them after this manner. Firſt, That the Pope was bound to call together every tenth year a General Council, chiefly upon the account of any Notorious Corruption in the Head and Members of the Church. Secondly, That if the Pope being deſired, did refuſe or delay to do it, the Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Princes might call it together. Thirdly, That in this Caſe thoſe who make up the Aſſembly might Celebrate the Council, and provide for the Neceſſities of the Church. This Concluſion is dated February the 10th. The Anſwer of the Faculty to the King, about the Celebration of a General Council.

About the end of the ſame year the Faculty was Conſulted concerning Sixteen Extravagant Propoſitions, which were Preached at Tournay by John Vitrier, a Regular of the Order of Friars Minors of the Obſervance, which it Cenſured, and qualified by its Concluſion dated October the 2d. A Cenſure of 16 Extravagant Propoſitions of John Vitrier, an Obſervantine.

Firſt, It would be better to Cut a Child's Throat, than to place it in a Religious Society which is not Reform'd.

Secondly, it would be better to take your Daughter by the hand, and lead her to a Lewd place, than to place her in a Nunnery that is not Reform'd. Theſe two Propoſitions are Cenſured as Scandalous, Seditious, ſavouring of the pride of the Phariſees, as falſe and contrary to good Manners.

Thirdly, Whoſoever hears Maſs ſaid by a Prieſt who has a Wife at home, ſins mortally.

Fourthly, whoſoever makes a Prieſt that keeps a Wife at home Celebrate Maſs, ſins mortally, and by giving him Mony, you put a halter about his neck.

Fifthly, If your Pariſh-Prieſt, or any other Prieſt keep Women in their Houſes, you ought to go and pull them out by force, and drive them out of their Houſe. Theſe Propoſitions are Condemn'd as Scandalous, Seditious, Falſe, &c.

Sixthly, The Muſick which is Sung at Notredam, is nothing but Lewdneſs, and a provocation to Lewdneſs. The Qualification which the Faculty gave of this Propoſition was this; Altho' we approve not Laſcivious and Theatrical Songs, if any ſuch be Sung in the Church, yet we commend and approve the Singing of Muſick, which is uſually done in the Church, becauſe it excites the People to Devotion.

Seventhly, The King never gave the Privilege of ſo much Wine Cuſtom-free at Tournay, to maintain the Lewd Canons and Eccleſiaſticks. This is Cenſur'd as Scandalous, and Reproachful. Les malles Tantes de vin a Tournay.

Eighthly, No Mony is due to Churches for Pardons.

Ninthly, Pardons are never given for Lewd Places.

Tenthly, Pardons come from Hell. Theſe Propoſitions are Cenſur'd as Scandalous, Falſe, and Heretical, &c.

Eleventhly, When you hear Maſs, you ought to ſay nothing, and when the Holy Sacrament is Elevated, you ought to look towards the ground, and not upon the Holy Sacrament. This General Propoſition is declared falſe, and contrary to the practice of the Church.

Twelfthly, The Hours of the Virgin ought not to be ſaid by the Seculars.

Thirteenth, The Saints ought not to be pray'd to. Theſe Propoſitions are Cenſur'd as Falſe and Heretical.

Fourteenth, There are ſome who ſay certain Prayers of the Virgin Mary, to the end that at the hour of death they may ſee the Virgin Mary; thou ſhalt ſee the Devil, and not the Virgin Mary. The Qualification of this Propoſition is thus: If the meaning be that it is not lawful to repeat certain devout Prayers, to the end that the Virgin may aſſiſt at the death of him who prays devoutly; This Propoſition is falſe: But if the meaning be to Condemn the Superſtitious Credulity of ſome, who think that by vertue of certain Prayers rather than other, the Virgin will appear to them viſibly at the hour of Death, we do not Condemn this Senſe.

Fifteen, It would be better for a Married Woman to break her Vow of Marriage, than to break her Faſt.

Sixteenth, I would rather be the Cauſe of a Man's death, than lie with a Woman. Theſe two Propoſitions are Cenſured as Falſe, Scandalous, &c.

We may alſo rank among the Errors that were ſtarted in the Fifteenth Century, the Propoſitions of Matthew Grabon, againſt the Poverty of thoſe who were not Regulars, which are Condemn'd in the Council of Baſil, whereof we have already ſpoken; and the Reveries of Auguſtin of Rome, of the Order of Friars Hermits of St. Auſtin, who wrote a Treatiſe of the Church, divided into three parts; whereof the firſt was, Of the Union of Jeſus Chriſt and his Church, or, of Jeſus Chriſt entire; the ſecond, Of Jeſus Chriſt as Head, and of his Illuſtrious Dominion; the third, Of the Charity of Jeſus Chriſt towards the Elect, and of his Infinite Love. He carried this matter ſo high in this Work of the Union of the Human Nature with the Divine, that he advanc'd ſome Propoſitions, wherein he attributes to the Human Nature in Chriſt, what agrees only to the Divine, as That the human Nature in Jeſus Chriſt is truly, naturally, and properly God; The Errors of Grabon.

The Errors of Grabon.

that the two Natures in Jeſus Chriſt are equally amicable; that the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt ſees God as perfectly as his Divinity: And concerning the Union of the Members with Chriſt; that the Union of Charity is not ſufficient to make a Member of Jeſus Chriſt, but a Man muſt be of the number of the Elect and Predeſtinate.

Theſe Errors, and the Book of this Author were Condemn'd in the Council of Baſil, Seſs. 22. only his Perſon was ſpar'd, becauſe he teſtified his Submiſſion, and gave good Reaſons for his Abſence.

The Errors of Peter Oſma.

Laſtly, We muſt joyn to all the reſt who wandred from the right way in the Fifteenth Century, Peter Oſma, a Profeſſor at Salamanca, who publiſh'd a Book wherein he maintains that Confeſſion is not the Inſtitution of Jeſus Chriſt, but the Invention of Man; that Mortal Sins are blotted out by Contrition alone, and Sins of thought by a meer Remorſe. This Opinion was Condemn'd, and the Author was Anathematiz'd (if he did not retract) by the Arch-biſhop of Toledo, Alphonſus Carrilla, whoſe Sentence was Confirm'd by the Conſtitution of Sixtus IV. Publiſhed at the beginning of Auguſt, in 1479.

The Impieties of William Hillderniſſen, and Giles Le Chantre: Adamites.

There were alſo ſome Fanaticks in this Century, who publiſh'd Extravagant Errors, among the reſt a certain Carmelite, Nam'd William of Hilderniſſen, and Giles Le Chantre, both Flemings, who called themſelves new Prophets, Preached a New Law, permitted all ſorts of Crimes, denied the Reſurrection, and advanc'd many other Errors which were Condemn'd by Peter Ailly, and by the Inquiſitor of Flanders, in 1412. Another Fleming called Pikard, was Head of the Sect of the Adamites in Germany, who led an infamous Life, and were deſtroyed by Ziſca.

The Diggers.

Of this ſort were the Diggers of Bohemia, ſo called becauſe they dug their Aſſemblies in Foreſts and Caves, where they derided the Church, its Miniſters, and Sacraments.

The Impieties of Harman Riſvich.

Harman Riſvich, a Hollander, taught horrible Impieties, that the Soul dies with the Body, that there is no Hell, that Matter is Eternal, that God never Created the Angels, that Moſes and Jeſus Chriſt were Impoſtors, that our Creed is a Fable, and the Goſpel a Foolery. He was Condemn'd to perpetual Impriſonment, in 1499. and having made his eſcape out of it, and continuing ſtill to vomit forth his Blaſphemies, he was burnt alive at the Hague, in 1512.

CHAP. IX.

Eccleſiaſtical Obſervations upon the Fifteenth Century.

The Principal Queſtions Debated in the Fifteenth Century.

THOSE who had any thing to do in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, did almoſt wholly ſpend the firſt years of this Century about the Schiſm of the Popes. It gave occaſion to handle the Queſtions of the Superiority of a General Council above the Pope, and of its Infallibility. The Project of the Re-union of the Greeks deſerv'd the ſerious conſideration of the whole Earth, but the Effects did not anſwer the Expectations which many had of that Undertaking. The Wickleſites and Bohemians made a terrible Schiſm in the Latin Church, which could not be wholly extinguiſh'd, neither by violent nor by gentle means. Theſe were the great Affairs of the Church in this Century as to Doctrin, for I reckon not in this rank the Errors of ſome private Divines which were ſtifled at their Birth, nor the Diſputes of School-Men about Queſtions purely Theological. This Science, I mean Theology purely Scholaſtical, degenerated alſo in this Century, and begun to be laid aſide by Men of the beſt Judgment, who apply'd themſelves to a Theology more ſolid, founded upon the Holy Scripture, and Tradition, and who Cultivated the Sciences, and polite Learning, as we have already obſerv'd in the beginning of the Fourth Chapter of this Work.

The Pretenſions of the Court of Rome. Gratiæ expectativæ.

The Court of Rome continued her Endeavours to make her ſelf Maſter of all Benefices by Reſervations, Promiſes of vacant Benefices, Preventions, Annates, &c. but was ſtoutly oppoſed herein, chiefly by France, and Germany; the Decrees of the Council of Conſtance, and Bazil, the Laws of our Kings and Emperors, the pragmatick Sanction, and the German Concordate put a ſtop to their Covetouſneſs, and maintain'd the Election of Elective Benefices, and the Collations of Ordinaries. But the Court of Rome found a way to break thro' theſe Bars at laſt, to Aboliſh the Pragmatick, to Reſtore the Annates, to Ruin the Elections, and to obtain the Sovereign diſpoſal of all Benefices. This is what ſhe attempted about the end of this Century, and which ſhe compaſſed at the beginning of the next, as we ſhall ſhew hereafter.

The Reformation of the Church.

The Neceſſity of the Reformation of the Church in its Head and Members as to Diſcipline and Manners, was acknowledged by the Councils of Conſtance, and of Bazil. They did in vain make attempts to compaſs it, for it was always put off and eluded. The General Councils which were to meet every ten years to take pains about it, was a Project that was never put in execution. There were ſcarce any General Councils, and thoſe who did meet, thought of nothing but the moſt groſs diſorders of the Inferior Clergy; the Declarations and Remonſtrances of private Men about the abuſes of that time were fruitleſs, and ſerv'd only to preſerve the Memory of them to Poſterity.

The

Obſervations upon Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction.

The Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction over the Temporal Affairs, was by little and little, reſtrain'd in this Century as to Lay-men; but the Exemptions of the Clergy from a Laical Tribunal, were maintain'd with Vigour by the Councils. The Council of Baſil and the Pragmatick Sanction, granted the Pope the Right of receiving Appeals in all kind of Cauſes, and the Deciſion of the greater Cauſes in the firſt Inſtance, but upon Condition that he ſhould name Judges to ſit upon the ſeveral places where the Fact was committed.

Of Tithes and Eccleſiaſtical Revenues.

During the Schiſm, the Eccleſiaſticks were often vexed with Tenths and other Impoſitions which the Popes laid upon the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues. Martin V. in Seſſion 43, of the Council of Conſtance, forbad other Prelats to impoſe any, and even the Popes themſelves to do it, unleſs it was for a Cauſe of great Importance, which was difficult, and concern'd the Benefit of the Univerſal Church, with the conſent of the Cardinals and Prelats; and without conſulting the Biſhops of that Kingdom or Province upon whom the Tax was laid, who muſt conſent to it either one third part, or at leaſt the greateſt part of them; and in this caſe, he order'd that the Tax ſhould be gather'd by Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and by Apoſtolical Authority. In the mean time, the Popes have ſince frequently impoſed Tenths upon Churches. Eugenius IV. granted the King of Cyprus in 1431. the hundredth part of the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues of France, Spain, and England, to ſet at Liberty the Hoſtages which he had left with the Sultan. He granted alſo King Alphonſus a Sum of 200000 Florins, to be levied upon the Churches of Arragon and Sicily. Nicholas V. impoſed Tenths in 1453. upon all the Clergy for a War againſt the Turk. Calliſtus III. in 1457. laid another Tax on them upon the ſame Occaſion. Pius II. did the like in 1459. but the Germans refuſing to pay it, he was forced to remit it as to them. In 1490. Innocent VIII. would have impoſed Tenths upon the Clergy of France, for a War againſt the Turk, but the Univerſity of Paris oppoſed it, and appealed from the Decree of the Pope, by their Act dated September the 13th, in 1491. and it continued in theſe Sentiments; for Alexander VI. having a mind to impoſe alſo Tenths upon the Clergy of France, made uſe of Cenſures againſt thoſe who would not pay them; the Faculty of Theology being conſulted in 1501. made anſwer, That theſe Cenſures were null, that none ought to delate any Perſon, nor ſo much as fear them. The Heirs of Eccleſiaſticks ſucceeded them in all their Goods which they left, without making any Diſtinction of Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, provided they made good the Repairs of Churches and Buildings, and they could diſpoſe of them by Will. The Regulars were alſo Heirs to their Kindred as if they had been Men of the World, and could diſpoſe of theſe Inheritances.

Jubilees and Indulgences. Commendams.

Pope Sixtus IV. put off the Jubilee from twenty five Years to twenty five Years. The Popes eaſily granted a very great Number of Indulgences, and begun even to make a kind of Traffick with 'em. The greateſt part of Benefices were held in Commendam, which became ſo frequent, that Paul II. being lately advanc'd to the Pontifical Dignity, ſaid, That ſince the Pontificate of Calliſtus III. there had been more than five hundred Monaſteries held in Commendam. The Cardinal of Porto oppoſed this Cuſtom, and Pope Paul II. approved his Remonſtrance. Nevertheleſs he continued ſtill to grant the greateſt part of Abbeys in Commendam, and this Cuſtom paſſed as it were into a Law. The Right of Nomination by Graduates, derived its Original from the Decree of the Council of Bazil, and the Pragmatick. Reſignations and Tranſlations were not ordinarily made, according as was enacted in the Decretals.

The Differences of Pariſh-prieſts with the Regulars about Confeſſion, and the Hierarchical Functions.

Notwithſtanding the Regulations of the Popes, the Pariſh-Prieſts and Regulars Mendicants were always conteſting about the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and particularly about the Eaſter Confeſſion. The Regulars diminiſhed as much as they could the Authority of the Pariſh-Prieſts, and equall'd themſelves to, or even preferred themſelves above them, as having their Miſſion immediately from the Pope. The Pariſh-Prieſts on the contrary, maintain'd, That they were true Paſtors appointed by Jeſus Chriſt; and that the Regulars were only by Sufferance, by accident in caſe of Neceſſity, and with the Conſent of the Ordinaries and Pariſh-Prieſts. We have lately ſeen the Propoſitions which Gorell, Sarrazin, Quadrigarii, and other Regulars Mendicants taught upon this Subject, and the Cenſures of the Faculty of Theology at Paris, which maintain'd the Right and Dignity of the Pariſh-Prieſts. The Regulars maintain'd alſo, That any Perſon might confeſs to them at Eaſter, as at any other time; and that none was obliged to confeſs himſelf to his Pariſh-Prieſt, nor to ask leave of him to go and confeſs himſelf to the Regulars. The Popes favoured the Regulars Mendicants, yet they durſt not plainly decide in their Favours, and contented themſelves with granting general Privileges, without entring upon Particulars. Alexander V. by his Bull dated October the 10th, in 1409 confirm'd the Decretals of Boniface VIII. and John XXII. whereof we have already ſpoken in the Obſervations upon the preceding Centuries. And whereas it was repreſented to 'em on behalf of the Regulars Mendicants, that the Errors of Poilly were reviv'd, which had been condemn'd by the Decretal of John XXII. and that the following Propoſitions were maintain'd; 1ſt, That he who confeſſes himſelf to a Regular in the Form enjoined by the Decretal Dudum, is obliged to confeſs anew the ſame Sins to his Pariſh-Prieſt; 2dly, That the Propoſitions of John Poilly, which were condemn'd by John XXII. are defenſible and true, and that the Conſtitution of this Pope is null, becauſe he was a Heretick; 3dly, That neither God nor the Pope can diſpenſe with the Obligation of confeſſing to a Pariſh-Prieſt as long as the Canon Omnis utriuſq; ſexus does continue in force; 4thly, That the Confeſſion which is made to Regulars being doubtful, and that which is made to a Pariſh-Prieſt being certainly good, we muſt hold to that which is certain, and leave what is uncertain; 5thly, That altho' the Regulars being approved, have the power to abſolve and take Confeſſions; yet the people have not power to confeſs themſelves to them without the leave of the Pariſh-Prieſt; 6thly, That the Regulars who deſire the privileges of hearing Confeſſions, are in mortal Sin and excommunicate, as well as thoſe who confirm or grant them; 7thly, That the Pariſh-Prieſt has more Right than the Pope to diſpenſe with the Canon Omnis utriuſq; ſexus. Alexander V. condemn'd all theſe Propoſitions, and thunder'd out an Excommunication againſt thoſe who maintain'd them. This Bull being brought to Paris, made a great Noiſe there in the Univerſity. Gerſon was intruſted to make a Sermon upon this Subject, wherein after he had obſerv'd that the Writing in form of a Bull might be the Cauſe of Diſorder, and be prejudicial to the Hierarchical Order; That this had been obtain'd by ſurprize, thro' the Importunity of Regulars Mendicants, and before the Pope had examined the Matter; That he was perſwaded, that whenever the Pope was better informed he would revoke it; That the Univerſity thought it intolerable until it was examin'd; That his Deſign was not to ſhew all the Evil which it contain'd, but he might ſay in general, That it would be the Cauſe of much trouble to the whole Hierarchical Order of Superior Prelats, and the inferior who are Pariſh-Prieſts; That he would content himſelf with reading an Act drawn up by the Pariſh-Prieſts, which he would explain, to prevent the evil Conſequences that might enſue. After this, he lays down the following Maxims; That Pariſh-Prieſts are Paſtors of the Hierarchy; That a Pope ought not to ſend Mendicants but where they are wanted, and with the Conſent of the Pariſh-Prieſts; That there may be ſome Occaſions wherein a Penitent ſhall be obliged to confeſs to his Pariſh-Prieſt the Sins which he had already confeſſed to a Regular; That the Privileges of Mendicants ought to have certain Bounds. The Bull of Alexander V. was confirm'd by Eugenius IV. and afterwards by Nicholas V. whoſe Bull alarm'd, as we have ſeen the Univerſity of Paris againſt the Mendicants. Calliſtus III. had a mind at firſt to maintain this Matter in its higheſt Rigour, and granted a Bull upon this occaſion; but perceiving that he could not compaſs his end, he was forc'd to moderate the Matter by his Bull, dated Auguſt the 20th, in 1456. in which he kept a kind of Medium, by blaming both one and t'other ſide; for after he had by it confirm'd the Decretals of Boniface VIII. Clement V. and John XXII. he ſaid, That upon the Complaints of the Biſhops and Pariſh-Prieſts, that came to him from all parts againſt the Regulars, who were accuſed of diſobeying theſe Decretals, upon pretence of Privileges and Favours which they have ſince obtain'd; and upon the Information he had receiv'd, That Biſhops, Pariſh-Prieſts, and other Prieſts do alſo moleſt the Regulars, being perſwaded that theſe Regulars ſeduc'd their Pariſhioners from their Pariſhes, by telling them, That they may freely come to their Houſe on Feſtival Days to hear Divine Service; That they are the proper Prieſts and Rectors to whom they ought to make Eaſter-Confeſſion; That the Pariſh-Prieſts maintain alſo, That Confeſſions made to Regulars ought to be reiterated; That theſe Diſputes being the Cauſe of Scandal, Hatred, Diviſions and Scruples, he ordains both one and the other to put an end to theſe Conteſts, and each to continue within the ſame Bounds which of Right belonged to 'em, without attempting to invade the Right of others, or to enlarge their own Pretenſions. For which end he renewed the Clementine Dudum, revok'd the Enlargements which might be made of it, and all ſuch Privileges which may have been granted beyond what is contained in that Bull, which he declares null; and condemns the Propoſitions which were advanc'd, as well by the Regulars to ſeduce the Pariſhioners from their Pariſh, as by the Seculars againſt the Privileges granted to the Mendicants by this Decretal. Sixtus IV. without any regard to this Revocation of Calliſtus, reviv'd in 1473. the Bulls of Alexander V. and Eugenius IV. and gave the ſame Power which the Mendicants had of adminiſtring the Sacraments of the Euchariſt, and Extream Unction, to thoſe whom the Curates refuſed without a lawful Cauſe. But he was afterwards forc'd to explain himſelf upon Occaſion of the Differences which aroſe in Germany, between the Mendicants and the Pariſh-Prieſts; and declared by his Bull, dated June the 17th, in 1478. 1ſt, That the Orders of Mendicants were very advantageous to the Church; 2d, That the Friars Mendicants ought not to preach, That the Pariſhioners were not obliged to hear Maſs in their Pariſhes on Feſtivals and Sundays; 3dly, That neither the Regulars nor the Mendicants ought to ſolicit the Laity to chuſe their place of Burial among them, becauſe in this they ought to be left to their Liberty; 4thly, That the Mendicants ought no more to preach, That Pariſhioners are not obliged to confeſs themſelves at leaſt at Eaſter to their Pariſh-Prieſts, becauſe the Pariſhioners are bound of Right to confeſs themſelves at Eaſter to their proper Prieſts; That in the mean while, the Friars Mendicants are not excluded by this from hearing Confeſſions, and impoſing Penances according to common Right, and the Privileges which were granted them; 5thly, That the Uſage ſhall be obſerved as to the Hours of Divine Service, That the Regulars ſhall not ſeduce the Pariſhioners from their Pariſhes; and that the Pariſh-Prieſts ſhall not hurt the Mendicants, that ſo there may appear to be a perfect Union and Charity between them. This Deciſion of Sixtus did wholly remove the Difficulty about the Eaſter-Confeſſion, and plainly decided the Queſtion in favour of the Pariſh-Prieſts.

The Inſtitutions of new religious Orders.

The new Religious Societies inſtituted in this Century, are the Society of Canons Regulars of St. Saviour, founded near Siena, by Stephen a Regular Auguſtin, who had leave of the Pope to change the Habit, and was approved by Gregory XII. in 1408. to which the Church of St. Mary of Eſcoupetto of Florence, was united; from whence the Monaſtery was called Scopetto, and the Canons Scopettines; the Order of Mount Olivet, which was a Reformation of the Hieronymites, who followed the Rule attributed to St. Jerom, which was compiled by Loup, a Brother to St. Vincent Ferrier, and approv'd by the Popes Gregory XII. and Martin V. the Society ciety of Canons Regulars of George of Alga, founded in 1407. by Lawrence Justinian, the Patriarch of Venice: The Congregation of St. Justina of Padua, which was a Reformation of the Benedictine Order in Italy, made by Lewis Barbe a Venetian, Canon of the Congregation of St. George of Alga, in 1409. which was approv'd by Eugenius IV. and John XXIII. and honoured with many Privileges by the Popes: The Congregation of Bursfeld, which is a Reformation of the Benedictines in Germany, that was begun by John Rhodes, who passed from the Order of Carthusians to that of St. Benedict, and was made Abbot of the Abbey of St. Matthias near Treves, and finished by John Abbot of Bursfeld, who united many Monasteries into one Congregation: The Order of Minims, whose Author was St. Francis of Paule, who built about the Year 1467. a little Monastery of Regulars near that City, under a Rule which was approved by Sixtus IV. Alexander VI. and Julius II. At first they bore the Name of the Hermits of St. Francis, and afterwards that of the Minims, because they called themselves in Humility, Minimi fratres Eremitæ: The Order of the Nuns of the Blessed Virgin Mary, which was instituted at Toledo by Beatrix at Sylva, a Portuguese Woman, and approved in 1489. by Innocent VIII. upon the Prayer of Isabella Queen of Spain. While Beatrix liv'd they followed the Rule of the Cistertians; after her Death they assum'd that of St. Claire in 1494. The Institution of new religious Orders.

The Military Orders founded in this Century, are that of the Annunciade, instituted by Amideus V. Count of Savoy, in 1420. That of St. Maurice instituted by Amideus VII. who was afterwards chosen Pope; That of the Golden Fleece instituted in 1431. by Philip the Good Duke of Burgundy; That of the Knights of Luna, by Renatus Duke of Anjou, King of Sicily in 1464. That of the Knights of St. George, by Frederick III. Emperor; That of St. Michael, by King Louis XI. in 1469. That of St. Stephen, by Cosmus of Medicis, which was approv'd in 1561. by Pius IV. and some others that are less famous. The Military Orders.

Author of the Book,

CONCERNING THE

Imitation of JESUS CHRIST.

Wherein the Conteſts that have ariſen upon this Subject are Related, and the Reaſons which have been alledg'd in favour of thoſe to whom it is Attributed; the Manuſcripts, the Editions and Teſtimonies which are made uſe of to maintain the Right of each Pretender, are Examin'd; and upon the whole, an Equitable and Impartial Judgment is given.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

THERE never was a Book in the World, whoſe Author was Conteſted with more heat, and about which more Pieces have been Written, than about the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt. This Queſtion which appears not to be of any great Conſequence, nor to be worthy of the pains of Learned Men, is now become Famous, by the contrary Pretenſions of two great Religious Societies about it; by the different Judgments which Learned Men have given of it; by the Curious Enquiries which have been made on both ſides; by the great number of Reaſons and Authorities which have been alledg'd; by the Learning and Eloquence of the Contenders, and by the noiſe it has made in the World. All theſe Reaſons have oblig'd us to ſearch this Matter to the bottom in this Diſſertation, wherein we have Collected together all that has been done or written upon this Subject in near Forty different Books, from the beginning of our Age.

SECT.

SECTION I.

A Hiſtory of the Conteſt about the Author of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, from the beginning of our Age, until this preſent time.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

THE Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, after it had often appear'd under the Name of St. Bernard, was printed many times under the Name of Gerſon, and of Thomas a Kempis; but ſince the Edition of Badius, in 1520. it was more commonly publiſh'd under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, and he paſs'd for the Author of it, without much conteſt, until the beginning of this Century, that ſome maintain'd it could not be his. This Doubt was firſt ſtarted in Spain, which was grounded upon this, That the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt was Cited in the Conferences attributed to St. Bonaventure, who died before the Birth of Thomas a Kempis. Don Pedro Mauriquez was the firſt that maintain'd this Opinion in Writing, in a Spaniſh Book Entituled, Apparejos para adminiſtrar el Sacramento de la Penitentia, printed at Milan, in 1604. Some Spaniards having ſpread this Opinion in Italy, Father Roſſignol a Jeſuit confirm'd it by the Authority of a Manuſcript of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, which he found in the Houſe of the Jeſuites of Arona, which was formerly an Abby of the Order of St. Benedict, in which it is attributed in four places to John Gerſen, or Geſen, or Geſſen, an Abbot. He believ'd that this Manuſcript belong'd to the Ancient Library of the Benedictines of Arona, and communicated this Diſcovery to Poſſevin, and Bellarmin, who thought this Opinion probable. On the contrary, Roſweidus a Flemiſh Jeſuit wrote a Letter in 1615. wherein he maintains that Thomas a Kempis is the true Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, and denies that the Conferences attributed to St. Bonaventure were truly his. On the other ſide, Conſtantin Cajetan of Syracuſe, Abbot of the Monaſtery of St. Barontus, of the Order of St. Benedict, of the Congregation of Mount Caſſin, a Man very Zealous for the Intereſt of his own Order, having the Manuſcript of Arona Communicated to him by the Jeſuit Nigroni, caus'd the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt to be printed at Rome, in 1616. under the Name of John Geſſen, Abbot of the Order of St. Benedict, together with a Diſſertation, wherein he maintains, that the Conferences are Bonaventure's, and that the Manuſcript of Arona is a deciſive Piece, to ſhew that the Book of the Imitation is an Abbot's of his Order. Roſweidus wrote immediately a Book againſt Cajetan, which he Entitles, VINDICIÆ KEMPENSES, The Defence of Kempis; wherein he anſwers his Reaſons, and maintains that the Name of Gerſen was put for that of Gerſon, in the Manuſcript of Arona, which did not at all belong to the Ancient Library of the Benedictines of Arona, as the Abbot Cajetan ſuppos'd, but was brought from Genua to Arona, in 1599. by Father Maiole a Jeſuit, who found it in his Father's Houſe. This Anſwer of Roſweidus came forth in 1617. and made Bellarmin change his Opinion, becauſe he thought that Roſweidus had ſufficiently anſwer'd the Objections of the Abbot Cajetan. This latter ſtay'd not long before he made a Reply, but quickly put forth an Apology for his Opinion, which was printed at Paris in 1618. And that his Opinion might ſpread thro' the World, he ask'd leave of the Congregation de Propaganda Fide, to print the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt in Greek, under the Name of the Abbot Geſſen.

The Canons Regulars being alarm'd at this Deſign, preſented a Petition to this Congregation to hinder it, and deſir'd to prohibit the printing of this Book under any other Name than that of Thomas a Kempis. This way of Proceeding did not take effect, and the Conteſt was huſh'd up till the year 1626. in which Roſweide reviv'd it, by Publiſhing a fair Edition of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, in which he inſerted a Diſſertation about the Author of this Book, which he Entituled, Plain Teſtimonies to prove that Thomas a Kempis is the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt. Bollandus Reprinted it after the death of Roſweidus, in 1630. and 1634. Francis Walgrave an Engliſh Benedictin oppos'd to this Edition of Roſweidus, a new Edition of the Book of Imitation, under the Name of John Gerſen, whom he Entitles Abbot of Verceil, printed at Paris by Sebaſtian Hure, in 1638. with Apologetical Notes about the Title and the Text of this Book, wherein he produces 4 Manuſcripts out of Italy, to prove that this Book was Gerſen's, that of Arona, that of the Monaſtery of Padolirona, where the Name of Gerſon is found in two places; that of the Cardinal of Biſcia, wherein the Author of the Imitation is call'd John de Canabaco, and an Edition of the Imitation at Venice, in 1501. under the Name of Gerſon; at the end of which, there was written in an ancient Character, This Book was not Compil'd by John Gerſon, but by John ..... Abbot of Verceil, whoſe Manuſcript is to this day in this Abbey. From this Remark Walgrave Conjectures that Gerſen was Abbot of St. Stephen of Verceil, and there are 4 Manuſcripts, which Cajetan calls the Chariot of Gold, upon which John Gerſen is Carried in Triumph. Father Fronto a Canon Regular of St. Genvieve of Paris, wrote an Anſwer two years after to this Piece of Walgrave's, Entituled, Thomas a Kempis Vindicated by one of the Canons Regulars of the Congregation of France. It was printed by Cramoiſy, in 1641.

At

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

At the ſame time Cardinal Richlieu having given Orders to print at the Louvre the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; Father Gregory Tariſſus, Superior of the Benedictines of the Congregation of St. Maur, deſir'd of this Cardinal, that this Impreſſion ſhould be publiſh'd under the Name of John Gerſen, a Regular of the Order of St. Benedict, whom he affirm'd to be the true Author of this Book, upon the Authority of four Ancient Manuſcripts which were at Rome. Cardinal Richlieu anſwer'd Father Tariſſus, that he would write to Rome to have a Certificate from ſome Perſon worthy of Credit, that theſe Manuſcripts were agreeable to what he had ſaid, and gave order to Mr. Deſnoyer to ſearch what Light he could find upon this Subject. And it was Reſolv'd that this Queſtion ſhould be Examin'd by the Meſſieurs, Du Val, Hallier, and St. Beuve, Doctors, and by the Fathers Petavius, and Sirmondus, Jeſuits, who might call in to their aſſiſtance the Priors of St. German de Prez, of St. Genevieve, and St. Victor. Father Tariſſus having written to Rome, the R. R. F. F. Dom. Placidus le Simon, Proctor General of the Benedictines, of the Congregation of St. Maur, in the Court of Rome, and Dom John M. Proctor-General of the Engliſh Benedictines, came on the 30th of January, in 1641. to Cardinal Bagni, who had been Nuncio in France, and pray'd him to look upon the four Manuſcripts which they preſented him, that he might aſſure Cardinal Richlieu they did really bear the Name of John Gerſon. Cardinal Bagni anſwer'd them, that to make an Authentical Inſtrument, it would be convenient to appoint two Perſons expert in theſe Matters, to examine theſe Manuſcripts, and make a Report of them, in the preſence of himſelf, and a Notary. They agreed upon the Sieur Gabriel Naudæus Secretary to this Cardinal (in whoſe hands they left the Manuſcripts) and the Sieur Fioravente Martinel, one of the Under-keepers and Writers of the Vatican Library. The Sieur Naudæus having Examin'd theſe Manuſcripts by himſelf, found in that which belong'd to the Cardinal of Biſcia, and which was then Allatius's, the Name of Canabaco at the top, tho' this might be written by the ſame hand, and by the ſame Writer. He found alſo in this Manuſcript a Bull of the Apoſtolical Legate in Germany, which was dated in 1448. which ſhew'd that this Manuſcript was later than that year, whereof he judg'd the Writing to be at the end of the Fifteenth Century, or the beginning of the Sixteenth. As to the Second Manuſcript, which was that of Padolirona, he found that theſe words had been written ſome time after the reſt, Incipit Liber Johannis Gerſon Primus, which were of a Vermilion more bright and freſh than the reſt of the Title; and that at the end of the ſame Manuſcript Gerſon was chang'd into Gerſen. As to the Third, which was that of the Abbey of Cave, as it was without the Name of the Author, and had only the Figure of a Benedictine upon the firſt Letter, from which they would draw ſome Inference; he Remarks that nothing can be concluded from this Repreſentation, and that there is no manner of proof that this is the Figure of the Author of this Book. The Fourth was not a Manuſcript, but was printed at Venice under the Name of John Gerſon, and at the bottom of the Page it was obſerv'd, that this Work was not Gerſon's, but Gerſen's, the Abbot of Verceil. He meddles not at all with the time of writing this Note, which he judg'd a very late Forgery, and to be put in the room of another which had been carefully eraz'd; that the traces of ſome whole words were ſtill to be ſeen, and even the Letters of Thomas which had been eraz'd. Monſieur Naudæus having made theſe Remarks, Communicated them to Cardinal Bagni, and to Sieur Fioravente, who was of the ſame Opinion. The Fathers Dom Placidus, and Dom John coming afterwards with their Notary, the thing was Examin'd in their preſence, and even the traces of three Letters were pick'd out in the Ancient Title of the firſt Manuſcript, which did not at all correſpond to the new Letters. They did not find that this Report would be to their advantage, and therefore they never order'd an Inſtrument of it to be drawn up before a Notary. But Meſſieur Naudæus drew up one by his own Authority, which he cauſed to be atteſted by Vincent Galeotte, Auditor to Cardinal Bagni, and ſent it the ſame year to the Meſſieurs Du Puy.

In France Father Sirmondus having met with a Manuſcript of the Imitation in the Library of the College of Jeſuits which was Anonymous, but ſuch as he judg'd to be more ancient than Thomas a Kempis, founded upon this his Opinion, that Thomas was not the Author of it. On the contrary, Father Petavius conſidering the agreement of the ſtile of this Book, with that of the other Books which were unconteſtably own'd to be Thomas a Kempis's, made no ſcruple to affirm that it was his, being otherwiſe perſwaded that Roſweidus had anſwered all the Difficulties of the Abbot Cajetan. Monſieur de St. Beauve declar'd, That it was more probable, that this Book was Gerſon's, the Chancellour of the Univerſity of Paris, than Gerſen's or Thomas a Kempis's. The Opinion of the other two Doctors is not known. The Reſult of this whole Enquiry was, That the Book of the Imitation was printed at the Louvre, without the Name of the Author. Notwithſtanding the Remarks made by Monſieur Naudæus, the Abbot Cajetan would ſtill maintain his own Opinion, and alledg'd the ſame Manuſcripts atteſted by the bare Inſtrument of a Notary, and the ſame Reaſons which he had formerly made uſe of in an Apology which he publiſh'd at Rome, in 1644. for John Gerſen, together with a new Edition of the Imitation under his Name.

The Book of Walgrave, and the Apology of Cajetan, were refuted by a Flemiſh Canon-Regular, and by Simon Werlin, Rector of Dieſſen, who wrote in 1641. a Treatiſe againſt Walgrave, and a ſecond in 1647. againſt Cajetan: This ſecond was not printed till the Year 1649. after the Death of the Author, with this Title, Vindiciæ Vindiciarum Kempenſium.

In

In the same Year Father Fronto, a Canon-Regular of St. Genevieve, reprinted the Dissertation which had appear'd in 1641. wherein he inserted the Relation of Mr. Naudæus, about the Manuscripts of Rome. His Work is divided into three Parts. In the 1st he intends to prove, That the Imitation is not Gersen's, nor a Benedictin Abbot's; In the 2d, That it is not Gerson's; And in the last, That it is Thomas a Kempis's: And at the same time, he printed the Book in a large Character under the Name of Thomas a Kempis. A Dissertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ.

This Book of Father Fronto was, as it were, a new Signal which renew'd the War between the two Parties, whereof one was for Gersen, and the other for Thomas a Kempis: For immediately Father Robert Quatremaires, of the Congregation of St. Maur, being a Man of Wit and Learning, but hot and eager, made an Answer to the Book of Father Fronto, by Word of Mouth, wherein he accus'd Mr. Naudæus of Unfaithfulness in the Examination of the Manuscripts, and in the Relation he had made of them; he suspected him of having falsified the Manuscripts in Question, while he had them in his hands, and of having given this Testimonial, for the Reward of a simple Priory which he had in their Order, altho' it was not given him till four Years after he had sent this Relation to the Messieur Du Puy.

Some time after, Father Francis Walgrave wrote another Answer, wherein he treats the Sieur Naudæus no better. Both the one and the other publish'd a Tract of the deceased Monsieur Launoy, Doctor in Divinity, of the Faculty of Paris, which was much more wise and moderate; wherein he gives his Judgment about the Author of the Books of Imitation, in favour of Gersen, and against Thomas a Kempis.

The Sieur Naudæus seeing himself attack'd, and accus'd of Forgery and Falsification, did not only make use of the ordinary Defence to Men of Learning, which is, to justify himself by publick Writings, that discover the Innocence of the accus'd; but he had recourse also to the Magistrates to demand Satisfaction, for the Reproach that had been thrown upon him, and presented his Libel to the Court of Justice at Paris, praying, That the Copies of the Books of Quatremaires and Walgrave, might be seiz'd and suppress'd. But the Benedictins remov'd the Cause to the Court of Requests at the Palace, wherein the Sieur Naudæus offer'd to justify the Truth of his Relation, by exhibiting the Manuscripts. All the Difficulty was how to fetch them from Rome. He was Master of the Manuscript of Allatius, the Inspection of which plainly shew'd, That the Word Canabaco was interlin'd, and added some time after the other Words, tho' it was of the same Writing and the same Vermilion. As to the other three Manuscripts, he could not fetch them, whatever Diligence and Importunity he us'd with the Benedictines of Rome to produce them: He offer'd even in the Court of Justice to consign a Sum of 3000 Livres, to be distributed for the Benefit of the Hotel Dieu, or employ'd to make a Silver Lamp, which should be plac'd before the Grand Altar of the Church of St. Germain de Prez, provided the Benedictines would send the three Manuscripts in Question within six Weeks, and that these Manuscripts should not be judg'd to agree with what he had said in his Relation. This Process lasted some time; the Canons-Regulars of St. Genevieve interpos'd in the Cause, and desir'd that the Book of the Imitation might be prohibited to be printed under any other Name but that of Thomas a Kempis. At last, after the Cause had been pleaded by all Parties, it was ordain'd Feb. the 12th, 1652. That all reproachful Words which had been us'd by any Party should be suppress'd; That nevertheless Justice should be done upon the Copies of Walgrave's Book which had been seiz'd; That all Persons should be forbidden to print the Book of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, under the Name of John Gersen, the Abbot of Verceil, and a Permission should be granted to print it under the Name of Thomas a Kempis. The Benedictines appeal'd from this Sentence of the Court of Requests at the Palace to the Grand Court, but this Appeal was not prosecuted.

While this Cause was depending before the Magistrates, the Writers continued still to publish their Books. Father Fronto answer'd the Book of Walgrave, and that of Mr. Launoy. The Sieur Naudæus wrote many Pieces about it in French and Latin, in an elegant Style, but brisk and passionate, and cruelly outrag'd the poor Abbot Cajetan in his Piece, Entituled, Causæ Kempensis Correctio. He attack'd also very rudely Mr. Launoy in another Piece, Entituled, Velitatio Kempensis. An English Priest, Confessor to the English Benedictines at Paris, call'd Thomas Carr, who had formerly written in English about this Controversy, wrote a Book more moderate than those of Mr. Naudæus, to defend the Cause of Thomas a Kempis, which he Entituled, Thomas a Kempis a seipso restitutus. The chief thing which he did in this Book, was to compare the Terms, Phrases, Sentences and Doctrin of the Book of the Imitation, with the other Books of Thomas a Kempis, and thereby to prove, that there is a perfect Agreement between them; yet to this, he added some ancient Editions and ancient Testimonies. Tho' it is not the most elegant, yet it is the most solid Piece that hitherto had been written in Defence of Thomas a Kempis. Father Fronto produc'd two new Arguments, one taken from the Agreement of the Imitation, with the Books of the Canons-Regular of that time; and the other taken from the Name of Devout, which the Canons-Regular assum'd, and is sometimes us'd in the Book of the Imitation of Jesus Christ. Mr. Launoy did not keep silence, but wrote a Reply to the Answer of Father Fronto. About the same time Father Vanquaille wrote also a Confutation of what Mr. de Marillac had said in his Preface to the Translation of the Imitation, in favour of John Gersen.

But the Canons-Regular had no sooner gain'd their Cause, as to what concern'd the printing of the Imitation, under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, but they presently cry'd out Victoria, and printed a Latin Book, Entituled, The Triumph of Thomas a Kempis over his Adversaries, which

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

A Diſſertation was written by Father Deſnos, and a Treatiſe in French, Entituled, The Conteſt about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt fully clear'd, by comparing together all the Proofs offer'd by the Benedictines and Canons-Regular, together with the Proofs juſtifying the Claim of Thomas a Kempis. This Book had not the Name of the Author; but 'tis well enough known, That it was written by Father Boiſſy, a Canon-Regular of St. Genevieve. It is divided into three Parts: The firſt contains the Proof of the Claim of Thomas a Kempis; the ſecond, The Anſwer to the Reaſons which are made uſe of to oppoſe it; and the Third, The Claim of Gerſen produc'd and rejected: At the end there are added ſome Pieces juſtifying the Claim of Thomas a Kempis. This Book repeats every thing in the beſt Order, which had been ſaid hitherto, to prove that the Book of the Imitation was Thomas a Kempis's. This Book met with no Reply from the Benedictines; but Mr. Launoy made ſome Notes to it, as to what concern'd himſelf, in a French Diſſertation, dedicated to Mr. de Montmor.

The Controverſy was for ſome time huſh'd up, till the Benedictines gathered from all parts, ſuch Manuſcripts as might give new Strength to their Pretenſions. They fetch'd out of Italy the Manuſcripts of Padolirona, of Allatius and Cave, which Mr. Naudæus had accus'd of Forgery, and many others out of Flanders and Germany; and being thus arm'd, they preſented them in 1671. to Mr. de Lamoignon, firſt Preſident, at a Conference where the F. F. Lalemant and du Moulinet oppos'd them, and maintain'd that theſe Manuſcripts were unſerviceable to their Cauſe. Some time after, they addreſs'd themſelves to Francis Harlay, Archbiſhop of Paris, and pray'd him that theſe Manuſcripts might be examined in his Preſence by Learned Men; to which this Prelat conſented. Whereupon they brought into his Palace, on the 14th of Auguſt, 1671. twelve Manuſcripts and ſome ancient Editions, under the Name of Gerſen. Mr. Faure, Doctor in Divinity, of the Faculty of Paris, Father le Cointe, of the Congregation of the Oratory, Mr. Vion of Herouval, Mr. Valeſius, Mr. Baluzius, and Mr. Cotelier, were there preſent: They examin'd theſe Titles in the Preſence of the Archbiſhop, made their Report; of which they drew up a Proceſs in writing, and among other things, judg'd the Writing of the Manuſcript of Padolirona to be unchang'd, which the Sieur Naudæus had judg'd to be corrupted. Upon this Report, the Benedictines reprinted in 1674. cum Privilegio, the Books of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, by Billain, in a fair Character, under the Name of John Gerſen, Abbot of St. Stephen of Verceil, of the Order of St. Benedict, together with the Inſtrument which we juſt now mention'd; and a Diſſertation which they printed alſo apart, written by Father Delfau, which produces all the Reaſons which can be alledg'd, to maintain the Opinion of thoſe who believ'd, That John Gerſen was the Author of this Treatiſe.

Some time after, the Benedictines of the Abbey of St. Germain de Prez, receiv'd alſo another Manuſcript from Mr. Sluſe, which had at the end the Name of John Gerſen, which was examin'd, judg'd unalter'd, and 200 Years old, by the Meſſieurs Du Cange, Herouval, Baluzius, Valeſius, Launoy, Cotelier, and by Father Cointe, according to the Act which they publiſh'd, bearing Date Auguſt 23d, 1674.

The Canons-Regular put forth in 1677. an Anſwer to the Diſſertation of Father Delfau, under the Name of Vindiciæ Kempenſes, written by Father Teſtellette, a Canon-Regular; which was quickly confuted by ſome Obſervations.

At laſt the Canons-Regular, that they might oppoſe an Authentick Inſtrument to that of the Benedictines, made a Collection alſo of the Manuſcripts and Titles upon which they grounded their Opinion; and having examin'd them in Order, in the Preſence of the Archbiſhop of Paris, by the Meſſieurs Faure, Baluzius, Vion of Herouval, du Cange, and by the F. F. Gardiner and Hardouin, Jeſuites; F. Du Bois, of the Oratory, and F. Alexander, a Jacobin, a Proceſs in writing was drawn up of this Matter, March 4th, 1681.

At laſt F. Dom John Mabillon, and F. Dom Michael, having brought with them at their Return from their Journey into Italy, the Famous Manuſcript of Arona, together with a Manuſcript of the Monaſtery of Bobio, and another of the Church of St. John of Parma, wherein the Name of John Gerſen was found, aſſembled on the 28th of July, 1687. the Meſſieurs Faure, Du Cange, D' Herouval, and many other able Men, well vers'd in theſe Matters, who did me the Honour to receive me into their Number; who having examin'd theſe three Manuſcripts, judg'd, That the Name of Gerſen was written in them by the firſt Hand; That the Writing of the firſt Manuſcript did not appear leſs ancient than 300 Years; Non videtur inferior trecentis annis; That the ſecond was of the ſame Antiquity, and that the third contain'd (before the Book of Imitation) the Rule of St. Benedict, which had been fully written and finiſh'd, according to the Date which is at the end, Auguſt the 8th, in the Year 1466.

Thus you ſee what is the State of the Controverſy, which remains undecided to this Day, altho' the Proceſs was wholly drawn up, and the Cauſe ripe for a Sentence, from the Books and Reaſons which have been produc'd and alledg'd on both ſides; and were at firſt examin'd, own'd, and verified by Perſons of Probity and Ability, as all muſt acknowledge. Let us now therefore make an Extract out of the Writings, and Exhibits of the Parties, and let us then ſee if there be any way left to give a Deciſion, and in whoſe Favour, Juſtice and Truth require it ſhould be given.

SECTION II.

The Authors to whom the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt has been aſcrib'd. Proofs that it is by no means St. Bernard's.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

THERE are but four Authors who can have any Pretenſion to the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; St. Bernard, John Gerſon, the Chancellour of the Univerſity of Paris Thomas a Kempis, and John Geſſen or Gerſen, an Abbot: For I will not mention Ludolphus the Saxon, to whom it has been aſcrib'd in a Manuſcript, and under whoſe Name an ancient Tranſlation of it has been printed, becauſe he has ſo ſlender a Claim, that he cannot with any Congruity, be join'd with the reſt in their Pretenſions.

St. Bernard ſeems to have been the firſt who was in Poſſeſſion of it, at leaſt it was under his Name, that the firſt Edition appear'd, that we now have of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, which was printed in 1485. at Breſcia, and taken without doubt, from a Manuſcript more ancient, which went under his Name, Incipit Opus D. Bernardi ſaluberrimum de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium Vanitatum Mundi, quod Joanni Gerſoni Cancellario attribuitur. It was alſo under his Name, that the firſt Verſion of the Imitation was made: For in the Inventory of the Books of John Count of Angouleſme and Perigueux, which was made in 1467. and is in the Court of Exchequer, we find it under this Title, The Inventory of the Books which are found in the Cloſet of the deceas'd Monſeigneur, on the 1ſt Day of January, in 1467. For towards the end we meet with it in theſe Words, The Imitation of St. Bernard, with many Prayers and Devotions, in common Letter and Paper, which are very much periſhed. Obſerve theſe laſt Words, which ſhew that this Manuſcript was then very old in 1467. and conſequently, That this Verſion had been made a long while before, from a Manuſcript which went under the Name of St. Bernard. Wherefore in the firſt French Edition of the Imitation at Paris, by Lambert, in 1493. 'tis obſerv'd, That till that time this Book had been aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, or Gerſon: Here begins the moſt wholſom Book, Entitled, De Imitatione Chriſti, which has hitherto by every one been aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, or Mr. John Gerſon: And in another Edition at Paris, by Lenoix, about the Year 1500. we have this Title, The Book of the Imitation of our Lord, aſcribed to St. Bernard, or John Gerſon, tranſlated out of Latin into French: Laſtly, There are ſtill ſome Manuſcripts, in which it is aſcribed to St. Bernard; among the reſt, there is one in the Library of St. Genevieve, M. Numb. 413.

In the mean time it is impoſſible to maintain, That it is St. Bernard's, and the Book it ſelf affords a demonſtrative Proof, that it is not; for St. Francis is quoted in it, in the 50th Chapter of the third Book. A Man is only of ſo much worth, as he is in your Eyes, Lord, and nothing more; ſays the humble St. Francis. Now St. Bernard died in 1153, and St. Francis was not born till 1226. Beſides, the Style of the Book of the Imitation is much more plain, and the Diſcourſe more unpoliſh'd than that of St. Bernard's: We muſt therefore ſay, That it was by the Fault of Tranſcribers or Printers, that this Work has been aſcrib'd to him; for they finding it without the Author's Name, join'd to ſome Work of St. Bernard's, as it is ſtill to be found in ſome Manuſcripts, thought that it muſt certainly be the ſame Author's, and ſo boldly put his Name to it. This plainly ſhews, that we muſt not always truſt to the Inſcriptions of Manuſcripts, and the moſt ancient Editions. This is all that concerns St. Bernard. If the three others had no more Claim than he, or the Reaſons were no leſs convincing for taking it away from them, this Enquiry would quickly come to an end. But the Caſe is not the ſame; for they produce many more Proofs and Teſtimonies, and there can be no Reaſon, without ſome Reply to them, either to eſtabliſh or deſtroy their Claim. And this is what we intend to do in the following Paragraphs, wherein we ſhall firſt examine the Manuſcripts which each produces for himſelf. 2dly, The ancient Editions which they produce, that are almoſt equivalent to the Manuſcripts, becauſe Printing begun a little time after the Publication of this Work, and there are even Manuſcripts later than ſome Editions. 3dly, The Teſtimonies which they alledge. 4thly, The Reaſons they bring to eſtabliſh their Claims. 5thly, The Anſwer they give to the Proofs which are offer'd to deſtroy it.

SECTION III.

An Examination of the Manuſcripts of the Book of the Imitation, which go under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, a Canon-Regular of Zwoll.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

THE firſt of the contending Parties whom we will hear, is Thomas a Kempis, whoſe moſt probable Title is founded upon a Manuſcript of the Imitation, which is to be found in the Jeſuits Houſe at Antwerp, written with his own Hand in 1441. as theſe Words written at the end of the Manuſcript, give Reaſon to believe: Finitus & completus Anno Domini, 1441. per manus fratris Thomæ Kemp. in monte S. Agnetis prope Zwol, i. e. Being finiſh'd and compleated in the Year of our Lord, 1441. by the Hand of Friar Thomas a Kempis in the Mount of St. Agnes near Zwoll. This Manuſcript contains the four Books of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt under four different Titles: The 1ſt under this Title, Uſeful Advertiſements for a Spiritual Life; alias, Of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt. The 2d under this, Advices which carry a Man inward. The 4th, which is tranſpos'd and plac'd in the room of the 3d, under this Title, Of the Sacrament of the Altar. The 3d, which is plac'd laſt, under this Title, Of the Interiour Speech of Jeſus Chriſt. And beſides theſe four Books, there are ſome other Treatiſes of Thomas a Kempis, viz. A Treatiſe of the Diſcipline of thoſe who are in the Cloyſter; A Letter of a Devout Perſon to a Regular; A Recommendation of Humility, of the Mortified Life, the Peaceable Life of good Men; Of the Elevation of the Heart; A ſhort Advice about External Behaviour. Now all theſe Treatiſes are, without Diſpute, Thomas a Kempis's; from whence it is inferr'd, That the four firſt are alſo his, and ſo much the rather, becauſe if they had been another Author's, he would not have fail'd to have ſet down his Name. This Manuſcript is Authentick, for it is mark'd at the beginning, That it is at the Monaſtery of the Canons-Regular of Mount-ſaint Agnes, a Virgin and Martyr, near to Zwoll. And afterwards, we find written with a later Hand, That Friar John Latomus, a Regular of the Order of Regulars, in the Houſe near Herental, Miniſter-General of this Order, having viſited the Monaſtery of St. Agnes, near Zwoll, had remov'd the Ruins of this Monaſtery, leſt it ſhould entirely be loſt, and carried it to Antwerp, where he had left it in 1577. in the hands of his Ancient and Faithful Friend John Beller, who had given it in favour of his Children, to the F. F. of the Society of Jeſus, in 1590.

Thoſe who maintain, That Thomas a Kempis is not the Author of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; Anſwer, That this Manuſcript rather favours them than the contrary: 1ſt, Becauſe it proves only, that Thomas a Kempis is the Tranſcriber of the Books of Imitation, and not that he is the Author of them. This is all that is ſignified by what is ſet down at the end, and the ſame Obſervation is to be met with in a Volume of a Bible, written by Thomas a Kempis; Finiſhed and Compleated in 1439. on the Vigil of St. James, by the hands of Friar Thomas a Kempis, &c. which ſhows, That this is the common and ordinary Form which meer Tranſcribers us'd to make uſe of at that time. 2dly, That tho' this Manuſcript be written with the hand of Thomas a Kempis, yet it cannot be ſaid, That this is the Original of that Book, becauſe it is evident, and confeſſed by all the World, That there are Manuſcripts of the Book of Imitation, more ancient than this; among the reſt, a Manuſcript of the firſt Book, which ends thus, Here ends this Treatiſe written in the Council of Baſil, in 1437. and finiſh'd with the help of God, by me Gottingen: It cannot therefore be ſaid, That this is the Original of Thomas a Kempis's Compoſition; it can be no more than a Copy which he wrote out of his own Works. 3dly, There are ſome things in this Manuſcript which may make it doubtful, whether Thomas a Kempis be the Author of the Book; for if he were, 'tis reaſonable to believe, That he would not have plac'd the fourth Book in the room of the third; he would not have left in it ſo many Faults, ſuch as Omiſſions, particularly at B. 1. ch. 13. after this Verſe, Principiis obſta, ſero medicina paratur, this other Verſe neceſſary for compleating the Senſe, is omitted, Cum mala per longas invaluere Moras, and at B. 2. ch. 11. Raro invenitur tam ſpiritualis, the Word invenitur is forgotten; and groſs Faults, as at B. 1. ch. 12. Non bene nobis creditur, for de nobis; at B. 2. ch. 5. Debes habere for velles habere, B. 4. (which is the third Book in the printed Copies) ch. 36. ſuccumbi for ſuccumbere, ch. 55. ſtips for ſtipes or ſtirps; and Words repeated twice and eraz'd. If theſe things be true, ſay they, then thoſe who publiſh'd the Book of the Imitation under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, have not in every thing follow'd this Manuſcript as they ought to have done, if it were certain that this was the laſt Copy of the Author, which ought therefore to be moſt correct. 4thly, 'Tis pretended, That this is not a Proof that the Imitation is Thomas a Kempis's, becauſe it is joyn'd to the Works which are aſcrib'd to him, That there are very often found in one and the ſame Volume, the Works of different Authors; and perhaps there may be ſome cauſe to doubt, whether theſe other Works which are joyn'd to this, are all of them Thomas a Kempis's.

To the 1ſt Objection it is reply'd, That 'tis true, it cannot be inferr'd meerly from the Words that are at the end of this Manuſcript, That it is Thomas a Kempis's; nay 'tis confeſs'd, That in Humility he would not put his Name to this Work, That he lov'd rather to paſs for the Tranſcriber than the Author of it; but ſtill it is pretended, that this being join'd to the other Works which are unconteſtably his, in one and the ſame Manuſcript, all written out with his own hand, 'tis no ways probable that it ſhould be any other Author's; and ſo much the rather, becauſe Thomas a Kempis did not make any Diſtinction between them, and never obſerv'd that the Imitation was another Author's. As to the 2d, That 'tis not pretended, that this Manuſcript was the firſt Original of Thomas a Kempis, but that it was only a Copy written out in 1441. of a Work which he compos'd about the Year 1410. As to the 3d, 'Tis reply'd, That an Author who tranſcribes his own Work, may ſometimes commit Faults through Inadvertency; That the Tranſpoſal of the Book is not a Fault, ſince theſe Books never had any certain Order; That the Verſe Cum mala per longas, &c. is omitted not only in this Manuſcript, but in many others which go not under the Name of Kempis; and that Cajetan and Walgrave did think it needleſs, ſince they have not put it in their Editions. As to the laſt, 'Tis reply'd, That this Manuſcript being written from beginning to end, with the hand of Thomas a Kempis, it cannot be ſaid, that it was by chance he join'd theſe Works together, and that 'tis no wiſe probable, he ſhould write a Treatiſe which is none of his, with thoſe Treatiſes which are his, and never make any Diſtinction between them. A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

There is another Manuſcript alſo written with the hand of Thomas a Kempis, which has a Declaration written at the end of it, in 1586. by John Ulimmerius; Hic liber eſt ſcriptus manu & characteribus Reverendi & Religioſi Patris, P. Thomæ Kempis, Canonici Regularis, in Monte St. Agnetis, qui eſt Autor horum libellorum devotorum: Joannes Ulimmerius ſcripſit, 1586. This Manuſcript is in the Library of St. Martin of Louvain, it contains the Soliloquy of the Soul, the three firſt Books of Imitation, the Treatiſe of the Elevation of the Soul, a brief Advice for ſpiritual Exerciſe, the Treatiſe of the Sacrament (which is the fourth Book of Imitation) whereof there is nothing but the Preface: 'Tis partly written on Parchment, and partly on Paper. There are in it the ſame Omiſſions which are in the other, and the ſame Reflections may be made upon them; and ſo much the rather, becauſe it is not himſelf, but another who teſtifies, that it was written with the hand of Thomas a Kempis, and that he is the Author of it; and this he did in 1586. which is more than a Hundred Years after his Death; which renders his Teſtimony, both as to the Writing and Compoſure of Thomas a Kempis, of little Authority. Thoſe who have ſeen theſe two Manuſcripts, and might have compar'd them together, have never told us, whether the hands be like one another. Let us now proceed to the other Manuſcripts, which are not written out with the hand of Thomas a Kempis, but only go under his Name, which are produc'd by the F. F. of St. Genevieve.

The firſt is a Manuſcript of St. Martin of Louvain, which contains the little Garden of Roſes, and three Books of Imitation, viz. the 1ſt, the 4th, and the 3d, at the end whereof theſe Words are read; Expliciunt tractatus quatuor Fratris Thomæ Kempis devoti & interni, ſcripti, illuminati & ligati per manus fratris Symonis Jacobi, de Leydis, Profeſſi in Leyderdorp, pro tunc Socii Rectoris hujus Monaſterii ſancti monialium Antiquarum in Aemſtelredam Anno ſcilicet Domini 1482. in profeſſo Willibrord Epiſcopi, i. e. Here end the four Treatiſes of Friar Thomas a Kempis, a devout and inward Man, written, enlightned, and bound up by the hands of Friar Simon James, of Leyden, a Regular of Leyderdorp, at that time the Companion of the Rector of the Ancient Nuns of this Monaſtery of Amſterdam, in the Year of our Lord, 1482. on the Feſtival Day of St. Willibrord, Biſhop. Here is a Manuſcript of 1482. whoſe Tranſcriber does plainly aſcribe three Books of the Imitation to Thomas a Kempis.

The ſecond is a Manuſcript of the Houſe of St. Peter and St. Anthony, at Delhem, wherein there is found an Extract taken out of the Treatiſe of the Cloyſter of the Soul, by Hugo Foliot, written in 1475. and the Book of Imitation under this Title, A Treatiſe of the Contempt of the World; at the end whereof there is written with another hand: Explicit libellus de Contemptu Mundi, quem fecit frater Thomas Kempis, profeſſus in Monte Agnetis Ordinis Canonicorum Regularium, obiit ætatis ſuæ Anno 92, in Ordine devotus 65, requieſcat in perpetua pace de primis pro quo ſolvi debitum, Anno 1471. Coſmæ & Damiani quo Anno obiit, i. e. Here ends the Book of the Contempt of the World, which was made by Friar Thomas a Kempis a Regular of Mount-Saint-Agnes, of the Order of Canons Regulars, who died in the 92 Year of his Age, in the 65 after his Admiſſion into his Order, and in 1471. on the Day of St. Coſmas and St. Damian: Let him reſt in Eternal Peace. This Manuſcript does not contribute much to confirm the Claim of Thomas a Kempis, becauſe this Obſervation was not made with the hand of him who wrote the Manuſcript, who left the Treatiſe Anonymous.

The third is a Manuſcript of the Canons-Regular of the Holy Croſs of Ausburg, which contains four Books of the Imitation, at the end whereof are found theſe Words; Compilator hujus Opuſculi fuit quidam frater Thomas nomine de Conventu & Ordine Canonicorum Regularium Ordinis St. Auguſtin, Montis ſanctæ Agnetis Trajectenſis, i. e. The Compiler of this Treatiſe is Friar Thomas, of the Convent and Order of Canons-Regulars, of the Order of St. Auguſtin, of Mount-Saint-Agnes, of Utrecht. Bollandus and Heſerus have pretended, that this Manuſcript is of the Year 1440, but in that which was produc'd by the Canons-Regulars of St. Genevieve, there was no Date at all, and thoſe who are well vers'd in theſe Matters, could not pitch upon the time in which it might be written; and therefore we cannot tell, whether it be more ancient or later than that of 1441. beſides, That Thomas a Kempis is here deſcrib'd only as a Compiler.

The

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

The fourth is a Manuſcript in the Library of St. Martin at Louvain, which at the head of the firſt Book, has the Name of Thomas a Kempis, Liber primus fratris Thomæ a Kempis, Canonici Regularis de Imitatione Chriſti. This Manuſcript has its Date at the end, which is but in the Year 1524. Ultima Decembris finientis Anni 1524. in Feſto St. Sylveſtri Papæ & Confeſſoris.

They alledge alſo many other Manuſcripts which have been ſeen and quoted by thoſe who have written about theſe Matters, whoſe Teſtimonies they relate, as a Manuſcript of the Convent of the Carthuſians at Bruſſels, written in 1463. containing the four Books of Imitation without the Name of the Author indeed, but only under the Title of a Regular: Explicit devotus tractatus cujuſdam Regularis, de interna locutione Chriſti ad Animam fidelem, ſcriptus per manus Jacobi Baeuſt, Laici redditi. Finitus in Anno Jubilæo, 1473. die menſis Octobris, & pertinet ad Carthuſienſes Domus Sylvæ Sancti Martini prope Geraldi Montem. This Manuſcript is cited by Chifletius, in the 7th Chapter of his Apology, and he affirms that he had it in his hands. There is another Manuſcript at Utrecht cited by the ſame Author, upon the Credit of Lappius, who believ'd it to be of the 14th Century, in which the Name of Thomas a Regular is thrice repeated. There are two Manuſcripts in the Monaſtery of St. John Baptiſt, of Rebdorf, without Date, which according to the Certificate of Father Breidendonch, Subprior of this Monaſtery, and of a Notary, go under the Name of Thomas a Kempis; a Manuſcript in the Library of Affligheu, cited by Sanderus, upon the Teſtimonial of Father Cambiere, a Benedictine Regular of that Abbey, which goes under the Name of Thomas a Kempis; a Manuſcript in the Monaſtery of Canons-Regulars of Maſeyke, quoted by Roſweidus, which was written in 1477. by Cornelius Offermans, which goes under the Name of Thomas a Kempis; a Manuſcript in the Library of David Ehinger, of the City of Kirchen, in the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, quoted by Proſper Farandus, which contains three Books of the Imitation, with the Name of Thomas a Kempis; upon which it is obſerv'd, that this Book is of the Author's hand, who wrote it in 1425. But ſince there is now no ſuch Manuſcript, neither is it ſaid, with what hand this is obſerv'd, no great matter can be built upon it: A Manuſcript in the Library of Ausburg, atteſted by the Surrogat Biſhop of that City, without any Date, wherein the Imitation carries the Name of Thomas a Kempis; a Manuſcript in the Library of Ausburg, which contains four Books of the Imitation under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, as the Catalogue printed in 1633. gives ground to believe; and wherein there is no more but the laſt joyn'd to the other Treatiſes of Thomas a Canon-Regular of Mount-Saint-Agnes in a Volume, on the 1ſt Page whereof it is obſerv'd, That this Book was for the Uſe of Friar John Lefort, a Reader of Divinity, and that it was given in 1490. in the Octave of St. Martin, by John Carpenter, Provincial of the Order of the Carmelites.

To theſe particular Manuſcripts of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, which go under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, we may joyn the Ancient Collections of the Works of this Author, among which the Imitation is plac'd. The 1ſt is a Manuſcript in the Library of the Monaſtery of St. Barbe, of the Carthuſians of Collen, containing divers Treatiſes, the Titles whereof are at the Top, viz. The Mirrour of Henry of Heſſe, the Book of diſcerning Spirits by the ſame, and afterwards, Some Tracts of a Devout Regular (where ſome Perſon has added on the Margin, whoſe Name is Thomas Kempis, of a Convent near to Zwoll) Of the Sacrament of the Altar; Of the ſeven things which moſt pleaſed God in his Elect; The Breviloquium of Spiritual Exerciſes; A Treatiſe of ſome Vertues; The Soliloquy of the Soul by way of Dialogue; The little Book which is call'd, Qui ſequitur me. Towards the end of the Book, about the Sacrament of the Altar, 'tis obſerv'd, That this Treatiſe was written in 1447. on St. Simon and St. Jude's Day. The two firſt Treatiſes of this Manuſcript, which are Henry Heſſe's, and the laſt which is the firſt Book of the Imitation, are written in a different hand from the reſt, which are written in a hand reſembling that in which the Catalogue is written. This was the Judgment of men well vers'd in theſe matters: But the Name of Thomas a Kempis appears to be written lately. There are alſo two other Collections alledg'd, one which is in the Monaſtery of Benedictines of Mount Blandin, near Gant; which according to the Certificate of Father Vanheul, Library-keeper to this Abby, authoriz'd by the Dean of the Church of Gant, contains many Works of Thomas a Kempis, which begin with the Sermons to the Novices, together with their Preface, which is Entituled, Here begins the Prologue of that devout Man Friar Thomas Kempis, a Prieſt, a Canon-Regular profeſs'd, who died in the Monaſtery of St. Agnes near Zwol; after this follow the Sermons: There are many other Works of the ſame Author, among which is found that of the Imitation. This Manuſcript has no Date, and there was never any Judgment given of its Antiquity. The third Collection is, that which is found in the Library of the Benedictines of St. Martin at Tournay, which is alledg'd by Chifletius, it contains the Book of the Diſcipline of thoſe who are in the Cloyſter; Spiritual Exerciſes; the Treatiſe of a Man's Acknowledgment of his own Frailty; A ſhort Advertiſement of the Spiritual Exerciſe; Uſeful Advices for a ſpiritual Life (this is the 1ſt Book of the Imitation) Advertiſements which carry a man inward (that's the 2d Book) and at the end is written with the ſame hand and in Red, Friar Thomas a Kempis, Canon-Regular of the Monaſtery of St. Agnes near Zwoll, in the Dioceſe of Utrecht, wrote the Tracts above recited. This Manuſcript is without Date.

To theſe Collections we may add the Manuſcript Catalogues of Books, wherein the Imitation is found commended under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, ſuch as that of the Library of Endovia, which is join'd to another Catalogue of Sancta Maria of Arnhem, dated in the Year 1472. A Catalogue of the Books of about a hundred Libraries of Germany, which contain ſhort Characters of Authors, wherein there is found at Page 302. what follows, Friar Thomas a Kempis, of the Dioceſe

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

Dioceſs of Collen, a Canon-Regular at Mount St. Agnes near Zwoll, of the Dioceſs of Utrecht, being well vers'd in the Holy Scripture, has Compil'd many Tracts, which are witneſſes of his Devotion, and uſeful for Regulars; viz. Advertiſements for a Spiritual Life, otherwiſe call'd, of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; Advices which lead to an inward Life, and of inward Converſation; of Internal Conſolation or Speech; of the Holy Communion, or the Preparation of a Man for the Communion. There is another Catalogue joyn'd to the preceeding, wherein at the Letter T. there is put under the Name of Thomas a Kempis the four Books of the Imitation, together with the Book of the Three Tabernacles, and of Mary and Martha; theſe three Catalogues are in the Library of St. Martin of Louvain. There is alſo a Catalogue in the Library of St. Maria of Arnhem, dated in 1496. wherein the four Books of the Imitation are found under the Name of Tho. a Kempis. Three ancient Catalogues in the Library of the Monaſtery of St. John Baptiſt de Rebdorf, containing the Titles of all the Works of Thomas a Kempis, among which are found the Books of the Imitation; whereof one bears date 1488. and goes under the Name of Friar Nicolas Numan of Frankfurt, a Regular of Frankendal. An Obſervation which is at the end of the Monaſtery of St. Catherine of Ausburg, wherein are the Lives of Gerard and Florence in German; wherein 'tis obſerv'd that this Book is Thomas a Kempis's, who wrote a Devout Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

The General Anſwer which is given to all theſe Manuſcripts is this, that being all later than that of Antwerp, in 1441. which has the Name of Thomas a Kempis at the end of it, altho' it be only in the quality of a Tranſcriber, and not of the Author, it was very poſſible that one of theſe might be taken for the other, and that the Book might be aſcrib'd to Thomas a Kempis as the Author, which he had only Tranſcrib'd. That this it is which has deceiv'd ſome of thoſe who have ſince Copied out or Printed this Work, and many Authors who have aſcrib'd it to him. That there is not any Manuſcript found before the year 1441. which goes under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, and that there were many of the ſame time and ſince that, which are Anonymous. That theſe Manuſcripts are not more conſiderable nor more ancient than thoſe which aſcribe the ſame Book to St. Bernard, to Gerſon, or Gerſen, even while Thomas a Kempis was alive. But on the contrary, the latter are more ancient. That no where but in Flanders or Germany are there any Manuſcripts to be found which go under the Name of Thomas, and that all thoſe which are in France and Italy are anonymous, or go under the Name of Gerſon, or Gerſen; which ſhews that thoſe who firſt put his Name to the Manuſcripts, were deceiv'd by the Manuſcript of Thomas a Kempis, in 1441. That in the Manuſcripts which carry the Name of Thomas a Kempis, the four Books are parted, and under different Titles, as if they were four different Treatiſes, and often they are tranſpos'd; whereas in the greateſt part of the other Manuſcripts which are more ancient, the four Books of Imitation are plac'd there under the ſame Title, and in their Natural Order. Theſe are the Exceptions which are made againſt the great number of Manuſcripts which are alledg'd on behalf of Thomas a Kempis, which depend upon the Manuſcripts which the others produce, whereof we ſhall ſpeak hereafter. Let us now come to the Editions which have been made under the name of Thomas a Kempis.

SECTION IV.

The Editions of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt under the Name of Thomas a Kempis.

'TIS true, the Firſt Edition which is alledg'd with a Date of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, is in 1475. tho' the Copy of it is never produc'd; but then 'tis ſaid that there is one in the Library of the Republick of Ausburg, Cod. 32. of Theological Books, wherein the 4 Books of the Imitation are printed in Folio, without a Date indeed, but at the end there is found this Note, Viri Egregii Thomæ Montis Sanctæ Agnetis in Trajecto Regularis Canonici, Libri de Chriſti Imitatione numero quatuor finiunt feliciter, per Zanitherum Zainer ex Rentlingen progenitum, literis impreſſi aheneis: i. e. Here end the 4 Books of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, by that Excellent man Thomas a Canon Regular of Mount St. Agnes of Utrecht, printed in Letters of Braſs by Gonther Zainer, a Native of Rentlingen; Zainer died April the 14th, in 1475. as is prov'd by the Burial-Book of the Canons Regular of the Holy-Croſs of Ausburg, and therefore this Edition muſt be more ancient than the former. There is an Edition of the Mirror of Human Life by Roderic of Zamora, printed in 1471. by Zainer. And laſtly it is obſerv'd upon the Copy whereof we are now ſpeaking, that it was bought by the Convent of Friars Carmelites of Ausburg. Suppoſing the truth of theſe matters of Fact, it cannot be deny'd but the Books of the Imitation were printed under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, a little time after his Death.

The Second Edition which is alledg'd is that of Strasburg, in 1487. 'Tis ſaid that it was in the Library of Prague; and Heſerus relates that he found it at Ausburg, in the Library of the Canons

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

Canons Regular of St. George. It begins thus; Incipit Liber primus fratris Thomæ de Kempis, Canonici Regularis, Ordinis St. Auguſtini, de Imitatione Chriſti, & de contemptu omnium vanitatum Mundi, Capitulum primum. Qui ſequitur me, &c. and at the end, Fratris Thomæ de Kempis de Imitatione Chriſti, & de contemptu omnium vanitatum Mundi, devotum & utile Opuſculum finit feliciter, Argentinæ impreſſum, per Martinum Flach, Anno Dom. 1487.

There is alſo alledg'd another Edition in the ſame year at Nuremberg, which is mention'd in the Addition to the Hiſtory of the Library of Nuremberg.

There are 3 Editions in 1480. one at Ingolſtad, the other at Lyons, and a 3d at Memmingen, and one at Lunenburg, in 1493.

The firſt which fell into our hands is the French at Paris, in 1493. which we have already quoted, and has theſe words at the top, Here begins the moſt wholſom Book Entituled, Of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and a perfect contempt of this miſerable World; which by ſome has been hitherto aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, or Mr. John Gerſon, tho' really it does not belong to them: For the Author of this Book under our Lord, was a Venerable Father, and moſt Devout Canon-Regular, who in his own time liv'd in a Regular Obſervation of the Rule of my Lord St. Auſtin, Nam'd Friar Thomas de Kempis.

After this follows an Edition of the Works of Thomas a Kempis, in 1494. at Nuremberg, by Gaſpar Hochfeder, by the Care of Peter Danhauſſer, and at the ſollicitation of George Pickamer, Prior of the Carthuſians of that City, wherein the Treatiſe of the Imitation is at the head of all the Works, with this Obſervation; Dulciſſimi & Divi Thomæ de Kempis viri piiſſimi, religioſiſſimiq; de Imitatione Chriſti, Opus: quod falſo apud vulgares Gerſoni Pariſienſi Cancellario impingitur.

There are alſo before that at Paris, one by Badius in 1520. which ſome have thought to be the firſt Edition, under the Name of Thomas a Kempis; that of Collen, in 1507. and that at Antwerp, in 1519.

In the Editions of the Works of Thomas a Kempis by Badius, in 1520, 1521, and 1523. the Book of the Imitation is there with this Note, that it was falſly aſcrib'd to Gerſon. It was alſo printed at Venice, in 1535. among ſome Works of Thomas a Kempis with the ſame Note. I paſs over in ſilence the Paris Editions of the years 1541, 1549, 1561, and 1574. and at Antwerp, in 1535, 1550, 1552, 1559, 1575, 1587, 1592, 1599, 1607. after which follow'd that of 1616. by Bellerus from the Manuſcript written with the Author's own hand, in 1441. at Lyons in the years 1554, 1555, 1596, and 1601. at Vienna in Auſtria, in 1561. at Lisbon in the ſame year; at Dilingen in the years 1571, and 1576. at Baſil in 1563. in which the 3 firſt Books are turn'd into fine Latin by Sebaſtian Caſtalio, which have been publiſh'd ſince after the ſame manner by Francis Toll, who Tranſlated the 4th Book, and printed them together at Antwerp, in 1575. at Collen in the years 1575, 1582, 1591, 1601, 1607, and 1610. and at Rome, in 1583. wherein the Book of the Imitation is printed under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, a Canon Regular, or with this Obſervation, that it has been falſly aſcrib'd to Gerſon. Neither ſhall I mention the Editions in Vulgar Tongues, ſuch as the French Verſion, printed in 1565. the Italian printed at Venice in 1569. a Spaniſh Verſion of Louis de Grenada, printed in 1542. two other Verſions in the ſame Tongue, printed in 1615, and 1633. a Verſion into Flemiſh by Nicholas Winge a Canon-Regular of Louvain, printed at Louvain in 1584, and 1576. and at Antwerp, in 1591. a German Verſion printed at Dilingen in 1554, and 1555. the Tranſlations into the Turkiſh Language, in 1580. into the Bohemian in 1600. into the Engliſh in 1611. into the Greek at Ausburg, in 1615. into the Japan, Arabick and Hungarian Tongues in 1636.

This multitude of Editions does no ways terrify the Adverſaries of Thomas a Kempis, for the latter are of no great Authority, and to the former they oppoſe Editions equally ancient, which aſcribe this Book to St. Bernard, or to Gerſon, under whoſe Name it appear'd many times in Italy, and France, before the Name of Thomas a Kempis was mention'd. Theſe Editions were Publiſh'd ſince the death of the Author, at a time when ſome in Germany and Flanders thought the Book of Imitation was his; and they are either in Germany, or Flanders; for there is never an ancient Edition in Italy or France under the Name of that Author; but they are almoſt all under the Name of Gerſon. Laſtly, It is not by Editions that we muſt decide this Queſtion, but by Manuſcripts; for if another Author has ſome of theſe more ancient than Thomas a Kempis, this Book can be none of his.

If thoſe which go under the Name of Gerſon, or Gerſen, are more ancient and more authentical than thoſe which go under the Name of Thomas, 'tis more natural to aſcribe it to them than to this latter. Upon this depends the Deciſion of the Queſtion, and the number of later Editions ought not to be any prejudice againſt the Manuſcripts.

SECTION V.

The Testimonies of Authors which are alledg'd in Favour of Thomas a Kempis.

A Dissertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ.

THE Testimony of Cotemporary Authors who wrote and liv'd immediately after an Author, is of great moment to discover his true Works; and many such Testimonies are produc'd to prove that the Book of the Imitation is Thomas a Kempis's.

The 1st is John Busch, a Canon-Regular of Windesem, who finish'd the Chronicle of his Monastery in 1464. as he himself observes in his Preface, and as may be inferr'd from Chap. 4. and 5, of the 2d Book of that Chronicle, wherein he remarks that it was more than 70 years since the Monastery of Windesem was founded. This Author speaking in Chap. 21. of the 2d Book of the death of John of Huesden, Prior of the Monastery of Windesem, says, that a few days before his death it happen'd that two considerable Friars of Mount St. Agnes near Zwoll, of his own Order, came to meet this Prior, and consult him about some things; of whom, one was Friar Thomas a Kempis, a man of an Exemplary Life, who wrote many devout Books, (viz. He that follows me, Of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, with some others,) and the next Night he had a Dream which presag'd future things; For he saw in the Night time a Meeting of Blessed Spirits in Heaven, who crowded as it were for the death of a certain Person; and when he heard the Bell Knowl, as it us'd to do for a Dying-man, he awoke out of Sleep; and from hence he conjectur'd that the Prior of Windesem would quickly die. Contigit ante paucos dies sui obitus, ut duo fratres notabiles de monte Sanctæ Agnetis prope Zwollis Ordinis nostri, dictum Priorem nostrum super certis rebus consulturi in Windesem advenirent, quorum unus frater Thomas de Kempis, Vir probatæ vitæ, qui plures devotos libros composuit, Viz. Qui sequitur me, De Imitatione Christi, cum aliis, nocte insecuta somnium vidit præsagium futurorum. Aspexit namq; in visu noctis concursum Spirituum beatorum fieri in cœlestibus, quasi pro alicujus morte celeriter festinantium statimq; tabulam tanquam pro morientis exitu in somnis audivit pulsari, ut exinde experrectus evigilaret. In se itaque reversus cæpit tacite cogitare, quod Prior in Windesem in brevi esset migraturus. This Passage is not only printed by Busch, but is found also in a Manuscript of the Abbey of St. Martin of Louvain, and in another Manuscript of St. Peter and St. Anthony of Dalhem, which were exhibited by the Canons Regular of St. Genevieve, in a Manuscript of the Library of Utrecht, and in that of Rebdorf, according to the Authentick Testimonies of the Library-Keeper of Utrecht, and the Suffragan Bishop of Ausburg. The Manuscript in the Library of Rebdorf, was written in 1477. by Friar John Offenburg, aged 70 years, as is observ'd in the Manuscript. Finit feliciter per me fratrem Joannem Offenburg in Kerpgarten Professum feria tertia ante Dionysii festum, anno ætatis meæ circiter septuagesimo, anno vero Incarnationis 1477. sine speculo oculari scriptum. This Offenburg died in 1479. as is observ'd in the same Page, Anno Incarnationis Dominicæ 1479. obiit idem frater Joannes Offenburg. Nevertheless this Parenthesis is suspected of Forgery, Quorum unus frater Thomas de Kempis, &c. or at least these words, Qui sequitur me, de Imitatione Christi; and 'tis pretended the Parenthesis was added some time after. First, Because it has no Connexion, nor Relation to what goes before, and what follows after. Secondly, Because it promises to speak of two Friars, and yet it names only Thomas a Kempis. Thirdly, Because in order to the Revelation of this Vision, it was needless to alledge that Thomas a Kempis had wrote Devout Books. Fourthly, Because it seems to be an Affectation among these Books to name only the Imitation of Jesus Christ. That if one observes narrowly this Construction, qui plures devotos libros composuit, viz. Qui sequitur me, de Imitatione Christi, he will find it very probable that these words, viz. Qui sequitur me, &c. are added. This Conjecture would be past all doubt, if there be, as one told me, a Manuscript of the Chronicle by Busch, written in 1464. wherein this Parenthesis is not to be found; for the Manuscripts wherein it is, being Copied out since that time, 'tis easie to conceive that this Addition was made to them, as many others have been: But tho' it were manifest that this Parenthesis was written by Busch. in 1464. yet it is possible that this Author may be deceiv'd, and ascribe to Thomas a Kempis a Book whereof he was only the Transcriber.

The Second Witness is Matthias Farinator, of the Order of the Carmelites of Vienna in Austria, who is the Author of a Book of Moralities, Entituled, The Light of the Soul, printed at Antwerp, in 1477. 'Tis said, that he wrote the Book of the Imitation with his own hand, under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, and that his Copy is found with the other Treatises in the Library of Ausburg, as the Catalogue of that Library shews. The Books of the Imitation are only in Manuscript, but there are other Books at the end of which, 'tis observ'd, that they were written in 1472. with the hand of Matthias, and another which is a Soliloquy of Hugo, in 1475.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

As to this Witneſs, 'tis ſaid that he may do very much hurt to Thomas a Kempis, but can do him no ſervice; becauſe this Matthias Farinator liv'd under the Pontificate of John XXII. who ſate in the Holy-See, from 1316. to the year 1334. by whoſe Order he undertook to Compoſe the Book of the Light of the Soul. Poſſevin and Simlerus place him at the ſame time. If it be thus, and that he Tranſcrib'd the Book of the Imitation, then it could not be Thomas a Kempis's, ſince this Farinator muſt be dead before the year 1406. wherein Thomas became a Regular Profeſs'd. To this 'tis Reply'd, that Matthias Farinator was not of the Fourteenth, but of the Fifteenth Century, as the Date of his Manuſcript ſhews; that Trithemius has not put him in the Catalogue of his Writers, which ends at the year 1494. nor Arnold Boſtius, in his Catalogue of the Writers of the Order of Carmelites, which was finiſh'd about the ſame time: That Poſſevin and Simler were deceiv'd, becauſe they thought that Matthias Farinator wrote his Book by the Order of John XXII. for there is no ſuch thing ſaid in the Preface, as theſe Authors thought; That Farinator Compos'd this Book by the Order of Pope John XXII. but, That this Book was written in the time of Pope John XXII. and after it had remain'd a long while conceal'd and in obſcurity, he had put it into better Order, divided it into Chapters and Paragraphs, and made a Table to it. Here follow the words; Liber Moralitatum juſſu Joannis Pontificis Maximi Lumen Animæ dictus, quem poſt diutinam occultationem cum adhuc informis eſſet, Simplicioribus rudis & obſcurus appareret, frater Matthias Farinatoris de Vienna, Sacri Ordinis, B Dei Genetricis & Virginis Mariæ, de Monte Carmeli Lectorum Sacræ Theologiæ minimus, in Titulos, & Titulos in Paragraphos diſtinxit; Moralitates omnes pariter Naturales per binas Tabulaturas conſignans, & editus eſt anno, 1477. 'Tis therefore very probable that Matthias liv'd at the end of the Fifteenth Century, and that he did not Compoſe but put in Order, Correct, and Publiſh the Book of Moralities. If this be ſo, it may be ſaid, that ſuppoſing he had written the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, yet he was impos'd upon by ſome Manuſcript which was taken from that of 1441. which made ſome believe that this Book was Thomas a Kempis's. I ſay, ſuppoſe he had written it under his Name, for there is no ſuch thing in this Manuſcript; yet it may be, that the Author of the Catalogue having drawn it up at ſuch a time as Thomas a Kempis was commonly believ'd to be the Author of the Book of Imitation, might add this Name to it, tho' it was not in this Manuſcript. Laſtly, Since we have not the Original written with Farinator's own hand, we can lay no great ſtreſs upon this.

The Third Witneſs which is produc'd for Thomas a Kempis, is the Anonymous Author of his Life, who aſcribes to him the Book of the Imitation; and in the Body of the Life he ſays, that we may ſee in his Treatiſe of the Interior Converſation of Jeſus Chriſt with the Soul, Ch. 2. what he ſaid to the Lord in his Solitude, and in the Ancient Catalogue which concludes his Life.

Againſt this Witneſs, 'tis alledg'd, that he was not Cotemporary to Thomas a Kempis; that he had neither ſeen nor known him, ſince he ſays, that he learn'd what he wrote of his Life from the Friars of his Convent, who were ſtill alive; a Fratribus illius Conventus qui adhuc vivunt; and that he ſpeaks of the time when Thomas became a Regular, as a thing that was paſt many years ago: Tunc temporis fuit Conſuetudinis ut ſic per ſex annos probentur, priuſquam inveſtiantur. And therefore we muſt not wonder that he ſpeaks according to the Common Opinion in Germany, of the Book of Imitation: That beſides, this Life was Interpolated, and that neither the Catalogue, nor the laſt words wherein he promiſes it, are to be found in the Editions of Venice, in 1568, and 1576. That the Catalogues of the Works of Thomas a Kempis do neither agree among themſelves, nor with that of Trithemius. Laſtly, That the Continuator of the Chronicle of Mount St. Agnes, who wrote the Life of Thomas in 1477. ſays nothing like this which is in the Life of the Anonymous, and ſpeaks not any ways of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt; but only obſerves that he Compos'd ſome Tracts for the Edification of younger People in a plain and eaſie Style, but very conſiderable for their Senſe and Force.

The Fourth is Peter Shot, a Canon of Strasburg, who Publiſh'd in 1488. an Edition of the Works of Gerſon, wherein he obſerves, that he has not added here thoſe Treatiſes which had been ſometimes aſcrib'd to Gerſon, and who have certainly another Author, as the Book of the Contempt of the World; which, as is manifeſt, was writen by one Thomas a Canon-Regular; quem conſtat eſſe a quodam Thoma Canoico Regulari editum: But that which ſeem'd manifeſt to Shot, will not appear ſo to thoſe who aſcribe this Book to Gerſon.

The Fifth is John Kunne of Dunderſtat, who printed in 1489. a Book of the Elevation of the Soul to God, wherein he aſcribes the Book of the Imitation to Thomas a Kempis.

The Sixth is John Mauburne, an Abbot of Livry, the Author of the Spiritual Roſary, printed at Baſil, in 1491. who quotes in this Work the Book of the Imitation, under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, and who in another Manuſcript Work of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers, of the Order of Canons-Regular, ranks in this Number Thomas a Kempis, upon the account of the Books which he Compos'd; among which he names that which begins with theſe words, Qui ſequitur me; which ſome have falſly aſcrib'd to Gerſon. This Author wrote not this till towards the end of the 15th Century. He owns that from this time this Book had been aſcrib'd to Gerſon; nevertheleſs he thinks that it was Thomas a Kempis's, but he gives no manner of proof of this Opinion, and ſo his Teſtimony is not deciſive in the Caſe.

The

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

The ſeventh at laſt is Trithemius, who in his Book of Eccleſiaſtical Writers, which was finiſh'd in 1494. places the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, which he entitles De contemptu Mundi, beginning with theſe Words, Qui ſequitur me, at the Head of the Works of Thomas a Kempis, who flouriſh'd about the Year 1410. But the ſame Author, in his Book of the Illuſtrious Men of Germany, written ſome time after, diſtinguiſhes two Thomas a Kempis's, both Canons-Regular of Mount-Saint-Agnes, of Zwoll, whereof one was more ancient, and flouriſh'd in the time of Gerard le Grand, paſt for the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, tho' ſome were not of that Opinion: His Words are theſe; Et notandum quod duo feruntur hujus fuiſſe Nominis ambo de Kempis, Regulares in Monte Sanctæ Agnetis, ambo varia cudentes Opuſcula, quorum primus temporibus M. Gerardi Magni ad Religionem converſus, divinis Revelationibus dignus habitus, ea quæ ſupra recenſuimus Opuſcula ſcripſiſſe dicitur. Secundus vero adhuc noſtris temporibus pene viguit in humanis, & varia compoſuit quæ ad manus noſtras non venerunt, & forſitan primo nonnulla ſunt aſcripta, quæ ſecundus feciſſe putatur. Libellus autem de Imitatione Chriſti primi fertur Auctoris, quem ante multos Annos ſeniores noſtri ſuos ferunt legiſſe ſeniores; quamvis ſciam nonnullos in hac re ſentire contrarium. Claruit autem Thomas iſte ſenior ſub Ruperto Bavaro Cl. Imperatore Anno Dom. 1410. Trithemius having learn'd, after he had wrote his Book of Eccleſiaſtical Writers, that Thomas a Kempis had liv'd till his time, could not imagine that it was he who flouriſh'd in 1410. and who wrote the Book of the Imitation, which was more ancient, and had been read, as he ſays, by his Seniors Seniors. He does therefore diſtinguiſh two Thomas a Kempis's, the one more ancient, the Diſciple of Gerard le Grand, and the other later, confounding John a Kempis the Brother of Thomas, who had been indeed the Diſciple of Gerard le Grand, and Canon-Regular of Zwoll, with Thomas himſelf: And therefore this Teſtimony of Trithemius ſeems to prove, That the Book of the Imitation is more ancient than Thomas a Kempis, and that in his time it was not certain that it was his.

To theſe Authors ſome join George Pirkamer, Prior of the Carthuſians of Nuxemberg, and Peter Danhauſſer, who procur'd the Edition of the Books of the Imitation in 1494. under the Name of Thomas a Kempis; and an Anonymous Author, who wrote a Manuſcript Letter in the Library of St. German des Prez, in 1496. who quotes the Imitation as Thomas a Kempis's, John Geiler, of Keiſerberg, who quotes it under the Name of Thomas, in 1499. in his Treatiſe, Entituled, Navicula ſive ſpeculum Fatuorum; Philip of Bergamo, who praiſes Thomas a Kempis, and attributes to him the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt in his Chronicle at the Year 1506, and many other Authors of the 16th Century, which it were needleſs to mention, becauſe their Teſtimony is of no Authority.

SECTION VI.

The Reaſons which are brought to ſhow, That the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt is Thomas a Kempis's.

THE Reaſons upon which this Opinion is grounded, That the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt is Thomas a Kempis's are theſe; 1. The Agreement of the Style of this Work with that of the other Works of Thomas a Kempis. 2. The Agreement of the Thoughts and Sentences. 3. The Flemiſh Expreſſions which diſcover that the Author is of that Country. 4. The Doctrins and Maxims of the Canons-Regular of the Congregation of Gerard le Grand, which ſhew that this is one of his Diſciples. 5. The Name of Devout, which he often gives to the Congregations, and among whom he ſeems to rank himſelf, which is the Title that is commonly given to the Canons-Regular of that Congregation.

The Agreement of the Style appears, 1ſt, In the Uſe of certain, extraordinary and barbarous Terms which are in the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, and which frequently occur in the Works of Thomas a Kempis and his Brethren, ſuch as theſe, Regratiari, penſare, queruloſum, paſſionatus, contentare, contranare, compaſſivus, cordialiter, meliorari, ſolatioſus, ſufferentia; 2d. By the Uſage of Interjections, Eia, O quam, O ſi, which is common with them; 3d, By the ſame manner of expreſſing himſelf in low and mean Terms, but ſuch as are expreſſive and moving; 4th. By the Uſe of a ſhort and ſententious Style, ſo that every Phraſe is a Sentence and a Maxim.

To this 'tis anſwer'd, That the Style of the Imitation is more cloſe, more brisk and ſententious, than that of the Works of Thomas a Kempis, which is more prolix and faint; That there is a remarkable difference between them in this, That Thomas a Kempis cites the Paſſages of Scripture, and the Fathers at full length, and alledges the Places from which they are taken; whereas the Author of the Imitation takes only the Subſtance and Senſe of the Books (which he adapts to his purpoſe, without citing the Places) and not the very Words themſelves; which ſhews, That the former had meditated more upon them than Thomas a Kempis, but he did more fully underſtand their meaning. As to the Terms, they are not particular to Thomas a Kempis, and the Author of the Imitation; for they are common to him with many other Authors, who wrote in theſe dark Ages, and the Exclamations and Interjections are ordinarily us'd by all affectionate and ſpiritual men; beſides, That Thomas a Kempis having often read and tranſcrib'd the Imitation, and fram'd his mind according to it, it is no great Wonder, that he ſhould uſe the ſame Terms in his Works which are in it.

The ſame Doctrin and the ſame Morality, are to be found in the Imitation, which are in the other Works of Thomas a Kempis, the ſame Sentiments about the Contempt of the World and himſelf, about avoiding Pleaſures, about Humility, the Vanity of Sciences, about Retirement, the Life of Monks, Mortification, the Reſignation of our ſelves to God, and particularly about the Love of the Croſs; there are found in it the ſame Sentences and the ſame Maxims, almoſt in the ſame Words, which are in his other Works, of which I ſhall here give you ſome Examples.

Thus it appears, that many of the Thoughts and Sentences are certainly alike; but it may be ſaid, That we muſt not wonder at this, ſince theſe are Sentiments of Piety and Devotion, which come from the Spirit unto all thoſe who write ſpiritual Books, and that the like Sentences are to be met with, not only in the Works of Thomas a Kempis, but alſo in thoſe of St. Bernard, of Ludolphus the Saxon, of John Rusbroek, Denis the Carthuſian, and many other Spiritual Writers; beſides, That Thomas a Kempis being entertain'd a long time with the Thoughts and Sentiments of the Book of Imitation, 'tis no ſurprizing thing, that he ſhould draw from thence ſome Sentences, as he often does from the Books of Holy Scripture.

Some Authors, and among the reſt, Roſweidus and Heſerus, have taken a great deal of pains to collect together all the Flemiſh, or Teutonic Phraſes, which they thought were to be met with in the Book of the Imitation; others on the contrary, have imagin'd that they ſee in it a multitude of Italian Phraſes; but neither the Remarks of one, nor the other, are a convincing Proof; for the greateſt Part of the Phraſes which they have obſery'd, as Teutoniſmes, or Italian Phraſes, are the ordinary ways of ſpeaking, which are us'd by thoſe who do not ſpeak good Latin. Nevertheleſs, there is one which is wholly Flemiſh, Scire totam Bibliam exterius, i. e. To get the Bible by heart; for the Flemings ſay, To get a thing without, inſtead of, To get a thing by heart.

But this Expreſſion alſo is not to be found in the greateſt part of the Italian Manuſcripts; and therefore it may have been added by Thomas a Kempis in his Copy.

Laſtly, The Canons-Regulars of the Congregation of Gerard, were call'd by the particular Name of Devoto's, Devout Clerks, the Congregation of the Devout: This is the Name which Thomas a Kempis himſelf gives them in the Lives of Gerard le Grand, Florence, and others; this is the Name which John Buſch gives them in the Chronicle of Windeſem. The Author of the Imitation ſpeaks often of the Devout, and gives us to underſtand, That he dwells with them, God grant that the Progreſs of Vertue may not be hindred among you, who have ſeen ſuch great Examples of the Devout, l. 1. c. 18. n. 6. I confeſs I am not worthy to dwell among your Devoto's, l. 3. c. 52. n. 2. I offer you all the Pious Deſires of the Devout, l. 4. c. 9. n. 5. To this Objection, they think it enough to anſwer, That the Name of Devoto's is a General Name, which is given indeed to the Clergy of the Congregation of St. Gerard, but not as a Name which is peculiar to them, and does not agree to any other; That the Word is to be found in a multitude of other Authors, who wrote before there was any Congregation of St. Gerard, as in Richard de ſancto Victore, in St. Bonaventure; That even the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt uſes it for all thoſe that are fervent in the Exerciſes of Piety: Altho' I am not fit'd, ſays he, with ſuch a Paſſion to receive you, as thoſe who are your particular Devoto's, Licet tanto deſiderio tam ſpecialium devotorum tuorum non ardeo, l. 4. c. 14. n. 3. and in many other places: In theſe very Paſſages which are alledg'd, there is nothing to ſignify, that the Name Devout is us'd in them, for Perſons of a particular Order or Congregation.

SECTION VII.

An Examination of the Reaſons which are alledg'd againſt Thomas a Kempis, viz. Whether there be Authors which mention the Book of Imitation, before he could write it, and whether it be in Manuſcripts that are more ancient than he. A Liſt of all the Manuſcripts of the Imitation, whereof we have any Knowledge. An Enquiry whether the Author of this Book was a Monk.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

THE firſt Argument which is made uſe of to ſhew, that the Book of the Imitation is not Thomas a Kempis's, is this, That this Book is more ancient than he. 'Tis certain, that if this Fact is well prov'd, it cannot any ways be aſcrib'd to him. Now here follow the Proofs which are brought of it.

Firſt, 'Tis ſaid. That the Book of the Imitation is cited by St. Bonaventure, who was dead before the Death of Thomas a Kempis. This Fact appears notorious; for there are found among the Conferences to the Novices, which are among the Works of St. Bonaventure, and go under his Name, ſome Extracts taken out of Ch. 25. of the Imitation which the Author cites; Ut patet in devoto libello de Imitatione Chriſti. This Teſtimony alone would be deciſive, if it were certain, that theſe Conferences were St. Bonaventure's; but it is maintain'd, that they are none of his, and for this a Proof is brought which appears to be unanſwerable. The firſt Conference, ſay ſome, is taken out of the Book of a Crucified Life, by Ubertin of Caſal, which he did not write, as he himſelf obſerves in the Preface, That it was finiſh'd in 1305. in the 32d Year of his being a profeſs'd Monk, Menſe Septembri terminavi in vigilia Michaelis Archangeli anni præſentis 1305. a feliciſſimo ortu veri Solis Jeſu, a mea vero vili converſione anno 32 & die 9 Martii in Quadrageſima in Feſto 40 Martyrum inchoatus eſt iſte liber. If Ubertin did not compoſe this Work till 1305. and did not enter into the Order of Friars Minors till 1273. How could St. Bonaventure, who died in 1274. cite this Book? Add to this, That theſe Conferences are not found in the Editions of his Works at Strasburg, in 1489. nor in the Manuſcripts of the Libraries of the Vatican, of Sforca, of Colonna, of the Oratory of Bologne, and of Thouloufe; That Marianus of Florence, who wrote his Chronicle in 1486. is the firſt that puts them in the Catalogue he made of the Works of St. Bonaventure, which was done very carefully; That they are to be found indeed in the Edition of Strasburg, in 1495. but in the Edition at Rome of Zamora, they are not aſcrib'd to him, becauſe tho' they had appear'd in Print under his Name, yet it was not done upon the Authority of any Manuſcript, Ut in impreſſis hactenus Opuſculis fertur; Laſtly, That the Occaſion of aſcribing theſe Conferences to St. Bonaventure, was this, becauſe he had written 91 Conferences different from theſe.

Thoſe who in ſpite of theſe Reaſons will ſtill maintain, that theſe Conferences are St. Bonaventure's, do follow Wadingus, in ſaying, 1ſt, That St. Bonaventure did not take from Ubertin what is found in theſe Conferences, but Ubertin took it from St. Bonaventure, and that the Citation of Ubertin (for it is there cited under his Name) is not in the Original Text, but has been inſerted afterwards in ſome Marginal Note: But this is no ways probable, becauſe the Author of the Conferences is only a Compiler, who compos'd them of Paſſages taken out of four or five Authors; and therefore they have recourſe to another Solution of this Difficulty. 'Tis ſaid, That Ubertin, of Caſal, wrote, That he had receiv'd the Habit of his Order from John of Parma, General of the Friars Minors, who being depoſed in 1256. Ubertin muſt needs have been a Regular of this Order, before 1273. and that he might compoſe his Book ſince that time. 'Tis true, That John of Parma was depos'd in 1256. but he liv'd alſo Thirty Years in an Hermitage near to Rieti, where Ubertin of Caſal ſays, That he went to meet him, without obſerving that he had given himſelf the Habit. However this be, the time when Ubertin of Caſal entred into the Monaſtery, and when he wrote his Book, being certain by his own Teſtimony, 'tis needleſs to look after Conjectures. 'Tis ſaid, That Marianus of Florence flouriſh'd about the Year 1400. according to Rodolphus Toſſinian, or in 1430. according to Pocciantius, a Writer of the Hiſtory of Florence; and therefore, that he is more ancient than Thomas a Kempis, and conſequently, That the Conferences attributed to St. Bonaventure were written before Thomas a Kempis, which is ſufficient. To theſe Authors ſome oppoſe Mark of Liſbon, who ſays, That Marianus of Florence died not till after the Year 1528. But this is very uncertain, for this Author is not worthy of Credit; but 'tis certain, by his Chronicle, that he lived till the Year 1480. in which Year Servita, the Author of the Hiſtory of Florence, places his Death. Now ſuppoſing that about the Year 1480. Marianus had ſeena Manuſcript of the Conferences under the Name of St. Bonaventure, then he who is the Author of them muſt have liv'd before that time; and this Author, having, when he wrote, an Anonymous Manuſcript of the Imitation in Italy, 'tis probable, ſay they, That this Book was compos'd before Thomas a Kempis could write write it. But this is what thoſe deny who maintain, that the Book was written by Thomas in 1410. And ſo the Teſtimony drawn from theſe Conferences is not concluding.

'Tis alledg'd, That St. Thomas took ſomething out of the 4th Book of the Imitation, and inſerted it into the Office of the Holy Sacrament, viz. That which he ſays in the Reſponſes of the Magnificat, at the Feaſt of the Holy Sacrament; O quam ſuavis eſt, Domine, ſpiritus tuus, qui ut dulcedinem tuam in filios demonſtrares, Pane ſuaviſſimo de Cælo præſtito, eſurientes reples bonis, faſtidioſos divites dimittens inanes; for the very ſame Words almoſt are to be found in Ch. 13. of B. 4. of the Imitation; O quam ſuavis eſt ſpiritus tuus, Domine, qui ut dulcedinem tuam in filios demonſtrares, pane ſuaviſſimo de Cælo deſcedente illos reficere dignaris. But what Proof is there, That St. Thomas did rather take this from the Imitation, than the Author of the Imitation ſhould take it from the Office of the Holy Sacrament; eſpecially if we conſider, That this Author does often take Sentences out of the Offices of the Church, as in ch. 3. of the Same Book, O mira circa nos tuæ Pietatis dignatio? Which Words are us'd at the Bleſſing of the Eaſter Wax-Candle; and again in ch. 55. there is a Prayer taken from the Oriſon on the 16th Sunday after Whitſunday.

Matthias Farinator is alſo alledg'd, but to this pretended Witneſs we have already anſwer'd; from whence it appears, That it is not demonſtratively prov'd, that the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt was cited by any Author, before that Thomas a Kempis could have written it.

There remains only a Paſſage of Trithemius, which we have already produc'd, which is, That his Anceſtors ſaid, that their Anceſtors had ſeen the Book of the Imitation many Years before; Quem ante multos annos ſeniores noſtri ſuos ferunt legiſſe ſenicres. Trithemius wrote this in 1495. His Anceſtors were then between Sixty and Seventy Years of Age, and theſe being young men, had ſeen the Book in the hand of their Anceſtors, who read it many Years ago: This will make his Age at leaſt to go back to the beginning of the Century; which is the Reaſon alſo why Trithemius aſcribes it to a Thomas more ancient, and not to him that liv'd until his time. It may be ſaid, That ſuppoſing Thomas had written the Imitation in 1410. which Trithemius in that Place ſays, may be true, and that the Ancient Thomas to whom he aſcribes it, was no older; then conſequently the whole matter depends upon knowing, whether in 1410. Thomas was capable of compoſing this Book, which we ſhall examine hereafter.

Let us now ſee, whether there are any Manuſcripts of this Book, whether they be Anonymous, or have the Author's Name, whether they be dated or without Date, which prove that this Book was in being before it could be compos'd by Thomas a Kempis.

The firſt of all which we produce, ſhall be that which is pretended to have been written with the hand of John the Abbot of Verceil, who is ſaid to be the Author, which Manuſcript was in the Abbey of that City, if it be true which is written upon an ancient Edition at Venice in 1501. under the Name of Gerſon; Hunc librum non compilavit Joannes Gerſon, ſed D. Joannes . . . . . Abbas Vercell. . . . . ut habetur uſq; hodie propria manu ſcriptum in eadem Abbatia; But ſince it is not known by whom, nor when this Note was firſt put upon this printed Book, and that it was certainly done ſince the Year 1501. ſince that Mr. Naudæus avers, that this was written even ſince the Controverſie about this Book begun; and the F. F. Benedictines did not produce this Copy, in 1671. nor in 1674. altho' they had it in their hands, I think we need not be concern'd about it.

The Manuſcript of Arona, which goes under the Name of the Abbot Gerſen, and that in the Monaſtery of St. Columbanus of Bobio, were judg'd in 1687. to be 300 Years old, Scriptura non videtur inferior annis tricentis; and if ſo, then they were written at the end of the 14th Century, and conſequently before Thomas a Kempis could write them.

Father Sirmondus has given the ſame Judgment of an Anonymous Manuſcript which he had, and which is in the Library of the College of Jeſuits at Paris. Mr. Naude judg'd it much later, but I ſhall rather refer my ſelf to F. Sirmond than Mr. Naude.

There is alſo alledg'd an Anonymous Manuſcript in the Abbey of Grandmont, together with the Certificate before a Notary, of Peter Almaert, a Monk and Library-keeper of the Monaſtery of St. Adrian of Grandmont, who teſtifies, That he had ſeen and read upon the laſt Leaf of this Manuſcript which was tore off ſome Years after, an Inſcription which ſaid, That this Book was written by Friar Louis Du Mont, who died before the Year 1400. Hic liber conſcriptus fuit a F. Ludovico de Monte, qui obiit ante Annum milleſimum quadringenteſimum. But ſince, 'tis not known by whom this Note was added, nor at what time, and that this Manuſcript contain'd the Book of the Diſcipline of thoſe who are in the Cloyſter by Thomas a Kempis, it cannot be made uſe of to prove, that the Imitation is more ancient than he.

The Manuſcript of the Monaſtery of St. James of Liege, in Paper, wherein is found the 4th Book of the Imitation, under the Title of a Book about the Sacrament of the Altar, without the Name of the Author, has this Note written upon the firſt Leaf, Anno Dom. 1417. die menſis Octobris 15. indutus fui habitum Ordinis ſancti Benedicti, in Monaſterio ædificato in honore ſanctorum Apoſtolorum Jacobi & Andreæ: But it is not neceſſary, That this Note ſhould be written from the time that this Regular was profeſs'd; and it happens ſometimes, that the Regulars ſet down the Day of their being profeſs'd upon Books, which they had not till a long time after; yet 'tis very probable, that this was not written a long time after.

The Firſt Manuſcript which has a certain Date, is that which was cited in a Regiſter of the Monaſtery of Melice, written and fram'd in 1517. by Friar Stephen Purckhardi, wherein there is mention made of a Volume in Manuſcript containing the Treatiſe of St. Auſtin, of the Viſitation

A Dissertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ.

of the Sick, the first Book of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, and a Meditation upon the Passion by St. Bernard, at the end of which it is remark'd, Explicit Contemplatio B. Bernardi de Passione Domini, finita Anno 21 in die sancti Joannis Baptistæ. This Date of 21 can be nothing but 1421. since the Register was fram'd in 1517. It may be said perhaps, That the Imitation of Jesus Christ was by another hand and at another time, than the Treatise of St. Bernard; but the Register supposes them both to be of the same time and the same Writing, and in the same Volume, and those who have seen them, have given us no Advertisement about them.

The Date of the Manuscript at Weingarten is yet more certain; for the Manuscript it self is produc'd, wherein are the three first Books of the Imitation, and at the end of the third is written with the same hand, Explicit liber internæ Consolationis, finitus Anno Dom. 1433. secunda Feria ante Festum Assumptionis Beatæ Virginis Mariæ per me fratrem Conradum Oberspeg, tunc temporis Conventualem in Weingarten. Here then is a Manuscript in 1433. which is not the Original of Thomas a Kempis, and which does not bear his Name.

The Second Manuscript of Melice follows quickly after this, and is dated in the Year 1434. It contains The Manual of St. Augustin, the Rule attributed to St. Jerom about the manner of living in Monasteries, the Book of the Reformation of Man, divided into four Parts, whereof the first Book is of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, and the Contempt of the Vanities of the World; and after the four Books of Imitation, there are some Treatises of Gerson, whereof the last is, 25 Considerations for hearing of Confessions, at the end whereof p. 120. is written, Explicit die Kiliani 34. which denotes the Year 1434. because there is mention made of it in the Register, fram'd as we have already said, in 1517.

Father Mabillon assures us in his Journey into Italy, That he saw at Padua in the Library of the Abbey of St. Justina, a Manuscript of the Imitation dated 1436. whereof the Ancient Title was eraz'd, and instead of it there was written Gerson, or rather Thomas de Campis. The ancient Title therefore was not by Thomas a Kempis; for if it had been so, it would not have been raz'd to write the same again with a later hand.

The Manuscript of the Monastery of St. Ulric of Ausburg, which contains the first Book of the Imitation without the Name of the Author, is written in 1437. at the time of the Council of Basil, as is observ'd at the end; Et est finis hujus Tractatus scripti in Consilio Basileensi Anno Dom. 1437. Et sic cum Dei adjutorio finitus est iste Tractatus per me Georgium de Gottingen, tunc temporis Capellan. in Wiblengen.

The Manuscript written by Thomas a Kempis in 1441. may pass for one that is Anonymous, since Th. a Kempis put his Name to it as a Transcriber, and not as an Author.

The Manuscript of the House of the Carthusians of St. Barbe of Colen, wherein the first Book of the Imitation is found written, in 1447. has not the Name of the Author; only it is observ'd in the Index, that this Treatise, and those which follow that are Tho. a Kempis's, are a Devout Regular's, Cujusdam devoti Regularis.

The Manuscript of St. Martin of Louvain, which contains the 3d Book of the Imitation, Dated in 1449. and produc'd by the F. F. of St. Genevieve, is Anonymous.

The ancient French Anonymous Version made in 1447. by a Regular of Marchia, for Bernard of Armagnac, is printed at Roan, in 1498.

Another French Version which was found in 1467. in the Study of Monsieur the Count of Angoulesme, is under the Name of St. Bernard.

There is in the Abby of St. German de Prez, a Manuscript of the 4 Books of Imitation, Dated in the year 1460. under the Name of Gerson.

That of Allatius, which goes under the Name of Canabaco, is Dated in 1463.

That of Saltzburg of the same year, bears the Name of John Gerson.

There is an Anonymous Manuscript of the same year at Brussels, Cited by Chiffletius.

That of Parma, which has the Name of Gersen at the beginning of the 4th Book, contains, besides the 4 Books of Imitation, a Rule of St. Benedict, written with the same hand, at the end whereof the Date is set down, Die Octo. Aug. 1466.

There is also one Cited which was given in 1468. to a Monk of the Order of Olivet, by a Visitor of that Order, and which the Father Delfau found in the Cabinet of Monsieur of St. Hilary.

Those of Sluса and Padolirona, which have the Name of Gersen, were written about the same time, being judg'd to be 200 years old in 1671, and 1674.

That of St. Peter of Dalhem is Anonymous in the 1st Writing, and 'tis only since that, 'tis observ'd, that the Book of the Imitation is Tho. a Kempis's.

The First Manuscript which attributes this Book to Tho. a Kempis as the Author, is that in 1477. quoted by Rosweidus, and written by Offermans.

The Second is that of James of Leyden, Dated in 1482.

The Third is a Manuscript of the Holy-Cross at Ausburg, which some give out to be of 1440. but is without Date, as are also those of Rebdorf, and Lappius, to which we must joyn the Collections and Catalogues which we have above related.

That which is in the Library of St. Genevieve, and which attributes this Book to St. Bernard, is without Date; it is at least 200 years Old.

That

That of Mr. Lechaſſier, Cited by Mr. Launoy, wherein the 4 Books of Imitation are under the Name of Gerſon, is written before 1497. for it is written by James Lupus, who is deſign'd Batchelor of Divinity, who was Licentiate in 1497. and Died in 1498.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

Theſe are almoſt all the Manuſcripts of the Books of the Imitation, which we could come to the knowledge of. The Reflections which may be made upon them are theſe. 1. That there are Manuſcripts either Anonymous, or under the the Name of Gerſen, which the moſt Able Men in theſe matters judge to be written at the end of the Fourteenth Century, and in the firſt years of the Fifteenth. 2. That there are ſome Manuſcripts in 1421, 1433, 1434, 1436, 1437. and that during all that time from 1420. to 1441. there is not any Manuſcript that goes under the Name of Thomas a Kempis, and that theſe Manuſcripts are not the Author's, but the Tranſcribers, who Copied them out from others which were more ancient. 3. That the Manuſcript of 1441. does not diſcover him for the Author but for the Tranſcriber. 4. That from 1441. until the end of that Century, there are divers Manuſcripts which are either Anonymous, or which attribute this Book to Gerſen, to Gerſon, or to St. Bernard. 5. That there is never a Manuſcript during the Life-time of Thomas a Kempis, until the year 1471. which goes under his Name, as the Author. 6. That after his death, his Name is found in Manuſcripts and Editions, until the end of that Century; but that there are many other Manuſcripts, and many Editions at the ſame time, which give it to St. Bernard, to Gerſon, or to Gerſen.

The Defenders of Tho. a Kempis anſwer, that all thoſe Manuſcripts make nothing againſt him, becauſe all thoſe who have a Date, are poſterior to the year 1410. wherein they ſay that Tho. a Kempis Compos'd that Work, and that it cannot be prov'd, that thoſe who have no Date are more ancient. To them 'tis reply'd, That as to the Manuſcripts without Date, there are ſome of them, as thoſe of Arona, and Bobio, which appear more ancient than the year 1410. to thoſe Perſons who are moſt expert in matters of this kind. As to thoſe which are Dated, tho' there be none but what are ſince the year 1410. (in which year it pleaſes them, without Proof, to place the Compoſing of the Book of Imitation by Tho. a Kempis,) yet it may probably be inferr'd that this Book was Compos'd before this year; for theſe Manuſcripts being taken from other Copies, and being found in Places far diſtant from the Abode of Tho. a Kempis, as in Italy, 'tis difficult to imagin that this Book was ſo lately made. But ſome go further, and maintain, that in 1410. Tho. a Kempis was not capable of Compoſing this Book. Thomas was in 1399. a Scholar at Deventer, about the end of that year he entred into the Monaſtery of Zwoll. He was not a Monk profeſs'd, 'till in 1406. he had Learn'd to Write and Read the Bible, and to hear Books of Piety, as he himſelf obſerves in the Life of Arnoul of Schonhove: Ibi quippe didici ſcribere, & Sacram Scripturam legere, & quæ ad mores ſpectant devotoſque tractatus audire. He endur'd at firſt much hunger, and had great pain; he ſet himſelf afterwards to write out Books for Mony, and for the Houſe, Pro Domo & pro Pretio; theſe are the words of the Continuator of his Chronicle of Mount St. Agnes. He perfectly Tranſcrib'd a Miſſal, and the Prayers of the Office in 1414. The Bible he did not finiſh till 1439. He was not made a Prieſt 'till 1423. Which Circumſtances do ſhew, that 'tis very probable, he was not capable in 1410. of Compoſing the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, for he was then young, and had not Studied much, nor had made any progreſs in a Spiritual Life. He was not then a Prieſt, and the Imitation is the Work of an Ancient and perfect Regular, who had Practis'd for a long time what he had Written, who had made great Advances in the Spiritual Life, who had read very much, and meditated upon the Holy Scripture, and the Books of Spiritual Men, and who was a Prieſt. The Imitation by the Confeſſion of all the World is more ſublime and perfect than the other Works of Thomas a Kempis; who then can believe that it is his Firſt Eſſay, or one of his Firſt Works? This is no ways probable.

Mr. Launoy brings alſo another Reaſon, drawn from the advantageous Teſtimony which the Author of the Imitation gives of the Life of the Monks of his time, Book 1. Ch. laſt; which does not at all agree to the ſtate of the Monks at the beginning of the Fifteenth Century, who liv'd in great Diſorder, as Nicolas Clemangis obſerves. Father Fronto Anſwers this Argument, that there were at this time a multitude of Regulars very orderly, that thoſe of the Ciſtertians liv'd very Regularly; that the Benedictines were reform'd from the time of the Council of Baſil, that the Dominicans had been Reform'd in 1400. and the Friars Minors in 1411. that about the year 1350. which is the time wherein it is ſuppos'd that the Author of the Imitation Liv'd, there were alſo Regulars Diſorderly, as many Authors of that time teſtifie; that Clemangis has ſtretch'd the matter too far, in the Deſcription he has given of the Diſorders of the Monks. It muſt be confeſs'd, that Launoy's Argument is not very ſtrong, becauſe the Author of the Imitation ſpeaks not of the Regulars in general, but only of many Monks who liv'd very Regularly; and 'tis certain that it was then true of ſome, as the Carthuſians, and Ciſtercians, whom this Author gives for an Example in the ſame place, and ſome others. The Author of the Imitation does not diſſemble the Diſorders among the Monks in his time. Lib. 1. Cap. 18. N. 5. 'Tis thought much at preſent, not to tranſgreſs the Monaſtick Rule, Ibid. Ch. 3. N. 5. If Men would take as much pains to Extirpate Vices, and Eſtabliſh Vertue, as to Debate Queſtions, there would not be ſo much Miſchief done, nor ſo great Scandal given to the People; neither would there be ſo great a diſſolution of Manners in the Monaſteries; Nec tanta Diſſolutio in Cœnobiis.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

But there is another Argument againſt Thomas a Kempis, which appears much ſtronger. The Author of this Book declares himſelf a Monk, Lib. 5. C. 10. N. 2. Ye have ſhewn great Mercy, ſays he, to your Servant, and ye have favour'd and gratified him much beyond his merit. What then ſhall I render unto you for this Grace, for it is not given to all to Renounce the World, by quitting all, and embracing a Monaſtick Life. And at Ch. 56. N. 4. of the ſame Book, I have receiv'd from your hand the Croſs, I will carry it until Death, as ye have laid it upon me. Yes, the Life of a good Monk is the Croſs, it is that which Conducts him to Heaven, L. 1. Ch. laſt, N. 8. How do many other Regulars, who being lock'd up by the Diſcipline of the Cloyſter, go forth but ſeldom, live and eat poorly, are coarſly Cloath'd, Labour hard, &c. 'Tis certain that theſe things agree only to Monks, and not to Canons Regulars. The Author therefore reckoning himſelf among the Regulars, tam multi alii Religioſi, 'tis reaſonable to believe that he was a Monk in the ſame ſenſe. In fine, he propoſes always the Rule of St. Benedict, the Benedictines and Monks for his Pattern. He ſays nothing of the Rule of St. Auguſtin, nor of the Canons Regulars, whereof Tho. a Kempis ſpeaks in almoſt all his Works.

To this, 'Tis Anſwer'd, that the Name of Monk is commonly given to the Canons Regulars, as Mauburne Remarks in his Book, Entituled, Venatorium, Nam & generali compellatione Canonici Clerici Monachorum nomine compellantur, ut Juriſtæ notant. That nothing is more common in the Works of Thomas a Kempis, than to give the Name of Monks to his Friars, Part 2. Serm. 1. N. 6. Cœnobium Monachorum eſt ſicut ſalſum Mare, Part 2. Serm. 4. N. 3. O Frater Monache, qui Sanctitatis ſpeciem geris habitu & nomine. In the ſame Sermon, N. 7. Beatus Monachus deſolatus, cui mundus exilium, Cœlum Patria, cella Paradiſus, Serm. 5. N. 6. Onus quippe Ordinis diurnum & nocturnum collo Monachi impoſitum, Part 3. Serm. 1. N. 12. Hæc eſt via Sanctæ Crucis; hæc Doctrina noſtri Salvatoris, hæc ſapientia Sanctorum, hæc Regula Monachorum. Ibid. O Religioſe Monache, & ſectator arctioris vitæ, noli ab aſſumpta Cruce in Ordine recedere, ſed ſuſtine & porta Crucem uſque ad Mortem. A Paſſage which is very like that which is cited, Opuſc. 11. Ch. 1. Monache ad quid veniſti, quare Mundum dereliquiſti? Theſe are words which he Addreſs'd to his Brethren the Canons-Regular, whom he therefore deſigns by the word Monks. It was for them alſo that he wrote the Books Entituled by the ſame Name; as the Epitaph or Abridgment of Monks, the Life of a good Monk. Not to mention the Monk's Alphabet, which ſome have attributed to St. Bonaventure. There are alſo ſome Works wherein he makes no mention of the Canons-Regular, as in his Sixth Tract of the Diſcipline of theſe who are in the Cloyſter, C. 3. N. 3. Recte ſuum (Diabolus) per totum mundum ſubtiliter texit ac latiſſime expandit; Monachos & Moniales, ſubditos & prælatos, ſolitarios & Officiales circumdat & tentat, Ch. 4. N. 3. Fortiſſimum vincendi genus eſt ſeipſum perfecte vincere, & abnegare propter obedientiam, quæ Monachorum eſt laus maxima, & omnium Religioſorum Corona pulcherrima, Ch. 6. N. 4. Accipe ergo exemplum bona operandi a Chriſto Jeſu, a S. Paulo, a S. Antonio, a S. Auguſtino, a S. Hieronymo, a S. Benedicto, a S. Franciſco, a S. Dominico, & ab omnibus Sanctis Patribus, qui Regulas Monachorum Scripſerunt. And therefore tho' the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt ranks himſelf among the Monks, it does not follow that he was not a Canon-Regular; and much leſs that he was a Benedictine. This is what may be ſaid for and againſt Thomas a Kempis: Let us now ſee what may be alledg'd for Gerſen.

SECT. VIII.

The Manuſcripts of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, which go under the Name of John Gerſon, Chancellor of Paris.

IT cannot be deny'd that the more Common Opinion in France and Italy, about the latter end of the Fifteenth Century, was, that Gerſon was not the Author of the Imitation: But the ſame Care has not been taken to Collect all the Manuſcripts which are under the Name of Gerſon, which has been us'd to gather all thoſe which are under the Name, of Gerſen or Thomas a Kempis, becauſe there is no Society concern'd for him; tho' 'tis certain there are many ſuch Manuſcripts.

There is a very fine one in Parchment, Dated in 1460. in the Library of St. German de Prez, which begins with theſe words; Incipit Libellus devotus & utilis Magiſtri Joannis Gerſon, de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium vanitatum Mundi. And at the end of the Fourth Book, Explicit Liber quartus & ultimus de Sacramento Altaris, Anno Dom. 1460. 13 Kalend. Septembris.

The Manuſcript of Saltzburg in Paper, of the year 1463. contains many Treatiſes; and in the Table, the Book of the Imitation is thus deſign'd; De Imitatione Chriſti, Joh. Gerſ. which ſignifies Gerſon, for Gerſen was not then known in Germany; beſides, that an unknown Name, as that of Gerſen, is not commonly abridg'd; whereas that of Gerſon being well known, is often abbreviated. At the end of the Book it is thus written: Explicit Liber internæ conſolationis per Fratrem Benedictum die Sabbati ante Feſtum omnium Sanctorum, Anno 1463. & Scriptus Saltzburg Monaſterii Sancti Petri.

that

There is another Manuſcript which belongs to Mr. Lechaſſier, which goes under the Name and Title of Gerſon, which Mr. Launoy deſcribes after the following manner. This Manuſcript is, ſays he, all of Parchment; it contains 4 Books of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, and afterwards the Treatiſe of John Gerſon, of the Meditation of the Heart; and Laſtly, the Synonyma's of Iſidore of Sevil. On the backſide of the firſt Leaf is the Picture of Gerſon drawn in Miniature, in the Habit of a Doctor writing; and in the next Page are theſe words: Incipit Liber Primus Joannis Gerſon Cancellarii Pariſienſis de Imitatione Chriſti, & de contemptu omnium vanitatum Mundi, Cap. 1. Qui ſequitur me, &c. And at the end of Book 4. Liber Magiſtri Joannis Gerſon Cancellarii Pariſienſis de Imitatione Chriſti, una cum Meditatione Cordis, unicuique Religioſo & devoto neceſſarius finit. At the end of the Volume, Expliciunt Synonima Iſidori Hiſpalenſis Epiſcopi de homine & ratione emendata & ſumma cum diligentia caſtigata, per Magiſtrum Jacobum Lupi Sacræ Theologiæ Baccalaureum formatum, bene meritum. James of Lupi was Licentiate in Theology, of the Faculty of Paris, in 1497. January the 13th, and died in the Month of March, in 1498. There is no other Title given him here, but that of a Batchelor Formatus; which ſhews that this Manuſcript preceeds the year 1497. in which he was Licentiate.

Thoſe who ſtand up for Thomas a Kempis, have not any Manuſcript more Ancient to oppoſe againſt Gerſon; but thoſe who aſſert that this Book is the Abbot Gerſen's, ground their Opinion upon ſome Manuſcripts which they pretend to be more Ancient than Gerſon, or the Manuſcripts that are Anonymous, or in which the Name of the Author is not John Gerſon, but John Gerſen, or Geſen, who is deſign'd in the Manuſcript of Arona, by the Sirname of Abbot, which does no ways agree to Gerſon. The Partizans of Gerſon may anſwer, that there is no Manuſcript of which any can be certain; that it is more ancient than Gerſon, and that the Name of Gerſen which is found in ſome, is nothing but a Corruption of the Name of Gerſon. Others on the contrary maintain, that Gerſen is the Name of the true Author, which gave occaſion to aſcribe it to Gerſon, whoſe Name was better known than that of Gerſen. This is a Controverſie which can hardly be decided, but by Examining the Manuſcripts which go under the Name of Gerſen, as we ſhall do hereafter.

SECTION IX.

The Editions of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, under the Name of Gerſon.

I Doubt not but there are many other Manuſcripts of the Imitation under the Name of Gerſon, which might be diſcover'd; if the ſame Pains and Care were taken to ſearch after them, which have been us'd to find out the Manuſcripts of Gerſen, and Thomas a Kempis. However this be, 'tis very certain that there are many of them, ſince the firſt Editions of Italy and France, under his Name.

The Edition of Breſcia in the year 1485. is under the Name of St. Bernard; but it is Remark'd, that before that time it was aſcrib'd to Gerſon: Incipit Opus D. Bernardi celeberrimum de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium Vanitatum Mundi, quod Joanni Gerſoni Cancellario Pariſienſi attribuitur; from whence it follows, that before the year 1485. the more common Opinion was, that this Work was Gerſon's.

There is a very ancient Edition without the Date of the Year, or the Place, and one without the Date of the Year at Paris, by Marnef, which may have been written before the Death of Thomas a Kempis.

The Editions of Venice in 1486, 1488, and 1501. and that of Milan in 1488. that of Paris in 1489. by Higman, that of 1491, and 1492. by Pygonchet, that of 1500 by Petit, in Latin, and in French by Noir, go under the Name of Gerſon.

In the French Edition of 1493. 'tis obſerv'd, as we have already ſaid, that this Book was commonly aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, or to Gerſon. This latter continu'd in poſſeſſion of this Title in the next Age, which produc'd alſo divers Editions under his Name, as thoſe of Paris, in 1513. by Thomas Rede, in 1515, and 1517. by John Petit, and a Verſion in 1515. at Venice in 1518. by Aribaverius, at Vienna in 1561. at Lyons in 1567, and 1608. at Rome in 1583, &c.

Againſt theſe Editions it is Objected, 1. That there are other Editions as ancient under the Name of St. Bernard, and Thomas a Kempis. 2. There is a Catalogue of the Books of Gerſon made by his Brother, in a Letter written in 1423. wherein the Imitation is not found; as neither is it in the Catalogue of Careſius, made in 1429. 3. There are many Editions of the Works of Gerſon, among which the Book of the Imitation is not reckon'd, which is judg'd to be Tho. a Kempis's, according to the Note of Peter Schot, in the Edition of the Works of Gerſon, at Strasburg, in 1488. Neither is it to be found in the Edition of ſome Works of Gerſon, Printed at Collen, in 1483. nor in the Editions at Strasburg, in the year 1494, and 1514. at Baſil in 1489, and 1518. and at Paris, in 1521, and 1606.

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

Theſe Reflections may very much weaken the Authority of the Editions which are alledg'd, but they do not abſolutely prove that this Book is none of Gerſon's, for the Catalogues alledg'd do not generally contain all the Works of Gerſon, no more than the Edition, in 1483. As to the Edition of Schot, and thoſe which follow'd, that were made by his Copy, theſe being publiſh'd in Germany, where the Common Opinion was, that the Book of the Imitation was Tho. a Kempis's, 'tis no wonder that they did not inſert this Book among the Works of Gerſon.

SECTION X.

Reaſons which may be alledg'd to ſhew, that 'tis probable Gerſon was the Author of the Book of Imitation.

THere are not wanting either Reaſons or Conjectures, for aſcribing the Book of the Imitation to Gerſon.

To which purpoſe it may be obſerv'd,

Firſt, That 'tis very probable the Author did not write either in Germany, where there is an Emperor, or in Italy, or in Piemont, but in a Country which was govern'd by a King, becauſe he ſays B. 1. C. 2. N. 1. Nemo ſine tribulatione aliqua quamvis Rex ſit vel Papa; for if he had written in Germany, he would have ſaid, Quamvis ſit Imperator vel Papa; and if he had written in Italy, or in Piemont, he would have ſaid, Quamvis ſit Papa, or quamvis magnus Dux ſit aut Papa; which ſignifies that he liv'd under the Government of a King, as did Gerſon in France.

Secondly, That 'tis very probable the Author of the Imitation was Educated in an Univerſity, and that he had a great Acquaintance and Converſation with the Doctors and Canons of his time, who died before him; for this appears from what he ſays, B. 1. C. 3. N. 5. Dic mihi, ubi ſunt modo omnes illi Domini & Magiſtri, quos bene noviſti dum adhuc viverent, & in ſtudiis florerent! Jam eorum præbendas alii poſſident: He ſays not Ubi ſunt omnes Abbates, Priores Religioſi? but he ſays, Ubi ſunt modo omnes illi Domini & Magiſtri: He ſays not, Jam eorum Abbatias, Prioratus alii poſſident; but he ſays, jam eorum Præbendas alii poſſident: He ſays not only, Qui fuerunt ante te, but he ſays, Quos bene noviſti dum adhuc viverent, & in ſtudiis florerent. He often makes uſe of theſe ways of ſpeaking, B. 3. C. 43. N. 2. Veniet tempus quando apparebit Magiſter Magiſtrorum Chriſtus: He does not ſay, Abbas Abbatum, B. 1. C. 3. N. 2. Taceant omnes Doctores: He ſpeaks of the Diſputes of the School, Ibid. Quid curæ nobis de generibus & ſpeciebus? Ibid. N. 3. Quid prodeſt tibi alta de Trinitate diſputare? He ſpeaks like a Man whoſe Buſineſs it was to read and hear, Ibid. N. 2. Tædet me ſæpe multa legere & audire. He ſhews what uſe we ſhould make of our Studies, Ibid. C. 2. N. 3. Noli ergo extolli de ulla arte vel ſcientia, ſed potius time de data tibi notitia. C. 7. N. 1. Non confidas in tua ſcientia. B. 3. C. 43. N. 1. Nunquam ad hoc legas verbum ut doctior aut ſapientior poſſis videri.

Thirdly, It may be obſerv'd, that Gerſon had 5 Brethren, and 7 Siſters; that his Father and Mother had liv'd very Piouſly; that 3 of his Brethren were Regulars, and that one of them died when he was an Infant, as did alſo one Siſter; and that of the 6 other Siſters there was but one that Married, as he himſelf teſtifies in an Epigram which he wrote, with other Poems upon his own Teſtament; and that in 1428. probably his Siſter Paulina, and his Brother Nicolas died of the Plague. He ſays alſo in the ſame place, that his Country was Gerſon, Gerſon origo fuit. Now all this does perfectly correſpond to what we read in the 4th Book of the Imitation, C. 9. N. 5. Offero tibi omnia pia deſideria devotorum, neceſſitates Parentum, Amicorum, Fratrum, Sororum, omniumque carorum meorum. If we underſtand the Author as ſpeaking in his own Perſon, then Neceſſitates Parentum may be meant of the Spiritual Wants which Fathers and Mothers may have in another Life, for it is not probable that they were then alive, ſince they were Aged 60 Years. But theſe words cannot be underſtood of Thomas a-Kempis, ſuppoſing that he ſpeaks in his own Perſon, and not in the Perſon of another; for Roſweidus ſays, that he never had but one Brother, as is reported.

Fourthly, The Sentiments and Doctrin of the Author of the Imitation do perfectly reſemble thoſe in the Books of Piety written by Gerſon. He inſpires the Reader with a great Contempt of all vain Knowlege in the whole firſt Book, and chiefly in Ch. 1ſt, number 2, & 3. and ſpeaking of Benefices, B. 3. C. 3. N. 2. Pro modica, ſays he, Præbenda longa via curritur. Now Gerſon was Doctor, and Flouriſh'd a long while in the Univerſity of Paris, in the Quality of Chancellor: After the ſame manner he ſpeaks in his Epiſtle, de Converſione & perſeverentia in bono propoſito, in the 3d part of his Works, fol. 374. Recogita ubinam ſunt tecum ſtudentes, ubi illi familiares familiares Socii, cum quibus vivere & ſapere dulce erat . . . . quam multi jam obierunt, quam multi jam vagi in ſæculo remanſerunt . . . . audiſti alios Romam pergere, & pro Beneficiis laborare; alios Pariſiis reſidere & ad Magiſterium tendere. And what is yet more remarkable, when he writes to his Brother Nicolas, to teſtifie to him the joy he had conceiv'd for his becoming a Regular, he tells him that he had periſh'd if he had continu'd in a Secular Life, and had taken the Degree of a Licentiate, or Maſter of Arts; Ille qui a puero miſertus eſt tibi, dans tibi cor pium & timoratum, & ſuper Afflictos compatientem, ſuperaddidit miſericordiam ut te repelleret a ſeculo nequam in quo jam demergendus pene fueras irrevocabiliter, ſi Licentiam aut Magiſterium in Artibus adeptus fuiſſes. Et proprias conjecturas ex aliis accipe. May it not therefore be that it was with reſpect to this Brother, that he wrote what is in the firſt Book of the Imitation; for he had a great eſteem of this Brother, and 'tis he, of whom he ſays, that he was Conceiv'd by the Vows of his Mother: Denique noli obliviſci miſericordiam Domini in Progenitoribus noſtris, in Matre præſertim, quæ ineffabilibus Votis etiam ante tui conceptum, te talem aliquem a Domino quæſivit, velut Anna altera Samuelem. Deinde natum & adultum jugibus fere lachrymis, in hoc ſtatu, ſicut pie ſentio, progenuit. Meminiſti, opinor, literarum quæ ſuper hoc præbent indicium, & quæ alteram Auguſtini Matrem repræſentant, eam erga te reddis ei vicem orationum tuarum, & in te uno nos omnes erga Deum Interceſſorem habebimus. 'Tis to him that he writes thus, Omnis homo qualis Interius eſt, talis ei exterior adverſitas erit . . . . Non eſt magna Patientia quam parva res perturbat . . . . Tu ergo eſto libenter reus, ut fias ante Deum Innocens, tu primo a teipſo incipe, & ſic poteris alium ſanare. Audeas tamen qui zelum videris habere adverſus aliorum defectus . . . . quia recte & prudenter ageres, ſi zelum tuum etiam contra commotionem tuam exerceres . . . . Quid enim mihi prodeſt, ſi aliquem verbis meis ſanavero, & in propriis meis paſſionibus manſero? Which is very like to that which is in the 2d Book of the Imitation, C. 3. N. 1. Tene te primo in pace, & tunc poteris alios pacificare . . . . Habe primo Zelum ſuper teipſum, & tunc juſte zelare poteris etiam proximum tuum. 'Tis to the ſame Brother he ſays, Impedit nos valde quod non audemus violentiam inferre Naturæ . . . . Hodie aliquid inchoare, & cras modicum addere . . . . Perficit hominem virtueſum; which is very agreeable with what is in the firſt Book of the Imitation, C. 11. N. 5. Si omni anno unum vitium exti pavemus, cito viri perfecti efficeremur . . . . Si modicam violentiam faceremus in principio, tunc poſtea cuncta poſſemus facere cum levitate & gaudio. 'Tis to him that he ſays, O quantos labores faciunt homines pro terrenis lucrandis, & nos pro æternis bonis marceſcimus; which is very conſonant to what is in B. 3. of the Imitation, C. 3. N. 2. Pro modica Præbenda longa via curritur, pro vita æterna a multis vix pes ſemel a terra levatur. Tis to him that he ſays, Conſidera teipſum quod quæris in Operibus tuis, quod diligis, & quod non diligis. Secundum deſideria ſua fit homo ſtabilis aut vagus. Qui multum concupiſcit, & multa habere vult, quomodo in ſe manebit? diſpergitur in omnem ventum Cœli, & capitur laqueo deſiderii terreni. Parva res eſt ſæpe propter quam adipiſcendam generatur homini perplexitas magna, ſed qui omnia a ſe expellit, permittens unumquodque ſtare ſicut venit, bene in pace erit . . . . O quanta adhuc diſcere habet, qui non videt quantum adhuc ille deficit, & O quam longe ſtat! 'Tis to him that he ſays, Suſcipiamus, Cariſſime, De manu dei, quicquid voluerit ſuper nos venire Deus, nihil enim ſine certa & juſta cauſa agitur in terris; & ideo nos Deo oportet ſubjicere Cor noſtrum & ſenſum noſtrum, ut reſpiciens humilitatem & patientiam noſtram, bene diſponat deſiderium noſtrum, &c. 'Tis to him that he ſays, the Philoſophers have not known the Truth, but Jeſus Chriſt being come, has ſaid, He that followeth me, walketh not in darkneſs, which are the firſt words of the firſt Book of the Imitation. 'Tis to him that he ſays, Via Crucis via noſtra, via Electorum, via Paucorum . . . . Frangere propriam voluntatem crux eſt . . . . Memento quantum ſancti pro vita æterna laboraverint, in qua nunc cum Chriſto ſine fine regnantes gaudent . . . . Quanto in inferiori & humiliori ſtatu cor fuerit, tanto verius ſæpe bona agit, & facilius habita cuſtodit, Si alii præcedunt nos, quid ad nos, ſequamur Jeſum humilitate & ſimplicitate, & non curemus humanam vanitatem . . . . Quæ major gloria quam cum Chriſto gloriari in Cruce? quæ major conſolatio cordis, quam portare viventem imaginem Crucifixi? 'Tis to him that he ſays, Quam multi divites, Nobiles & Potentes, quam multi ſapientes, literati & famoſi adoleſcentes in hoc ſæculo miſerabiliter fluctuant & abjicere jugum Diaboli a ſuis cervicibus non prævalent, nec illo Spiritu adhuc moventur ut ſæculo renuntient. O vanitas vanitatum mundum diligere & quæ Dei ſunt minus curare! Venit tempus, venit cito tempus, quod omnes ſeculares & carnales voluptates finem habebunt. And laſtly, 'tis to him that he ſays, Denique Frater Cariſſime, noli in vanum gratiam accipere quæ data eſt in te; audiſti cariſſime, quomodo teipſum debes vincere. All which Sentiments and Maxims are very agreeable to thoſe in the Book of Imitation.

The Style of Gerſon's Works of Piety, is not ſo different from that of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, as may be imagin'd at firſt. His Stile is more dry and harſh in his Books of Doctrin, but in his Books of Piety and Devotion it is more ſweet and ſoft, and very like to that of the Imitation.

Sixthly, Gerſon Cites no part of the Book of Imitation; he exhorts the Celeſtines to read Books of Piety, ſuch as thoſe of St. Bernard, and others, in an Epiſtle which he wrote to their Provincial. He Exhorts likewiſe an Hermit of Mount Valerian to Read Books of Devotion, and he ſets down many of them for him; but he never mentions any part of the Imitation, which proves that he had no knowledge of it: Yet you may ſee in Gerſon Sentences and Expreſſions very like to thoſe which are in the Book of Imitation; if you will read the Letter which he addres'd to this Hermite, in the Fourth part of his Works, P. 51. the Letters which he wrote to his Brother Nicolas in the ſame Part, Fol. 372, 373, 374. the Book de Mendicitate Spirituali, Fol. 387. and the Treatiſe de Conſiderationibus quas debet habere Princeps, Part 2. Fol. 279. All which gives occaſion to conjecture that the Author of the Imitation is not more ancient than Gerſon, and that it was he, or ſome other who had read his Works, who wrote this Book.

SECTION XI.

The Reaſons which prove that the Book of the Imitation is not Gerſon's.

THere are but two Reaſons alledg'd againſt Gerſon, the Profeſſion of the Author, who declares himſelf a Monk, as we have ſeen, and the difference of Style.

The Firſt of theſe Reaſons may appear deciſive againſt Gerſon; yet it may be ſaid, that he ſpeaks in the Perſon of thoſe for whom he writes, and ſo Gerſon does in the Treatiſe upon theſe words, Venite ad me omnes, for ſays he, Si ſemel nos Jugo aſtrinxerimus, non liceat nobis de Monaſterio egredi & collum excutere de ſubjugo Regulæ . . . . Propter quod natus eſt benedictus legiſlator noſter. And in the Tract, De Solitudine Eccleſiaſticorum, written for the Celeſtines, he ſays, hoc jubet ſupremus Abbas noſter Jeſus Chriſtus. And in the Epiſtle, Pro Confortatione alicujus tentati, he ſays, Vita Clericorum, Monachorum & omnium Religioſorum in Cruce, &c. ſi aliam viam quærimus, erramus.

We may alſo Obſerve, 1ſt, That Gerſon liv'd as an Hermit for the ſpace of 10 years at Lyons before his death; for he died in 1429. And it appears from the Letter of his Brother John the Celeſtine, to his other Brother Anſelm, written in 1423. that he had then retir'd for the ſpace of 4 years, and that he liv'd there in great peace of mind, which made him ſay, that he never had ſo clear and vigorous a Spirit. And he adds, that he could hardly prevail with him to put forth ſome Tracts under his Name, except only thoſe which he was oblig'd to write by reaſon of his Office as Chancellor, or Doctor; and that he neglected a great number of them, whereof ſome are loſt, as that which he wrote, de Nuptiis Sapientiæ, which was the Cauſe why he could not exactly ſet down all his Books. 2dly, That Gerſon had been deſir'd by the Celeſtines to write ſomething upon theſe words: Si quis vult venire poſt me abneget ſeipſum, & tollat Crucem ſuam, & ſequatur me. For this he ſays plainly in a Letter which he wrote to them, which is about the end of the 3d Part of his Works; And his Brother John the Celeſtine ſays alſo that they had pray'd him to write ſomething for their Edification. It appears alſo that he compos'd for them a Treatiſe upon theſe words, Venite ad me omnes qui oxerati eſtis, which are the ſame with which the 4th Book of the Imitation begins. He wrote alſo other Treatiſes for them. May it not therefore be, that during this Retreat he applied himſelf particularly to meditate upon the Principal Maxims of Renouncing the World, and ſo Compos'd the Book of the Imitation about the end of his Life, that he might ſend it to them? All this may be made uſe of to ſhew, that it is not altogether impoſſible that Gerſon ſhould be the Author of the Imitation, altho' the Author ſpeaks like one that had embrac'd a Monaſtick Life.

As to the difference of Stile, 'tis true that the Stile of Gerſon is different from that of the Imitation, and that he handles matters in a manner more methodical, and leſs moving; but this difference is not ſo ſenſible in his Books of Piety; and it may be, that having a mind to compoſe a Work which might excite and nouriſh Piety, he applied himſelf ſo much the more to ſweeten his Stile, and to fill his Book with affecting thoughts, and ſo aſſum'd a Stile and way of Writing, ſuitable to his Deſign.

SECTION XII.

An Examination of the Manuſcripts produc'd for John Gerſen, or Geſſen, an Abbot; whether there was one John Gerſen Abbot of Verceil, of the Order of St. Benedict; whether John Gerſen was taken for John Gerſon; or on the contrary, John Gerſon, for John Gerſen.

THere remains only now John Gerſen, whoſe Claim to this Book is chiefly founded upon Manuſcripts.

The firſt and moſt ancient is that which is found at Arona a City of Italy, belonging to the Princes Boromees, in the Novitiat of the Jeſuits, which was formerly an Abby of St. Benedict. This Manuſcript came not as Cajetan at firſt believ'd, from the ancient Library of the Benedictines of this Monaſtery; but was brought thither from Genoa in 1579. by Father Maiolus, who found it in his Father's Houſe. The Author of theſe Books is there call'd in three places John Geſen the Abbot, once the Abbot John Geſen, and once the Abbot John Gerſen. The firſt Title upon the firſt Leaf is written with Red Ink: Incipiunt Capitula libri primi Abbatis Joannis Geſen, de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium vanitatum mundi, Caput primum. At the beginning of the ſecond Book there is alſo written in Red Letters, Incipit tabula libri ſecundi Abbatis Joannis Geſen de interna Converſatione, Caput primum. At the beginning of the third Book it is alſo written in Red Letters, Incipit Tabula tertii libri Abbatis Joannis Geſen, de interna Chriſti locutione ad animam fidelem. At the beginning of the fourth Book, that which follows is written with black Ink, Incipiunt Capitula quarti libri Abbatis Joannis Geſſen, cum quanta reverentia Chriſtus ſit ſuſcipiendus. Caput primum. At the end of the Book is written with Red Ink, Explicit liber quartus & ultimus Abbatis Joannis Gerſen, de Sacramento Altaris. After theſe Books there follows a Treatiſe of St. Bernard to his Kinſfolk, of St. Ambroſe about Morality and a good Life, and another Fragment of St. Bernard's. All this is fairly written upon Parchment with one and the ſame hand, and in the ſame Character, which was judg'd by the Aſſembly in 1687. to be 300 Years old. This is not the Original Manuſcript of the Author, who would certainly have written his own Name every-where after the ſame manner, but it is ſome Copy.

There appears nothing which can be reaſonably objected againſt this Manuſcript. It cannot be accus'd of Falſification in five places, neither can any ſay, That theſe Titles are later, after they have been view'd and examin'd by unexceptionable Judges: Neither can the Book be thought very late, after the Judgment they have given of its Antiquity: All that can be ſaid, is, That the Writer may have put the Name of John Geſen, Geſſen, or Gerſen, for that of John Gerſon. But whence then comes it to paſs, That he ſhould always give him the Title of Abbot? From whence did he take it? There is no Similitude between Cancellarii and Abbatis: How then ſhould it come into the mind of this Tranſcriber to give to John Gerſon the Title of Abbot? This is difficult to be explain'd.

The ſecond is the Manuſcript of the Monaſtery of St. Columbanus of Bobio, which the Aſſembly in 1687. judg'd to be of the ſame Antiquity with that of Arona, which has the Name of John Gerſen at the beginning of the 4th Book only; for at the beginning and end of the other, there is no Name at all. Here follows the beginning, In nomine Domini, Amen. Incipit libellus de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium vanitatum mundi. Capitulum primum. And at the end of the three firſt Books, Incipit liber Joann s Gerſen cum quanta reverentia & devotione ſacratiſſimum dominicum corpus & ſanguinem ſit ſumendum. And at the end of the 4th Book, Explicit, Deo laus & Beatiſſimæ Mariæ Virgini. There is afterwards another Treatiſe of Piety, which begins with theſe Words, Quoniam Chariſſime, & hujus miſerabilis vitæ fugientis ærumnoſa via, &c.

The third Manuſcript is that of the Congregation of St. Juſtina, in the Monaſtery of St. Benedict of Padolirona near to Mantua, as is remark'd at the end, Iſte liber eſt Monachorum Sanctæ Juſtinæ de obſervantia deputatus Monaſterio Sancti Benedicti de Padolirone ſignatus numero, 451. Where the Name of John Gerſen is found twice, once in red Letters at the beginning, Incipit liber Joannis Gerſen primus de contemptu Mundi & de Imitatione Chriſti, and at the end of the Book in black Ink, Explicit liber quartus Joannis Gerſen de Sacramento Altaris. As to this laſt, there is no Suſpicion of any changing or razing the Writing, and the Name of John Gerſen is certainly written with the firſt hand. Mr. Naude ſuſpected, That there it ought to have been Gerſon, and that the o might have been chang'd into an e: But he durſt not maintain this at laſt, and the very Inſpection of the Manuſcript which is in the Abbey of St. German de Prez, diſcovers, That there is no Change nor Razure in this place, as the Aſſembly in 1671. judg'd. " As to the firſt Title, " there is more Difficulty, Mr. Naude ſays in his Report, That having conſider'd this Title, In- " cipit liber Joannis Gerſen primus, whoſe Words are not in their natural Order, he perceiv'd " the Footſteps of a former and more ancient Title, all whoſe Traces the new ſuperadded Title " could not perfectly cover, but ſtill there appear'd I. H. O. and the Moieties of other Letters " which might be ſeen aſſoon as they are look'd upon with a little Attention: Neither can it be " ſaid, That they are the Strokes of the Letters which are on the other ſide of the Leaf, becauſe " being pierc'd with the point of a Penknife, they do not hit againſt them. Laſtly, Theſe words, " Liber Joannis Gerſen primus, were written with a Red Ink more ſhining than the following, " De contemptu Mundi & Imitatione Chriſti; ſo that by this Difference alone of Red and Vermi- " lion, we may certainly know, or at leaſt more clearly prove the Fraud. Wherefore adds he, tho' " the Congregation of St. Juſtina has forgotten it after more than 200 Years; yet 'tis certain " this does not give any Antiquity to this Title, ſince it is altogether falſe and ſuperadded to " another more ancient (which was likewiſe falſe, viz. Joannis Gerſon, from whence came the " three old Letters, I. H. O.) not by a bare Change of Gerſon into Gerſen, but by reverſing and " changing the whole Title, for fear leſt the Word Cancellarii being left, or any other which " could not ſo well agree to Gerſen, it might give occaſion to diſcover the Fraud: For other- " wiſe the Letter o of the Name of Gerſon, might very eaſily be chang'd into the Letter e.

This Manuſcript being carried to Paris, was view'd and conſider'd in 1652. by the deceaſed Mr. de Launoy, who made upon it the following Obſervations, in the Remarks he wrote upon a Work of a Father of St. Genevieve, Part 3. p. 89. " Upon this occaſion, I will tell what I have ob- " ſerv'd in a Manuſcript of the Book of the Imitation, which is in the Abbey of St. German des Prez, " and which is ſaid to be the Manuſcript of Mantua. The Title is thus, Incipit liber Joannis Ger-

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

" ſen primus de contemptu Mundi, & de Imitatione Chriſti: The end is thus, Explicit liber quartus " Joannis Gerſen de Sacramento Euchariſtiæ. In this end there appears not, that ever any Word " was chang'd, or any Letter alter'd. That which appears, is what was written at firſt by the " Tranſcriber. This being ſo, it ſeems no ways credible, that there ever was or ſhould be any " Change or Alteration in that which is common to the Title and the end, i. e. in Joannis Gerſen, " becauſe there could be no Reaſon to change or alter Joannis Gerſen in the Title of the Book, " and not to change or alter Joannis Gerſen at the end of the Book. I hold this, without Diſ- " pute, to be reaſonable; nevertheleſs, I have obſerv'd three things in this Title: 1ſt, That theſe " Words, Liber Joannis Gerſen primus, were written with a Red Ink a very little more ſhining " than the reſt, which I believe proceeds only from the greater Abundance of Red Ink in the Pen, " when theſe four Words were form'd, than when the reſt were made. We find by Experience, " That the Letters which are form'd with much Red Ink in the Pen, are more ſhining than thoſe " which are form'd with leſs Ink in the Pen, tho' they be all form'd at the ſame time. 2dly, That " the Line of Paper upon which theſe Words, Incipit Liber Joannis Gerſen, are written, is a " little ſmoothed and poliſhed, which reaches above the Line; but I believe this happen'd by " the Fault of the Tranſcriber, who beginning to write, and having miſhap'd the firſt Words of " the firſt Line, he blotted them out with his Finger by drawing it over the Line; yet he could " not do it ſo perfectly, but there would ſtill remain ſome Mark upon the Paper, where he begun " to write what we now read there. However this be, 'tis not poſſible to ſay with any Cer- " tainty, what the Tranſcriber had firſt written. 3dly, That this Mark and Blot of the Paper, " whatever it may have been, goeth above the Word Gerſen, but cometh not below it at all; " ſo that in this Word, there appears no Change or Alteration which may decide the Queſtion. " This Word is written with the ſame hand which tranſcrib'd the whole Book, which is very " conſiderable; for if there had been any Falſification, it muſt have been in this Word Gerſen, " and not in that Joannis, becauſe Joannes Gerſen and Joannes Gerſon, agree in this Name of " Joannes. Moreover, I would very willingly perſwade my ſelf, That this Manuſcript whereof " I am now ſpeaking, is not that whereof the Sieur Naude gives his Judgment in his Report, " which the R. F. the Abbot of St. Genevieve publiſh'd in Latin and French, in the third Part of " his Book. The Reaſons which I have for this are chiefly four. 1ſt, That the Sieur Naude ſays " in his Report, That theſe three old Letters, I. H. O. are to be read, which were in the Ti- " tle of the Manuſcript which he ſaw, which are not to be read in that which I ſaw, and any " one may ſee. 2dly, That the Sieur Naude ſays, the Word Cancellarii was in the ſame Title; " which cannot any ways be affirm'd of the Manuſcript whereof I am now ſpeaking, as every " one muſt believe who will take the pains to conſider it. 3dly, That the Word Cancellarii is " always follow'd by Pariſienſis, there being no Book, nor Tract of Gerſon, which goes under " this Name Gerſon, wherein there is Cancellarii without Pariſienſis. But this cannot be affirm'd " of this Manuſcript which I ſaw, not only becauſe there is no Appearance that ever Pariſienſis " was there, but alſo becauſe there is no room to place it there, in that condition wherein the " Title of the Book is. 4thly, That the Sieur Naude makes no doubt, but at the end of the Ma- " nuſcript which he ſaw, there had been before Joannis Gerſon: But in that which I ſaw theſe " Words had never been.

The Aſſembly in 1671. judg'd, that the Writing of the firſt Inſcription of this Manuſcript was entire and unchang'd in the proper Name, and that there was no juſt Suſpicion of Falſification there, nor yet in the Subſcription which is at the end written with the ſame hand.

I ſaw this Manuſcript a little while after, and when I had well-conſider'd the Title in queſtion, I judg'd, 1ſt, That it was written wholly with the ſame hand. 2dly, That 'tis the ſame hand which wrote the whole Work. 3dly, That 'tis true, the firſt Words had been blotted out, and particularly the Word Incipit. 4thly, That ſtill ſome Letters of that which had been written at firſt might be obſerv'd, and among the reſt the Term Incipit; and that it might be, the ſame was alſo obſerv'd at the time when Mr. Naude ſaw the Letters I. H. O. tho' they do not appear at preſent, nor yet the Prickings which are ſaid to have been made in that place. 5thly, That theſe Words were not defac'd by ſcraping the Parchment, for looking upon it by the Light, it is of the ſame thickneſs, and it appears not at all to be diminiſh'd in that place; beſides, That if there had been any ſuch Razure, the ancient Letters would no more be ſeen. 6thly, I obſerv'd after Mr. Launoy, That there remain'd at the top above the firſt Line, a ſpeck of dark Red, which appear'd to me to proceed from hence, that the Tranſcriber had daſh'd out with his finger what he had written in Red, and ſo ſpread the Red further, which could not ſo perfectly be taken off, but that ſtill ſome ſpeck of it would remain. 7thly, I judg'd from hence, That the Tranſcriber having begun the firſt Words of his Title, Incipit Liber Joannis, had daſh'd them out again; perhaps, becauſe his Pen being over-charg'd with Red Ink, had made a Botch, which oblig'd him to blot out the whole. 8thly, The Space will not allow, that ever there ſhould have been a longer Title in it. 9thly, The Traces of the old Word Incipit are yet to be ſeen, and thoſe of Joannis were ſeen at the time when the Title was view'd by Mr. Naude, and therefore it was the ſame Title. 10thly, It is of a brighter Colour at the beginning, becauſe the Pen of the Tranſcriber was then more full of Red Ink than at the end, but the firſt Words are not ſo lately written as the laſt. Beſides, the Age of this Manuſcript, according to the time that it has been in the Congregation of St. Juſtina, to which it belongs, is no more than 200 Years, according to the Judgment of expert Men, and the Confeſſion of Mr. Naude.

There

There is one important Remark to be made upon this Manuſcript of Padolirona, which is this, That upon the firſt Leaf there is the Epitaph in Verſe of John Gerſon, Chancellour of the Univerſity of Paris, the ſame which is to be found upon his Tomb in the Church of St. Paul, at Lyons expreſs'd in theſe Words,

A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

Magnum parva tenet virtutibus urna Joannem, Præcelſum meritis Gerſon cognomine dictum.
Pariſius celſæ Profeſſor Theologiæ,
Claruit, Eccleſiæ qui Conſolarius Anno
Milleno Domini centum quater atq; viceno
Nono, luce petit ſuperos Julii duodena.

Cajetan mentions this Epitaph: The Sieur Naude never perceiv'd it; for he makes no mention of it in the Report made in 1671. Father Delfau ſays nothing of it; whereupon his Antagoniſt crowing over him, he who anſwer'd confeſſes, That it was in this Manuſcript, but of a late Writing. If it had been written with the ſame hand which wrote the reſt of the Manuſcript, there is do doubt but it would have clearly prov'd, That the Name of John Gerſen was put in that place for that of John Gerſon; but ſince it is written with a much later hand, as the bare Inſpection of it diſcovers, it ſhews only that a certain Perſon, into whoſe hands this Manuſcript fell, finding there the Name of Gerſen at the top, and imagining that this ſhould be Gerſon, to whom he knew this Work had been aſcrib'd thought fit to write upon the firſt Leaf being blank, this Epitaph of Gerſon; and therefore from hence no Conſequence can be drawn as to the firſt Author.

The fourth Manuſcript, which is that which the Benedictines bought of Mr. Sluſe, and which they have in their Library, is alſo 200 Years old, according to the Confeſſion of thoſe able men, who gave their Judgment about it in 1674. There we find at the end theſe Words written with Red Ink by the firſt Hand, Explicit liber quartus & ultimus de Sacramento Altaris Joannis Gerſen.

The fifth is the Manuſcript in the Monaſtery of St. John of Parma in little, which contains a Rule of St. Benedict and the Book of the Imitation written with the ſame hand, whereof the Year is ſet down at the end of the Rule of St. Benedict; Sanctiſſimi Benedicti explicit Regula diſcretione præcipua & ſermone luculenta die octavo Auguſti, 1466. At the end of the fourth Book of the Imitation is written with the ſame hand, Explicit liber quartus & ultimus Joannis Gerſen de Sacramento Altaris, Amen. The Name is written in this Manuſcript as in that of the Monaſtery of Bobio with an m Gerſem, and not Gerſen, as in the reſt.

The ſixth is the Manuſcript of Leo Allatius, which belong'd formerly to the Cardinal of Biſeia, which probably came from Germany; for the binding was of that Country, and it contain'd the Works of Nicholas D' Inkelſpuel, Rector of the Univerſity of Vienna, and of John of Tambach, Regent of the Univerſity of Prague, and the Bull of a Legat publiſh'd at Vienna, in 1448. 'Tis written on Paper, and has this Title in Red Letters, Incipit Tractatus Joannis de Canabaco de Imitatione Chriſti, & contemptu omnium vanitatum mundi, & dividitur in quatuor libros. The Bull dated in 1448. written with the ſame hand, ſhews that it could not be written before this Year The Name of Canabaco was added ſome time after, and above the Line, but ſtill it is done by the ſame hand, in the ſame Writing, and with the ſame Vermilion. Mr. Naude and the Aſſembly in 1671. are in this of the ſame Opinion. Mr. Naude judg'd, that the Writing of the Manuſcript was no older than 1480, or 1500. The Aſſembly gave no Judgment of its Antiquity. This Surname of Canabacum given to John the Author of the Book of the Imitation, has been differently explain'd. Some ſay, That Canabacum was the place of the Birth of this John, whom they ſuppoſe to be the ſame with Gerſen; and ſince Canabacum is a Place unknown, they have interpreted it Cavaglia, which is a Borough in the Country of Verceil: This was the Opinion of Quatremaires and Walgrave. Father Delfau and thoſe who have written ſince, ſeem to have forſaken this Opinion, and durſt not maintain, that Canabacum was the Country of John Gerſen, and that this Place was Cavaglia: And ſo it is not known, what the Surname is, from whence it was taken, nor what gave occaſion to mention it there. Some may conjecture, that the Writer of this Manuſcript having copied it from another, wherein de Gerſonio, was ill written, wrote Canabaco for Gerſonio; or rather, that lighting upon a Manuſcript wherein there was Cancellario abbreviated, as Canclrio, he read it Canabaco. Howſoever this be, it cannot be prov'd by any Place, that this Joannes de Canabaco is the ſame who is call'd Joannes Gerſen in the other Manuſcripts.

The ſeventh is the Manuſcript of Cave, upon which it is written, Iſte Liber eſt Congregationis Caſſinenſis, and a little after, aſſervatur in Monaſterio Cavæ. The Book of the Imitation in this Manuſcript is written upon Parchment, in fair Characters, and has no Name of the Author, nor any Date of the Time, being imperfect at the end. But in the firſt Letter Q there is the Image of a Benedictine Monk, having a Croſs in his hand; ſome think that this is the Pourtraiture of Gerſen. Afterwards 'tis ſaid, That the Words of ch. 56. B. 3. gave occaſion to this Picture, I have receiv'd from your hand a Croſs, and I will carry it until Death. It may indeed be, that this Sentence gave occaſion to him who wrote this Manuſcript to make this Picture at the beginning: But upon what grounds can it be thence concluded, That the Book of the Imitation was therefore written by a Benedictine Monk? All that can be thence conjectur'd is, That the Writer of this Manuſcript was a Benedictine.

A Dissertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ.

The last Piece which is produc'd is a Copy of some Works printed at Venice in 1501. among which is the Book of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, under the Name of John Gerson, Chancellor of the University of Paris, at the end whereof are to be found these Words written upon Design; Hunc librum non compilavit Johannes Gerson, sed D. Johannes. This Word Johannes has been mended by the Confession of Father Delfau, and that which follow'd has been raz'd out, in the room whereof there is still a blank space, and after it there are these Words, Abbas Vercellensis: After which there is yet more Writing raz'd out, and then at last follow these Words; Ut habetur usq; hodie propria manu scriptus in eadem Abbatia. This Copy being one of those which were presented at Rome in 1641. to Sieur Naude, he judg'd that this Manuscript Observation had been falsified, and pretends, That Johannes had been made of the Name Thomas, after so gross a manner, That the Sieur Vincent Galeotti, when he came to read this Writing, read Thomas for Joannes. This Copy was not produc'd at the Assembly in 1671. tho' it was at Paris, and Father Delfau gave no other Reason for it, but that it was in the Library among the printed Books without his knowledge. If this had been the only Reason which hindred the Benedictines from producing it then, they would certainly have shewn it in the Assemblies in 1674. and 1687: But they had Reason to suppress it, because they truly judg'd that this Manuscript Note was of no Authority: First, Because 'tis well known that 'tis much later than 1501. but 'tis not known at what time it was written, nor who is the Author of it: Secondly, Because the Name of Johannes being foisted in, and that of Gersen, or Gessen being not there, it was unserviceable to their Cause: Thirdly, Because this Note, however very late, yet was falsified by a Forger who put into it all that he pleas'd: Fourthly, Because the space might be fill'd up with any other Name besides that of Johannes Gersen, or even that of Thomas a Kempis, that perhaps he might be call'd Abbas Windesemensis, or perhaps even Abbas Vercellensis, because there was one Thomas a Canon-Regular of St. Victor, Abbot of St. Andrew of Verceil, whom some make a Canon-Regular upon the Credit of an ancient Register of Burials of St. Victor's, and others a Benedictin, according to the Picture of a Monk which is said to be upon his Tomb: Fifthly, Because 'tis not certain whether these Words Abbas Vercellensis are the Forgers, or his who first wrote this Note. And thus the Title of the Abbot of Verceil, which is given to John Gerson, being founded only upon this Note is a meer Chimæra, since Gerson is not at all nam'd there, and the Name of John is foisted in, and therefore no regard ought to be had to a Piece of this Nature. There are two Abbies at Verceil, that of St. Stephen, and that of St. Andrew: This latter was founded at the Expence of Henry II. King of England, after the Murder of Thomas of Canterbury: Whereof the first Abbot in 1227. was Thomas Gallus, a Canon-Regular of St. Victor, or according to others an English Benedictine. He was Abbot till the Year 1260. Upon which account John Gerson is made Abbot of St. Stephen of Verceil, and not of St. Andrew. This Monastery is more ancient, and was of the Order of St. Benedict, until Paul III. in the Year 1536. gave it to the Canons-Regular, after which it was destroy'd in 1581. But no ancient Author speaks of this Abbot John Gerson. Francis Augustin a Clergy-man hath indeed plac'd him in the Edition of his Chronicle at Piemont in 1648. among the Abbots of Verceil, and ascrib'd to him the Imitation of Jesus Christ, but 'tis only upon hear-say from some Benedictine since the Contest of Cajetan, and he durst not mention him in his History of Verceil. There is also cited a Manuscript History of Verceil, written by John Baptista Modena, who says, That we still read in an ancient Manuscript of other Abbots of St. Stephen, which were never reckon'd among the rest. Among whom is another John, who is thought to be the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ, because this John, Abbot of Verceil, cannot be Abbot of any other Abby but the Monastery of St. Stephen. 'Tis doubted whether this Testimony is true; but supposing it were, 'tis plain, That this Author said this only upon occasion of what had been alledg'd since the starting of this Controversie by the Abbot Cajetan. It must be confess'd, That there is no Proof that John Gerson was Abbot of St. Stephen's at Verceil, no more than there is, That he was a Native of Canabaco, and that Canabaco was Cavaglia: And it is not at all known who is this John Gersen, Gersem, Gesen, or Gessen, whose Name is found in the Manuscripts of the Imitation which we have now mention'd. There is none of them which gives him the Title but that of Arona, where he is always styl'd the Abbot Abbas; but 'tis never observ'd, of what Order, or what place he was: And therefore the Benedictines have no more right to appropriate him to themselves than the Bernardins or any other Regulars, which have Abbies and Abbots. John Gesen, or Gersen, or Gessen an Abbot, is grounded upon nothing but only the Manuscript of Arona. John Gersen, or Gersem, without a Title, is founded upon four uncorrupted Manuscripts worthy of Credit, That of St. Columbanus of Bobio, That of Padolirona, That of Sluse, and that of Parma. John, sirnam'd of Canabaco, is only to be found in the Manuscript of Allatius, written since the Year 1448. and this Sirname is there interlin'd, tho' it be written with the same Hand. John, Abbot of Verceil, is founded only upon a Forgery. But for none of these John's can any ancient Author be produc'd who knew him, or has mention'd him, nor any Edition before that of Cajetan in 1616. taken from the Manuscript of Arona, which is Entitled, Venerabilis viri Joannis Gessen Abbatis, Ordinis Sancti Benedicti; wherein the Order, of which he was Abbot, is added without Proof, and without Authority. Walgrave has chang'd the Name of Gessen into Gersen, and has ventur'd to set down his Country and the Place of his Abby, by causing the Imitation to be printed with this Title in 1638. Johannis Gersen Abbatis Vercellensis, Italo-Benedictini. At last,

Father

Father Delfau, who nevertheleſs ought to have obſerv'd the weakneſs of the Proofs upon which the Title of Abbot of the Order of St. Benedict of Verceil is founded, has carried this Matter yet higher, by giving him the Name of the Abbot of Stephen of Verceil in his laſt Edition of 1674. Johannis Gerſen Abbatis Sancti Stephani Vercellenſis Ordinis Sancti Benedicti. There is nothing of this Title but the bare Name of Johannis Gerſen, which is Authoriz'd by many Manuſcripts, and the Title of Abbatis, only by the Manuſcript of Arona: All the reſt is without any Foundation. A Diſſertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt.

When there want Editions and Authors who give the Imitation to John Gerſen an Abbot, then the Editions and Authors are alledg'd which aſcribe it to Gerſon, which are ſaid to be favourable to John Gerſen. For ſince, as they ſuppoſe, 'tis manifeſt that the Book was not Gerſon's the Chancellor of Paris, and that the Author was certainly a Monk; 'tis pretended that the Reaſon why it is aſcrib'd to Gerſon the Chancellor is the ſimilitude of the Name; and that John Gerſen being leſs known than John Gerſon, and almoſt altogether unknown in France, the Name of John Gerſen was taken for that of Gerſon. That this is much more probable than to ſay, that the Name of John Geſen, Geſſen, Gerſen, or Gerſem, was put for that of John Gerſon. 1. Becauſe there are Manuſcripts of Gerſen which are thought more ancient than the time wherein Gerſon could have Compos'd this Work; for there is one of Melice Dated in 1421. and thoſe of Arona and Bobio without Date are of the Fourteenth Century. 2. Becauſe the Name Abbatis is in that of Arona, a Title which no ways agrees to Gerſon. 3. Becauſe it is no ways credible, that it ſhould be written ſo many ways, in ſo many different Places, Gerſen, Geſen, Geſſen, or Gerſem, for Gerſon, which was a Name well enough known. To this it may be anſwer'd, that the Name of Gerſon was put there, either becauſe he was the Author of it, or becauſe this Work was joyn'd to the Works of Gerſon in the ſame Manuſcript as is really found in the Manuſcript of Melice, in 1434. After the ſame manner it has been aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, becauſe it was joyn'd with the Works of this Father, as in the former Manuſcript of Melice, wherein Gerſen is put for Gerſon, becauſe the Name of Gerſon was perhaps abbreviated in the Manuſcript from which this was Tranſcrib'd, as in the Manuſcript of Salezburg 'tis written John Gerſ. or rather becauſe the o was taken for an e. That one Manuſcript of that Nature, ſuch as that of Arona, could never be the Cauſe of the Miſtake which is found in all the reſt; That this Miſtake is found only in the Manuſcripts of Italy, which may have been Copied out from that of Arona; that the Name Abbatis which is in this, may proceed from the Ignorance of the Tranſcriber; that the various ways in which this Name is written, ſometimes Geſen, ſometimes Geſſen, and ſometimes Gerſen, all which are found in the ſame Manuſcript of Arona, do plainly ſhew that the Name of the Author was not well known to him who wrote it; that he added of his own head the Title of Abbot. Laſtly, That this Abbot John Geſen, Geſſen, or Gerſen, being wholly unknown, and no Perſon having ever mention'd him before the Controverſie aroſe between the Benedictines, and Canons Regular about the Author of the Imitation; it is very probable, that he is only a Phantome who never had any real Exiſtence.

SECTION XIII.

A Judgment upon all that has been ſaid in this Queſtion, wherein that which is certainly falſe is ſeparated from that which is uncertain, and an Attempt is made to diſcover what has moſt probability.

AFter I have Examin'd and Related all that has been ſaid and written by Learned Men upon the Controverſies about the Author of the Book of the Imitation of Jeſus Chriſt, I cannot but apply to them the words of Terence.

Feciſtis probe
Incertior ſum multo quam dudum

And I doubt not but the ſame thought will come into all the minds of thoſe who ſhall read what we have now written. For in effect, the great number of Manuſcripts, Editions, Authorities, and Reaſons, which are alledg'd on one ſide and the other, inſtead of clearing up the matter, do rather darken it; and inſtead of diſcovering the Author of the Book of the Imitation, they render him more uncertain, and more unknown. Nevertheleſs let us attempt to draw from what has been ſaid ſome Inferences, and if we cannot conclude any thing that is certain, yet let us diſcern between what is falſe, and what is uncertain, between what is probable, and what is not.

Firſt, 'Tis certain that this Work is not St. Bernard's, altho' it hath been aſcrib'd unto him.

Secondly, Neither is there any probability that it is Ludolphus's.

Thirdly,

A Dissertation about the Author of the Imitation of Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, There is no convincing proof that it is Thomas a Kempis's, for this proof must either be founded upon the Manuscripts, or the Editions, or the Report of Contemporary Authors, or the Agreement of the Stile. The Manuscripts do not at all prove it in a convincing manner, since the first which was in the year 1441. has not the Name of Thomas a Kempis as the Author, but only as the Transcriber of the Book, and this may have given occasion to put his Name to other Manuscripts, and to Writers who follow'd him to ascribe it to him. 'Tis very probable that the Passage of Busch was added, and tho' it were not, yet neither he, nor other Authors, nor the Manuscripts nor Editions later than the Manuscript in 1441. are any convincing Proofs, since these are found in conjunction with other Manuscripts, Editions, and Testimonies, even such as are more ancient in favour of St. Bernard, of Gerson, and Gersen. The agreement of Stile, with the other Works which go under the Name of Tho. a Kempis is not still a certain Proof, for in general the agreement of the Stile of one Work with another is not commonly sufficient to ascertain who is the Author of it. Besides this Agreement is not entire; and lastly, neither is it certain that all the Works which go under the Name of Thomas a Kempis are his; since by the Confession of those who favour him, his Humility would not suffer him to put his Name to any of his own, and he Transcrib'd many Books of others.

Fourthly, There is some probability that the Book of the Imitation is more ancient than Tho. a Kempis, the Manuscripts of Arona, of Sirmondus, and Bobio, tho' without Date, are judg'd more ancient, by those who are best skill'd in such matters, which is a proof of it. The Manuscripts of Italy, Dated in the years 1421, 1433, 1434, 1436, and 1437, make it credible. They are indeed later than the year 1410. wherein 'tis suppos'd without ground, that T. a Kempis Compos'd this Work, tho' there is little probability that he did write it at that time. But two things are to be observ'd; 1st, That these Manuscripts are found in different places, far distant one from another. 2. That these are not Originals written with the Author's own hand, but Copies written out from other Copies more ancient. Now there is scarce any probablity, that in so short a time the Book of the Imitation should have been Copied out so often, and carried to so many different Places. The same Reflection may be made upon the French Version in 1447. and upon the French Manuscript found in 1467. in the Library of the Count of Angoulesme; and this may be Confirm'd by the Testimony of Trithemius, who says plainly in 1494. that the Seniors of his Seniors had read this Work, which carries us up to the beginning of the Century.

Fifthly, 'Tis certain that in the Life time of T. a Kempis, the Book of the Imitation was ascrib'd to St. Bernard, to Gerson, and Gersen: The Manuscripts and Editions are a proof of this; which is a strong Argument that T. a Kempis was not then own'd for the Author of it.

Sixthly, 'Tis also certain that the most ancient Manuscripts are either Anonymous, or else go under the Name of Gerson; which is a good reason why it cannot be ascertain'd that Thomas a Kempis is the Author of this Book.

Seventhly, John Gerson Chancellor of the University of Paris, among the 3 Competitors, seems to have the best Right to this Book: If we consider only external Testimonies, he was in possession of it before Tho. a Kempis. All the Manuscripts which are for John Gersen, or Gesen, except only that which gives him the Title of Abbot, may be understood of him by a Corruption of his Name. The Common Opinion of France and Italy was for him in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Century. He is a solid Author, and of great Reputation, who has written Books of a like Nature. But there are 2 things which counter-poize these Proofs, the Title of Monk which is given to the Author of the Imitation, and the difference of Stile.

Eighthly, The Titles of Abbot of St. Stephen of Vercell, of the Order of St. Benedict, which are given to the pretended John Gersen, are not built upon any good ground, nor upon any Testimony worthy of Credit. There is only the Title of Abbot in the Manuscript of Arona, and in the rest he appears Naked and divested of all Titles, sometimes under the Name of Getsen, sometimes under that of Gesen, or Gessen, or Gersem, an Author unknown to this very day.

Lastly, 'Tis not easie to decide, whether John Gesen, Gessen, Gersen, or Gersem, is really the Name of an Abbot, or whether it be only the Corruption of the Name of John Gerson. There are Conjectures Pro and Con, which have their probability on both sides.

After all, the Author of the Book of the Imitation remains still uncertain, as he was at the beginning of this Discourse; and each of the three Pretenders may still preserve the probability of his Right, tho' he be not able to establish it by uncontestable Evidence.
